Slick Swindler Visits City Gets Gas Under Doctor's Order

A slick swindle was perpetrated with success on a local gasoline station owner Saturday evening. The man who worked the scheme is described as a smooth talker, driving a blue sedan of a popular make was dressed in a light brown suit, with a light hat, and was slightly below average height. He wore a small blonde moustache, the same color of his hair. Identification marks were a small mole on the left upper side of his face and a fixed smile.

Saturday night the man presented, drove into a downtown gasoline station and said that a physician friend he was requested to fill the gasoline tank and charge the bill to the account of a local doctor. Although the doctor named was not a regular customer of the station attendant took no notice of the fact and the tank was filled. Later when the owner of the station was informed, he began to do his suspicions of the matter and a call was sent in to the doctor, who was named. Enquiry from the doctor failed to establish the fact that any such orders had been given, that the owner of the station knew that a trick had been played on them.

It is thought that the man, who is a stranger to the city, looks up the names of prominent citizens of the town he is passing through and then takes a chance on ordering gasoline which is credited to their account. If the request is refused by the local doctor, he loses, but the chances are that the gasoline station attendants are only too glad to accommodate the smooth talking stranger, thinking that merchant or professional man of standing is to start an account at their place" of business. Similar trick has been perpetrated in various other cities from time to time.

World Flooded Beneath Ocean Except Mountains Is Weatherman's Dream

Washington, Mar 2—Just raise the average temperature of the earth two or three degrees and you can bid goodbye to all the big cities on earth. Glaciers will melt, and oceans will rise, and—

But let the weather man get in on this.

It took a weather man to thaw up the tea and a whole audience of weather men to listen to it with composure and without adopting a resolution or staging a demonstration.

Dr. William J. Humphreys of the United States weather bureau took a lot of evidence to make up the painstaking case, presented today to the American Meteorological Society, that the earth's glaciers if melted would raise the ocean level to 150 feet, and that aforementioned increase in warmth would do the trick.

One could still be dry above the 15th floor level in cities with skyscrapers, but all around would be the bounding waves.

By way of cheer Dr. Humphreys pictured the world as delicately balanced between this catastrophe and the equally cheerless prospect of another glacial period. It would take but a drop of 10 or 15 or six degrees in the earth to bring back the ice age, with Canada and the United States as far south as Kentucky and Iowa, one vast sheet of ice and rink.

But skating enthusiasts needn't cheer. Dr. Humphreys said the earth is gradually growing warmer and the next ice age, although forecast, is scene millions of years off. So, probably is the glacier melting period.

FIREMEN AID

Police Manage to Secure Control in Hamilton Trouble

Hamilton, May 3—Aided by 100 city firemen, the police preserved order at the Communist meeting-house when local Communists attempted to muster themselves at Woodland Park for a parade. The bluecoats had the situation well in hand at all times. Sixteen men were arrested, six of them women, and the firemen turned streams of water on the crowds to disperse them. Thousands of people gathered at Woodland Park, and on adjacent streets early yesterday afternoon, expecting to see trouble. One park is on the fringe of the city's industrial section. Across the road from it, on the south side of Barton Street, is the Arena Rink. Police and firemen used the Arena as their base.

About 2 o'clock the Reds began to muster near the grandstand at the park entrance. At 2.30 the 2.30 o'clock some 200 of them had gathered. Then the attempted banners aloft, bearing rather fiery appeals. The parade was scheduled to move off at 2.30 o'clock.

Police, however, did not delay matters. The banners had not been held aloft more than two minutes when the line of foot from a doorway of the Arena and marched straight across the park to where the Reds stood defiantly. Chief Coulter and Fire Chief James led their men, followed by Deputy Chief Thompson and Fire Assistant Chief Aitchison.

The crowd began to yell, but the bluecoats marched swiftly on, their faces grave. No batons were in evidence. The Communist leaders Reds the situation became tense, as the firemen, with nozzles held to thrust them insolently toward the Reds. Some moments of tension as police went for them. The banners were wrenched from stubborn hands and trampled underfoot. Several men grappled with the police. Then, as the firemen moved in, three men were led off to the Arena and taken to the police cells.

From that moment the police assumed complete charge. They immediately cleared the park and streets of thousands on to Barton and Wentworth streets, and there was not a skirmish occurred, but nothing serious.

Two Reds then attempted a few minutes later to mount the steps of the Livingston United Church, but they were quickly placed under arrest and marched off to lice drove their batons when the crowd outlook.

Crowds were kept moving and police allowed no chance for assemble. Occasionally there was a small outbreak when some communist would attempt to address a crowd or resist the officers. These were quickly overpowered through out the afternoon. Firemen finally retired to the base when a number of persons who seemed bent upon mischief refused to disperse.

"AL" E. SMITH HARD TO STOP

Probably Primaries in California Will Be Deciding Count,

BY KEN CLARK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 2— Encouraged by a series of Massachusetts victories giving Alfred E. Smith, 36 delegates to the Democratic National Convention and by the assurance of 46 in Pennsylvania, Governor Pennsylvania, forces seeking to prevent the nomination of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York for the presidency, were prepared to go after the ten votes at stake in Rhode Island today.

It indicated they will get most of these and the question of what will happen in Tuesday's primary in California when the latter become of paramount importance. California has 44 votes to be accorded, who up to the time of the Massachusetts and Pennsylvania primaries, was sweeping all before him and looked like a certain nominee. It actually about 400 votes short of two-third majority and 210 of a simple majority. A two-thirds vote is necessary to nominate at the Democratic convention but a majority has always resulted in nomination with the exception of the case of Champ Clark.

The importance of the vote in California becomes more apparent when it is realized opponents of the Governor now believe they need only 26 more votes to prevent Roosevelt's nomination on the first ballot.

A NEW DISCOVERY FOR THOSE SUFFERING FROM

DEAFNESS AND HEAD NOISES

Experiments and experience bring forth new lights on old subjects, and what was looked upon as impossible last year, is accomplished fact this year. Many years those suffering from Deafness and head noises accepted their affliction as such. Even were the best scientific minds to congress or a specialist, the answer was the only help obtainable; often resulting in complete failure, or the person in question, died. That day is gone.

We have opened the door to new hearing by means of our newest invention: the rejuvenation of the ear drum system by means of vibration, a method discovered by eminent men. A boon to mankind, comparable to the discovery of the telephone. Do not forget your Deafness may be overcome and that all the annoying noises, such as conversation, music, radio, talkies, etc. Equally beneficial to those suffering from head noises. Consult a professional man. Recommended by leading Aurists.

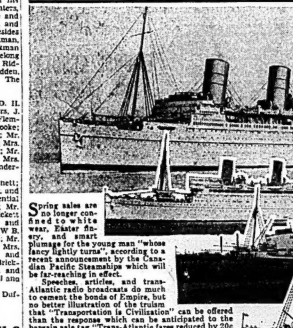
BECOME MEMBERS OF THE SODALITY

Twenty-five Young Ladies of St. Michael's Church Are Received

Choosing for the inspiring event the first day of the month especially dedicated to the Mother of God, twenty-five young ladies of the parish of St. Michael's were received into the Sodality of the Blessed Virgin at the evening service last night. The reception took place during the "Holy Hour" and the promises of the Sodality were administered in the presence of the Blessed Sacrament, exposed on the altar.

The ladies attired in white and wearing white veils marched in processions from St. Michael's Academy to the church at seven o'clock. They were followed by eight members of the Sodality and special places were reserved at the front of the church for them. The altar was beautifully decorated in honour of the Blessed Sacrament and the Virgin altar dedicatory to the Blessed Virgin was resplendent with roses. Hymns in honour of the Blessed Virgin were sung during the Holy Hour which opened with benediction, assisted by the congregation.



Rt. Rev. J. P. Nicholson, V.G., spiritual director of the Sodality, officiated at the reception, assisted by Rev. C. E. Baker and Rev. H. J. Madden. At the conclusion of the impressive ceremony Father Nicholson delivered an inspiring sermon on the life of the Blessed Virgin to whom the "Children of Mary" especially dedicate their lives. Here was a life of sorrow, humility and obscurity. Her example should be emulated by the members of the Sodality but by all the faithful.

The services of the evening were brought to a close by Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The church was thronged on Sunday evening for the occasion.

Speeding of ocean and trans-Atlantic radio broadcasts do much to cement the bonds of friendship, but no better illustration of the truism that "transportation is civilization" can be offered than the response which can be anticipated to the bargain sailings' Transatlantic rates reduced by 25 per cent on the dollar."

In announcing this heavy reduction, George Stephen, Traffic Vice-President of the Canadian Pacific pointed out the desire of the Canadian Company that all classes traveller should benefit by the reduction. In part, he said:

"New conditions expressed in recently announced changes in rates is to the effect that the higher classes of travel should get most advantage by the detriment of the large volume of passengers who cannot afford under present conditions to pay the higher grade of fares and who desire to take advantage of the up-to-date Third Class rooms, appointments and service at their disposal in modern ships.

"The comprehensive reductions in rates to cover all classes of passages which are announced today by the Canadian Pacific Steamships indicate an interpretation of Ge present situation which will be appreciated."

This sentiment was amplified by the statement that for as small a sum as $69. passage to or from Europe can be obtained on Canadian Pacific ships with a round trip for only $108.

Other specimen reductions are, Empress of Britain, first class, minimum $250 to $200.

Duchesses, Cabin minimum $160 to $128.

Montcalm, Montclare, Montrose, Cabin minimum $140 to $112.

Round trip Tourist rates show a drop on the Empresses of Britain from $216 to $172, the Empresses of Australia and the Duchesses from $194 to $154, and on the Mont claim ships from $185 to $148, while in the Third Class the Empress of Britain Round Trip rate drops from $145 to $116, the Empress of Australia and the Duchesses from $140 to $112, and the Mont class ships from $136 to $108.

Cinder Track Star Races With Death

New York, May 3—Little Joie Ray ran today a marathon with death—and won little chance to win.

Once the premier miler of United States, a lad who stepped into the books with a brave 4:12, a versatile athlete of cinders, of the arena, of Canadian snowshoe races and, lately, of the marathon dances. Ray entered these the latter contest early today and started for Chicago.

A telegram told him that his ten year old daughter, Rosalie, was dying. News of her illness came as a cruel climax to years of tough luck, that has hung at his heels, like some determined rival of the track he could not shake off.

Ray has been grinding his way around a marathon dance floor for four weeks. He wanted the prize money, that will go to the couple or the individual, who outlasts all others in the swaying round of terpsichore

He was the favorite. But the bad breaks began early. His original partner quit the contest to marry, for hours he carried on alone. Then he acquired another partner. She collapsed under the punishing test.

To say he was not a great athlete is to ignore the 900 medals and trophies he treasured.

But the trophies may go soon. Joie Ray's trouble will call medals to rates money for the effort to save his daughter's life.

Some Men Born Great, Some Just Rise Early

This week's Marshall Week all over Canada. Here are the virtues of the Marshall Mattress are being demonstrated in the newspaper advertisements of dealers. Belleville dealers taking part in the Marshall Week are the Standard Department Stores, The Percival Store, and Geo. Thompson.

It has been said that some men are born great, and that some rise early. In fact as it may, the fact remains that the best day's work is done on a good night's sleep, and this is where the Marshall Mattress makes claim that they shine. They guarantee perfect rest, taking the bodies and soothing them with the wonderful comfort of a spring centre which is a unit of hundreds of tiny springs —designed to fit every natural curve of the body. It's the finished mattress which says good-night to you—and means it.

A new department mattress making is announced by the Marshall company resulting in mattresses specially for "featherweights" or "heavyweights," for it is only reasonable to suppose that a heavy man needs a firmer mattress than a light man, and the same thing applies to the other sex.

Marshalls mattresses have been in use by the Belleville General Hospital for some time, giving the best of satisfaction, and hospitals are most particular of the type of mattress purchased, to give the utmost comfort to patients.

Outstanding proof of the durability of Marshall Mattresses is the fact that they have been used for over 17 years in Cobourg General Hospital and only those which have been damaged in use have required any attention whatever. Leading Hospitals in Eastern Ontario who have purchased Marshall Mattresses most recently are, Picton, King's Daughters; Kingston General Hospital, Kingston; Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay all of which purchased Marshalls in 1931.

World Capitals Marked by Few Disorders as May Day is Observed

Clash in London When Paraders Try to March on Jap Embassy

MOSCOW PARADES

100,000 Reds Demonstrate in Berlin—Two Killed in Poland

Social revolutionists observed May Day throughout the world yesterday with a cheerful absence of physical conflict and only a few threatening demonstrations against their traditional enemies, the police.

In a year when economic chaos and unemployment was popularly supposed to stir class rancor to fever heat, and millions of hitherto bourgeois workers had been counted on to swell the armies of discontented, vivid evidences of flaming revolutionary emotion were lacking.

Demonstration Against War in London

London, May 2.—(UP)—A big demonstration against war was held in celebration of May Day in London without disorder except a brief flight when some of the demonstrators tried to march on the Japanese embassy in Portman Square.

Several were taken to the hospital, others were given first-aid and various arrests were made when a section of the crowd tried to leave Hyde Park by Piccadilly Square and were charged by police with batons. The square was heavily guarded by foot and mounted police, with a double line of bluecoats blocking both entrances.

The parade, with its slogan, "March against War" began after a demonstration on the Thames embankment. About 30,000 men, women and children marched from the embankment to Hyde Park. Many of the women and children wore red hats, blouses and scarves and some were entirely in red.

They were generally quiet, carrying flags, banners and placards and scattering pamphlets from two hundred automobiles. One man in a gas mask and pamphlets "exposing" chemical warfare.

The parade reached Hyde Park without incident in about an hour. Strong foot and mounted police forces preserved order while 45 speakers harangued the crowd from six platforms, speaking in relays. They denounced the "imperialist" and "capitalistic" attack on China, alleging a world-wide capitalist plot to invade Soviet Russia in war.

Disorder Started

A speaker wearing a priestly cassock, with red necktie a red handkerchief tucked in his sleeve and a leather belt, dramatically denounced "imperialist and capitalist" murderers. He threw out his arms in the form of a cross and caused a profound hush in the crowd.

The warm sunshine brought many thousands to the park, who joined the marchers in listening to the speakers.

The disorders started when the crowd began to leave the park, most of them quietly dispersing in various directions, laughing and singing as on a picnic. A few scuffles started and then a large group tried to rush the police cordon across Edgware Rd. Flanking mounted police galloped to the head of the column with extended batons, knocking the demonstrators right and left. Then they herded them along Oxford Street in such a pace that the police developed into a heller-skelter route past the embassies and Marble Arch Square. Many of the paraders were exhausted and fell out panting, to go home. A total of eight were arrested.

Display of Strength at Moscow

Moscow, May 2.—(UP)—A great display of military strength and a call to all Soviet citizens to rally to the defence of the Union against war and internal disturbers filled the celebration of May Day in Moscow.

While 1,000,000 persons paraded in and about Red Square and the tomb of Lenin, the demonstration included the height in the illuminating passage overhead of 275 war planes. Of these there was a huge three-four parade of 33,000 regular troops, with cavalry, armored cars and tanks, and several civilians, who passed in review before the tomb. Joseph Stalin, the Soviet premier, Klementi Voroshilov, Minister of War, and other leaders reviewed the parade. The people then poured into the square, colorfully arrayed, cheering and pledging themselves to the defence of the Union.

Ismet Pasha, the Turkish premier, and German and other diplomats viewed the military parade. It revealed the progress of the mechanization and motorization of the Red Army. Ten new four-motored bombers led the phalanx of war planes, while hundreds of new tanks and artillery supported roared through the square. An unusually large number of armed factory workers were noticed.

Stalin Views Parade

The overcast skies cleared as Voroshilov officially opened the demonstration to the booming of cannon in the Kremlin. Stalin, in a long military coat and flat-crowned cap, stood out at the edge of the Mausoleum.

The press emphasized the invincibility of the Soviet frontiers and prohibited any Communist party manifestio alleging that the French general staff was organizing international intervention against the Soviets. Workers of the world were called on to refuse to transport armaments.

A contrast to the military display was the celebration of the Greek Orthodox Easter the thousands who still clung to the old religion. A tour of 15 churches by the United Press found these packed to capacity. In contrast with former years, the worshippers were in no way molested.

Two Killed in Poland

Warsaw, Poland, May 2.—(UP)—Two Communists were killed, one seriously injured and six police slightly injured in a May Day clash at the village of Zawkrzew, near Upper Silesia.

At Lodz, a demonstrator and a policeman, were injured.

Warsaw was quiet, due to the strict precautions. Police with armored cars were held in readiness for trouble in all parts of Poland.

Sea of Red Flags in Berlin

Berlin, May 2.—(UP)—More than 100,000 Communists in a sea of red flags gathered in front of the Imperial Palace yesterday to hear Ernst Thalmann, their leader, predict that a new world war is approaching.

Defying Adolph Hitler's prophecy that the last red May Day had been held in Berlin, the Communists held an immense demonstration, stretching for a half-mile in front of the palace.

Thalmann luridly described how "Japanese dreadnaughts, aided by Russian White guards, are gathering on the Yangtse to fight the Soviet Union". He was cheered when he proclaimed that in case Russia is attacked in the east, the entire proletarian workers would "march together with the Red army for the defence of the common fatherland".

Thalmann, forecasting Hitler's victory into the Government of Prussia and the Reich, said: "The Nazis will lose their teeth if they try to bite the revolutionary proletariat."

Reports indicated May Day was quiet all through Germany. No incidents occurred in Berlin, although 30 arrests were made mostly of extremists for singing forbidden revolutionary songs.

Clash in Johannesburg

Johannesburg, South Africa, May 2—(UP)—Racial feeling was aroused in a May Day disturbance here, in which police were forced to charge the crowd to prevent a battle. It started when whites attacked a native who attempted to make a Communist speech from the city hall steps. Other natives intervened.

Disorder at Melbourne

Melbourne, Australia, May 2—(UP)—Acting Premier Tunnecliffe was cut under the eye and three others are roughly handled when they were knocked off a truck by 5,000 demonstrators yesterday. They had attempted to speak when they were ordered by the crowd, which shouted, "Tunnecliffe is a traitor to the Labor party." Tunnecliffe was hit on the head with a loaded hose.

BOY KILLED BY ELECTRIC WIRE

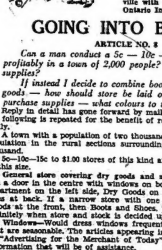
Orillia, April 30—David Barber, 15 year-old son of James Barber, Mara Township farmer, whose property lies along King's Highway No. 12 about six miles north of Orillia village, was killed by an electric shock Friday when his hand came in contact with a hydro wire charged to 2,300 volts. He was killed by an electric shock from the fence. The tragedy occurred on the farm of the boy's father, across which ran high tension wire, supplying power to an adjacent quarry, operated under contract by the Township of Mara by Philip Kehoe of Brechin. The power for the quarry is supplied by the Orillia Water, Light and Power Commission.

The little boy was discovered lying across the highly charged strand of barbed wire by his mother, who called to him several times before realizing he had been killed. Nearby, apparently a victim of the same wire, lay one of the young man's father bag been driving toward his father's home.

DOUKHOBORS JAILED IN B. C.

Pitched Battle Ensues as They Attempt to March Nude and Chanting

Nelson, B.C., May 2—With itching powder and short lengths of garden hose as their weapons, a force of 18 British Columbia police battled 200 nude Doukhobors, members of the Sons of Freedom sect, at Thrums, 15 miles from Nelson, early yesterday, taking 117 of the demonstrators prisoners, all of whom, 33 women and 84 men, were brought here in trucks from the scene of hostilities and landed in jail.



The milling horde of nudists fought the police savagely, turning several streams of water on the officers. Finally the police got the upper hand and herded the sullen men and women into an orchard, where they were held until the arrival of trucks to handle them here.

On Saturday a parade in the nude was held at the same spot, and passing motorists were pelted with rocks by the Doukhobors. Police were on the scene but all was quiet when they arrived.

One woman was injured in the melee today and is in a hospital. It is believed she was trampled during the battle.

The arrested paraders will be arraigned here during the week on a charge of parading in the nude. Under an amendment to the Criminal Code, persons found guilty of this offence are liable to three years' imprisonment.

GOING INTO BUSINESS

ARTICLE NO. 8

Can a man conduct a 5c — 10c — 15c — $1.00 store profitably in a town of 2,000 people? Where can I secure supplies?

If instead I decide to combine boots and shoes and dry goods — how should store be laid out — where could I purchase supplies — what colours to use on signs.

Reply in detail time forward by many readers of jobbers the following is repeated for the benefit of readers of this column generally.

A town with a population of two thousand usually has an equivalent population in the rural sections surrounding making a total of four thousand.

50—10c—15c to $1.00 stores of this kind are operating in some towns of this size.

General store covering dry goods and shoes—Layout—if the store has a door in the centre with windows on both sides, would place Shoe department on the right side, with Dry Goods on the left side of store at back. If a narrow store with one window—it might be Dry Goods in the front, then Shoes and Shoes. This can be planned more definitely when store and stock is decided upon.

Windows—Should dress windows frequently with goods of the type that are seasonable. The articles appearing in our paper under the title of "Advertising for the Merchant of Today" will give you, each week, information that will be of assistance.

Signs—Pire and Ten Cent Store—sign for store—red background, black letters. Dry Goods—Imperial blue back ground, letters yellow with red edging.

In deciding on a town in which to locate it is well to consider the type of people and how your own personality will fit in—the other stores located in the town—the competition in the town and from larger towns within trading distance. Consider also what newspaper circulation is available as an advertising medium.

There is also an outstanding opening for the business you contemplate in the town in your mind, and you have a personal connection that will be of considerable assistance to you, you might well consider the advisability of locating in a larger town or a good town with a larger population in the countryside.

It is usually preferable to go after a larger market, and a small store well managed can be successful even in competition with larger stores, and making a success in the smaller store, you have a better opportunity to expand.

In the larger centres also you are likely to have a stronger paper with a more wide spread circulation, and advertising or the opportunity of selling your story to your possible customers is one of the first essentials of a successful retail business.

Let's needs—sold at fair prices and advertised by you to those customers—

MINING TOWNS SEE FIGHTING OFFICERS SHOT

Mob of 2000 Rushes Sudbury Parade—Mayor Injured

CHIEF HURT

Bullet Hits Mountie—23 Men and Women Arrested

Sudbury, May 2—Citizens and Communists clashed here yesterday afternoon in the most serious May Day disturbance Sudbury has known.

Eighteen alleged Communists are in the police cells, while a number of citizens who attempted to break up the Communist parade before the police arrived are nursing cracked heads and other injuries. Most of the injuries were received from flying rocks with which the Communists' sympathizers bombarded the crowds of citizens after it were struck by Reds who flailed around them with the handles of their banners.

Lined behind their citizens and Communists resulted from the latter's last of the Red Flag and the Union Jack at the head of their parade in contravention of a civic bylaw.

Mayor Injured

Among the casualties is Mayor Peter Fenion, who was struck on the head with a rock and knocked unconscious. He is carried out of his car to assist Sergeant Leo Campeau of the Sudbury police force, who had been knocked semi-conscious with a rock and was being kicked and beaten as he lay on the street.

Just as Mayor Fenion struck one of Sergt. Campeau's assailants with his fist, he was struck on the head with a rock by Peter Bilonick, a local lawyer, went to the mayor's assistance and knocked down the man with a club.

Last evening the Ukrainian Labor Temple and Liberty Hall (Finnish) were visited by municipal and provincial police under Chief Constable David Louden and Inspector A. E. Wilson, with accomplete records, records and Communist emblems were seized.

The parade followed a meeting in Memorial Park, which was addressed by local Communist leaders in English, Finnish and Ukrainian. Jack Chairman of the meeting, told the crowd that the police commission had laid down the law about the parade. If they carried a Union Jack at the head of the parade, he had after telling them that the Union Jack was the flag of the bosses and only the Red flag should be carried by militant workers, he called on the crowd to march on the streets and demonstrate.

The police had not expected the parade to start so soon, and only had Chief Constable Louden at the park. As the parade formed up there were shouts of "Carry the Union Jack," and "Don't let them parade without the Union Jack." From the crowd which lined the street at the park entrance.

Attacked by Citizens

About 500 Reds formed up six abreast, with the Red Flag at the head and with 10 or 12 other banners in the lead and massed about 100 yards when the crowd on the street, numbering between two and three thousand, attacked them, tearing down their banners. Plainclothesman David Kozlabo went through the mob alone and wrested the Red Flag from the leader's hands.

Shooting at Rouyn

Rouyn, Que., May 2—The mining town of Rouyn is seething with excitement today following a clash between May day demonstrators and the police yesterday afternoon in which an unknown number, including two policemen, were injured.

Forbidden by the police to hold an outdoor mass meeting, a mob assembled last night in defiance of the order paraded the town with posters calling upon the people to demonstrate in the streets yesterday afternoon at 2.30.

Shortly after two o'clock a large crowd had assembled when the Ukrainian Hall watched by police, who did not interfere until a ringleader attempted to make a speech from the platform outside the hall. Provincial Police Constable Jos. Lapointe ordered the speaker inside and other police moved quickly to disperse the crowd.

ALICE CELEBRATES

Alice of England is in the U. S. Wonderland for the centennial of the birth of Lewis Carroll, author of "Alice in Wonderland". Alice is Mrs. Reginald Liddell who is eighty years of age this week. On Wednesday the fete will come to a conclusion at Columbia University.

It is not so often that years after an author's death the original of his characters can be welcomed by his admirers. But in the case of the author of "Alice" this is true.

Mrs. Liddle must feel proud of the honor which has come to her to have inspired such a work and through it to have inspired thousands upon thousands of young lives.

It is also good to know that one has a character fit to put into a book. Most characters are moulded and welded from a thousand component parts to round out a great human type.

A HERO

To be called "the most perfect man I have ever known" has fallen to the honor of the memory of Admiral Peary, Polar explorer. The man who made the statement was Captain Robert Bartlett, speaking for the Peary Memorial Fund in New York.

Captain Bartlett, who twice sailed the Peary ship, the Roosevelt, also called him "the greatest man he had ever known. To the Eskimos Peary was a god. Bartlett goes on "He was as nearly perfect a man as they make them. He was the ideal leader . . . he never swore, never got excited or lost his temper. He was equal to any emergency, always rose to the job, wouldn't be downed, you know."

To be a hero of those of heroic mould is a tribute anyone might envy. And the generality of man is ready to make the great man its hero.

CHURCH NEEDED

If the Church was ever needed it is now, states a pastoral letter prepared by the House of Bishops of the P. E. Church meeting at Garden City, L. I., for the world needs a Christian social order in which shall dwell righteousness and justice. "The world needs our ministry in hospital, in prison in country and in city—our social service. The world needs a new generation nurtured in Christian ideals, religious education. The world needs the consciousness of Christianity, its faith in God, its joy in living,—the evangel. The world needs international fellowship—the Church's world-wide mission. The world needs the wholesomeness of Christianity, the consecration of every department of life to Jesus Christ. This is the Church's catholicity that Christ may be all in all."

Those who read this and think at all over the influence of the Church in all its past upon the civil, social and inner things of life, upon nations and of individuals, cannot but believe that the Church is just such an institution as finds itself best in the situation which has developed throughout the world. Only such an institution can make the minds of the people and individuals realize their duty in such an hour. Such ideals as the Church develops and carries on are worth everything else in the world.

DANGERS OF UNDERWEIGHT

The underweight folk, the lithe and slim who smile at the corpulent, run grave dangers particularly if they have a tubercular family history, according to a writer in the New York Times. This actuary cites figures to show the alarming death rate among the underweight class of young people. His conclusion is that if it were not for the fad of slimness the reduction in the death rate from tuberculosis reduced by sanitary measures would show even greater diminution. He admits that family history may prove that slimness is to be expected in certain persons but to attempt to become slim to join the fashion may result in an even higher death rate among these people. He presents one report to indicate that the most favorable mortality from all causes comes from among young persons slightly above the average weight.

We all remember the fellow who thought that what this country needed was more old-fashioned woodshed doors, more saplin' limbs, and more determined, strong-armed dads! From the Portland (Ore.) Journal:

GETTIN' LICKED
By Phil B. Perkins

Got a lickin' from my dad,
Worst one I ever had,
Claims I said words that-were bad—
But I didn't!

Though in tears I did protest,
Dad just shed his coat and vest,
Said, "Young man, it's for the best"—
But it wasn't!

Cut a limb from off the tree
Toughest limb that he could see,
Said 'twould hurt him more than me—
But it didn't!

Took me through the wood-shed door,
Where we'd often gone before,
Laid it on till I was sore—
But I wasn't!

With a face that looked quite grim,
He did wield that saplin' limb,
Till I wondered at his vim—
Think I didn't?

How I bowled with all my might,
Even when the blows were light,
Thought Ma'd make him quit from fright,
But she didn't!

When I left that gruesome shed,
Eyes all tears—face all red,
I remarked, "Wisht I was dead,"
But I wasn't!

But I guess that, like as not,
Every lickin'-that I got,
Somehow seemed to hit the spot—
Wisht it hadn't!

UP TO THE WITCHES

Witches and wizards may exist and be able to change themselves into snakes, but they must prove it to the Christian Council on the Gold Coast of Africa.

So runs a report to the Chicago Daily News. In a rather astounding announcement published by the Christian Council, of which the Anglican Bishop of Accra is chairman, $36.30 as the English money is rated in American coin, is offered, we read, to any witch doctor who, within six months, can meet three members of the Christian Council and "do his stuff."

Three tests are given: To eat a pawpaw, or some other fruit, without having any physical contact with it; to extract from a sealed box, without breaking the seal, an article deposited in it by the committee; to transform himself into any beast, bird or creeping thing.

It is explained that the step has been taken, after careful inquiry, to break the power of witch doctors over the natives, who live in terror of the witches' supposed supernatural power to inflict disease and death without physical contact, cause worldly prosperity or adversity, or form a ball of light like the will-o'-the-wisp.

Incredible as it seems, one clause of the Christian Council's report states we read: "We are not prepared as a committee to affirm that no witchcraft stories have any basis in fact. Some of us take that view, and some of us do not."

"It was my ambition that egged me on," said the would-be actor.

"Yes but I understand it was the audience that egged you off."

INDEPENDENT THINKING

The popularity of books dealing in a non-technical way with philosophy is a sign of the times. We live in an age of expanding ideas. Science and art are groping after a conception and philosophy of life adapted to the new physical environment. They are trying to understand the new world, the new India, the new China, the new British Commonwealth of Nations, the gold standard, the perplexing picture of world trade, the problem of poverty in an over-abundance of good things. There is in all these matters a lack of definite leadership. The leaders seem to be as much puzzled as the rest of us. The task of independent thinking is forced upon us. Must we then be an evil necessity. "What could human require more from a nation to plant it and so prone to seek after knowledge?" asked Milton nearly three centuries ago. "What would there to such a lovarily and prepcant soil but wise and faithful laborers to make a knowing people a nation of prudent life, of sage and of worthiest"—London Advitiser.

TWIN FOLLIES

It would be hard to find another incident which illustrates more neatly the twin follies of protection than the present Administration — the Federal Farm Board, with its "stabilization corporations," and the Hawley-Smoot tariff. The one is an effort to peg the price of wheat and cotton the Farm Board has accumulated vast stocks which it now admits, tend to depress the markets for these products. Simultaneously the tariff act of 1930 has made it more difficult for the farmer to sell the modities aboard. For the effect of this law has been to curtail our imports from those nations and only by to deprive them in large part of the chief means by which they formerly paid for their purchases of American products generally, by denying us their goods. Hence the need of heroic measures to provide them with cash or credit.— New York Times.

BASIS OF FAIR AWARDS

In his brief remarks of the fair banquet Monday night, Mr. Lloyd Smith of Zeat Zorra, alluded effectively to the situation that exists in regard to the placing of awards. Based on the in the dairy breeds, with no knowledge in connection with the dairy, to any animal's record as a sire. As he points out, they are not kept—"to look at", yet appearance in the show ring is almost the only basis on which to go on, no evidence being asked or submitted as to quality of progeny.

A somewhat similar situation existed recently by a writer in the Farmer's Advocate, when he discussed the value of the Ontario government premium points for the judging of various horse breeds. Certificates are granted after inspection, and that is all that can be in it.— Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

THERE ARE DECENT PEOPLE

Doubtless in America there are also honest women who have hoarded gems folk and decent millionaires. One simply does not hear about them. It is the same with people. Foreign papers report her crimes passionately and without interest rather than the work of her savants or the life of her decent citizens.

A Frenchman enclosed a clipping containing these views with a letter to an American friend. The friend agreed heartily that "there are decent people in America, our country incidentally, though she speaks English well, she also has a definition of the words "Gangster" "racketeer" and "vamp"—New York Times.

PRIVILEGED CLASSES

When the House voted to raise to $2,500 the salary exemption of federal employees, in connection with the economy cut, the galleries and the corridors were said to be filled with applauding government employees. It could not have been an exhilarating experience. The country is faced with the necessity of reducing public expenditures and in the act a degree of sacrifice must be undergone by everybody. But the substantial clerk in Washington insist that the reductions must be made elsewhere than in their own pay. They thus deliberately choose to rank themselves with the war veterans as constituting a special and privileged class in the United States before their new taxes and heavier burdens. For themselves they have voted for exemptions and exceptional favors. —New York Times.

THE WARNING

The little screech-owl sits pollit
In the middle of the night
And tells you truth over, over,
You are wisest under cover
To your own fireside.
More than walking things can think
From the cup of night and take
More pleasure than the sun can make.

You had best not be abroad

When a tree might seem a god
Naked in vast company.
There are things you best not see.
Better keep you eyes within
The little day a light can spin.
Better in, the owl politely
Warns and warns you, lightly, Tightly.

HUMAN BEING DESIRE TO BE REMEMBERED

Post-Death Reputation and Remembrance Are Much Sought

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

LOUIS E. BISCH

Every human being, man or woman, wants to be remembered. I do not mean the desire to have relatives and friends remember us on Christmas and birthdays, for instance, or call on the telephone now and then. I mean just to say "Hello!" Specifically I want to emphasize here the great ego urge within all of us to be remembered after we die.

Most of us want to leave behind us something which will be a good deed or a philanthropy that will survive. Those old Catholic faith have masses said at regular intervals for the dead, the deceased has died in peace. People also spend large sums for imposing statues and mausoleums, hoping to immortalize themselves while still alive.

This desire to remember is inherently egotistic and materialistic as he is, strives to make contact with the future through belief.

The most tangible expression of this desire to remember ourselves is to be found in the child—that is, what probably comes out in us unconscious but nevertheless motivating force, is given to the child through the child that the mother and the father, especially the former, hope that the race may be perpetuate. The training, the culture, the opportunities which they have created in their child—plus the heredity inherited—are forthwith immediately carries on forever. In having a child, a parent is really responding to the urge for perpetuation.

But man will also sacrifice for less tangible ambitions. Take, for example. War is perhaps the best example of all. In order that the principle may live which the individual believes in and of which he is a part, he is willing to sacrifice to forgo suffering and even lay down his life. Many of these individuals who will not hesitate to give her life so that the race may be perpetuated, or in shipwrecks, fires and all the great emergencies, parents will joyfully sacrifice themselves for their child's welfare. Parents will forthwith and really carries on forever. In having a child, a parent is really responding to the urge for perpetuation.

But man will also sacrifice for less tangible ambitions. Take, for example. War is perhaps the best example of all. In order that the principle may live which the individual believes in and of which he is a part, he is willing to sacrifice to forgo suffering and even lay down his life. Many of these individuals who will not hesitate to give her life so that the race may be perpetuate. Or,

Lloyd Brown Wins Mound Duel Helped By Bats of Players

BY HERBERT W. BAKER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

An admired lineup and a typical pitching performance by Willis "Bill" Hallahan has given the world champion St. Louis Cardinals their first victory in four games and snapped the Chicago Cubs' winning streak at seven in a row.

Cubby Bruce, slightly annoyed by an outfit that had succeeded in winning only five games out of its first 18, bench first baseman Jim Bottomley yesterday, shifted Jimmy Collins to that post and inserted Ray Blades into the outfield.

The lineup stopped the Cubs without trouble, 7 to 1, but the credit rests chiefly on Hallahan's shoulders. The "wild one" passed 10 men but allowed only three safe hits. Four double plays stopped the Cubs every time Hallahan's gyroscopic pet them in a threatening position. George Watkins led a 12 hit attack on Guy Bush, getting a home run, double and single.

The Cubs' defeat automatically sent the idle Pirates into second in the rarefied atmosphere of first place.

In the only other National League struggle of the day, the Cincinnati Reds' ten game slump ended over Pittsburgh, 7-5, after the Pirates had gained a 5-0 lead. Bob Grove, Pirate catcher, suffered a fracture of the index finger when a ball batted by Hallahan hit him by a foul tip.

American League

The Washington Senators gained the American League lead by beating the New York Yankees, 4-2, as Lloyd Brown outpitched Charley Ruffing in a duel. Brown witnessed the finish of the game from the clubhouse, having retired with one out in the ninth after the Yankees had put two men on base. Triples by Jack Rend Myer accounted for three Washington runs in the first inning.

Wes Ferrell won his fifth game in a row as Cleveland whipped out an 11-2 victory over the Chicago White Sox. The Sox closed until the eighth when Cleveland scored seven runs off Poser and McKain. Earl Averill collected four hits including his fifth home run of the season.

The much-travelled right hander, Irving Hadley, held the Red Sox hitless for the St. Louis Browns, struck out 11 men and beat the Detroit Tigers, 4-3.

Hockey—Although it may be out of season in refer to Canada's national winter game just here, have been informed that there is to be a "meeting of all interested hockey enthusiasts in the cafeteria room of the Ontario Intelligencer on Wednesday night at 8 p.m. A number of interested personages have been talking over the matter pertaining to the possibilities of hockey teams in Belleville for the season 1932-33. We commend the sponsors of such a meeting as this is the opportune time in which to engage a hockey club for the coming year. All interested are expected to make a special effort to be present.

A battery of men were busy on Saturday afternoon preparing the auditorium of the City Hall for tonight's fight card. The ring is in the centre with seats all arranged and due to the fact that there is no admission charge were of the opinion that they did not have enough seats to accommodate the fans tonight, an extra truck load of seats were brought to the City Hall this morning. The committee have made arrangements for 100 more reserved seats and they expect to be able to accommodate the large crowd which will be present at their intentions of being present.

Jack McFee, Rodt. E. Ostling and George Wallbridge have been named judges for tonight's fights while Jack Thurlow will referee the bouts. Jack Semalne has been named as chief time-keeper. Timmy Burns and his corps of helpers have stepped forward and undertaken to handle the crowd at the night and the staff will be sufficient to handle the crowd in record time.

George Semark and Scotty Wilson both tapered off their training on Saturday and both claim to be in the best condition possible. Semark, who is somewhat shy in the pink of condition and weighs around 160 pounds, said that he would "take" Malcolla Gallo easy tonight. The fans are advised to be in their seats when the opening bout starts as we have been informed of the fact that these two kids Malcolla and Bailey will give the fans more action than they have seen in quite some time. The Semaine-O'Neil bout also has all the markings of a feature bout.

A four team girls' softball loop was realized when the soft-ball league was formed on Saturday night. Cisco, Maple Leafs, Belleville Fruit and National Maids will be the four teams in quite some time. The Semaine-O'Neil bout also has all the markings of a feature bout.

NORTH TEAMS HAVE AN EDGE

First Move of South Teams Into North Takes Place Tuesday

(By the Associated Press)

The International League's first meeting day found little difference between the two divisions of the circuit. The northern half had a slight edge in the number of games won and lost in its first time at the south but it was so small that its only significance lay in the fact that it was gained away from home parks.

Following a rainy windup of the first round of the southern cities yesterday, today's schedule was a complete blank as the clubs moved north to open the second part of the league program tomorrow.

Only Two Played

Only two games were played yesterday, a doubleheader between Rochester and Baltimore and the hill resulted in no decision. Baltimore's Orioles, batsmenting out 15 hits, which included four doubles, a triple and homers by Heffner, Arlett and McGowan, won the first game by a 10-3 count behind some fairly effective pitching by Walter Thurcher. Rochester came back and protected its slim hold on third place in the standing by winning the second game 7-5 as Al Rickert held the Orioles to five hits.

Russ Arlett hit another homer in this contest to bring Baltimore's total for the 18 games of its home stand to 23.

As the clubs left the south, the Newark Bears held first place by the margin of a single game over the Buffalo Bisons. The Orioles had a lead by winning two out of three games in their closing series. Then came Rochester and Richmond, tied in games in another 'north-south' contest, with Toronto and Jersey City third by seven percentage points.

Leafs Tied for Fifth

Montreal and Toronto were tied for the next notch in the standing and Reading and Jersey City were deadlocked at the bottom. The Canadian clubs gained their advantage with clean sweeps in their final series. Montreal took three games from Buffalo over the week-end and the Toronto Leafs did the same thing to Reading.

The remainder of northern openings tomorrow calls for Newark at Baltimore, Buffalo at Rochester, Montreal at Toronto and Jersey City at Rochester.

PLAY DELIGHTS ROSLIN AUDIENCE

"Chinty Cottage" Presented By Y. P. of Anglican Church Friday

Roslin—The young people of the Anglican Church, Roslin, presented their play "Chinty Cottage" on Friday evening, May 6th, which proved a large and appreciative audience. The play is a story of Scotch country life, a charming attractive girl of twenty, bored with society, comes from the city to rusticate in the remote village of Meadowbrook. She falls in love with the man and settles down for a state of peace and quiet. Then the fun begins. The cast in the plays only, one exciting event piles on another to startling climaxes. Mindy does not rest, but she gets a "chaser" and hesitatingly fails heir to a husband. The cast was an interesting one with Minty Topping the young player by Miss Hazel Wilson.

Following was a close second, was the maid, "skerred all the time", a rich comedy part, played by Miss Letitia Wilson.

Then there was Minty's aunt, Miss Tiffington played by Miss Agnes Grant, a "boss" with a matrimonial eye on Mr. Kent, played by Mr. John Hart, (poor man he needed a manager now) and Dr. Kenyon Peter, played by Mr. William Bates, was an innocent cause for most of the trouble, and his predicament, carried forth a great deal of applause from the audience. Miss Dorothy Grace, played by Miss Eva Kerr in her usual pleasing manner, helped him in and out of several predicaments. Mrs. Dean's part played by Miss Mary Grey was always but excellent.

Between the first and second acts, Rev. Hill gave a humorous reading which was greatly enjoyed by all present and between the second and third acts Miss Letitia Wilson sang "Paddy McGinty's Goat" accompanied by Mrs. Granity Burleigh on the piano, which was encored and splendidly played.

The play was directed by Rev. E. N. Grant and much credit is due to his efforts.

Yesterday's Stars

Bill Hallahan, Cardinals—Held Cubs to three singles, fanned five and a walk.

Red Lucas, Reds—Held Pirates to nine hits, collected two hits, drove in one run and scored one.

Irving Hadley, Browns—Struck out 11, allowed nine hits and beat Tigers, 4-3.

Lloyd Brown, Senators—Outpitched Charley Ruffing and beat Yankees, 4-2, allowing seven hits.

Earl Averill, Indians—Clouted his fifth homer and three singles to aid in defeat of White Sox.

FOUR TEAMS IN SOFTBALL LOOP

Cisco, Belleville Fruit, Maple Leafs and National Maids Enter

His Worship Mayor George O. Tice was unanimously chosen as Honorary President of the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League at their annual meeting held last night in the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday night. Four teams are entered in the loop this year the Provincial girls' team being disbanded for the present. The four teams to enter the loop are Cisco, Belleville Fruit, Maple Leafs and National Maids.

Miss Ethel Deacon was in the chair during the evening and secretary Mr. B. Vandervoort read the minutes of the previous meeting and the correspondence on hand. The new constitution was then read and adopted. This new constitution is more thorough than its predecessors and now all players must sign a league certificate before they can participate with the league. A transfer of an individuates cannot be signed after July 15th, however. The constitution is a little more drastic than here-to-fore and all teams must pay their entrance fee of $5.00 upon entering the league.

After some controversy it was decided the the league should affiliate with the Eastern Ontario Ladies' Softball Association. President Deacon and Mr. Frank Dennison were chosen as league delegates to represent the Belleville loop at the annual meeting of the E.O.L.S.A. to be held at Brockville next Saturday evening.

It was moved and passed, that the players be bonded for residents of this district in order to qualify playing in the loop. A full tis of 30 miles was set as a limit from which to take players. All league games are to be seven innings with five innings constituting a game in case of rain, etc. All games are to start at 6:30 p.m. and no team may sign more than 15 players during the season. All umpires are requested to send their applications to the secretary of the league not later than May 15th. These applications will be brought up for approval at the next meeting of the league to be held on Saturday, May 14th. It was also decided to play all league games on Tuesday and Friday nights if possible. The secretary was authorized to draw up a tentitive schedule to be presented for approval at the next meeting.

The question of operating a junior girls' softball loop was also discussed and the question will be taken into consideration at the next meeting. It was proposed, that the league operate from June 1st until August 15th and to be followed by the play-offs. The schedule is to be a double one. Other important items were dealt with before the meeting was adjourned by the president.

"Y" Alleys

The Athletic Ladies' team of the Afternoon League and their husbands completed the bowling alleys on Saturday evening in a mixed 2 game in which the ladies trimmed their husbands. The feature of the game was the bowling of Jack Norris, he being able to get them when he wanted to.

Next Saturday a ladies' team journeyed from Peterboro to play a team from the Ladies' Afternoon League and suffered defeat at the hands of the Belleville team. Much can be attributed to lack of experience on the alleys as some of the Peterboro girls are real bowlers at home and our girls will have to make very high counts on their return game. High bowler for the game was Miss Peg Holway with 251, being high bowler for Peterboro was E. Rae.

CROWNS VERSUS HEARTS

An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage

Would you like to marry a prince? A real, true prince, I mean with royal parents, a throne in the immediate background and a crown and sceptre in the family vault?

In the old days, it is true that such an ambition would have been too absurd to mention. But now — well, times have changed. So if you are young and charming, and if you are clever enough to get yourself invited to one function at a prince frequents—you're a chance, whoever you are.

You needn't even have a million dollars father, ready and eager to pay the prince's debts.

It warms the heart to hear about Prince Nicholas of Rumania, brother of King Carol. You remember that they are both sons of the celebrated Queen Marie, who occupied so many columns in the newspapers when she came to this country a few years ago with pretty Princess Ileana, now a bride.

Prince Nicholas wanted to marry a commoner, which is the European way of saying a woman without royal blood. He is so deeply in love that he was more than ready to sacrifice his princely position. King Carol, although his own long love-affair with a non-royal person should have have enlarged his sympathies, forbade his brother to do anything of the sort.

Nicholas, like a true lover, resorted by doing as he pleased, and is now a happy husband. And it is said that Carol who has perhaps been persuaded by his democratic mother, will after all bestow his blessing on the rebellious pair.

Then there is charming young Prince Lennart, grandson of Sweden's very kingly looking king. The prince's mother is the handsome Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, who was divorced from her first English husband many years ago and who recently made her fabulous life story into a book. While he was a University student, this young prince met Miss Kerin Nisgrandt, a delightful, intelligent girl who promptly returned his ardent love.

A good deal of arranging had to be done. The Prince's love-story wasn't actually thwarted. He had, however, to give up his title and princely privileges. But, in allowing the youth to follow his romantic bent the royal family of Sweden probably remembered that princes after all haven't the future that commoners have; that royalty is getting pretty much crowded off the face of the world, and that thrones, what are left of them, are a little weak.

Princes come cheaper than they did.

So Prince Lennart will become plain Mr. Bernadotte and he and his bride will live in London, and maybe make a honeymoon trip to America, and there's every reason to believe they'll be very happy. Long life to them.

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman)
EXPRESSION OF THANKS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it correct, after being entertained at a dinner or bridge party, to do either in person or on the telephone, or, if at a distance, to write a note of thanks?

If I have always telephoned to my hostess to tell her again that I enjoyed myself. My friend says that it is not correct, that this is "old fashioned" and that this form is not observed by the younger people of good breeding, that one's thanks is at the door when leaving are sufficient.

What do you think?

N. G. H.

Kindness, graciousness, expressions of appreciation, are never out of fashion with people of breeding, young or old, here or there, now and then. Such gracious qualities will be, "Till the sun grows cold and the stars are old", and there will always be pleasant people—who will give with these qualities as freely and unconsciously as flowers give forth fragrance.

There will always be hostesses who are hospitable, and who will love our telling them that we enjoy their hospitality and their kindness to us, and there will always be guests who will be so pleasant and thoughtful and kind in their reactions that they will want to assure their hostesses of their appreciation. The exception of all this is not being new-fashioned or "modern"—it's just being thoughtful and nicely considerate. So keep up your rule of telling your hostess what a nice time you had and what a fine hostess she is, or writing this to her. Don't be afraid it takes this joy from you!

THE BRIDE AND GROOM

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—What are the proper things for a bride to say when friends congratulate her? (Something besides "Thank You").

2.—Is one supposed to congratulate the groom?

3.—When the bride is sending out notes thanking her friends for wedding gifts, how should she name be signed.... Mr. and Mrs. John Brown, or just Mrs. John Brown?

Mrs. Brown.

1.—We don't, or shouldn't, congratulate the bride. It is the groom whom we congratulate, on winning so fine a wife! We offer our "best wishes" to the bride, or our "wishes for your happiness always," or something of that sort.

And, to the "Thank You" she may add anything she feels appropriate at the time in the receiving line, "Thank you. That is very kind of you," or "Thank you. So nice. That means so much to me."

2.—Yes, one congratulates the groom.

3.—If she writes her notes of thank-you-for-your-gift before the marriage, as she should, she should write she signs her first name or her full name, according to whom she is writing.

If she writes her notes after she has been married, she may sign either her first name, as she naturally would to her close friends, or to others whom she does not know so well, she signs:

Very sincerely yours,
Mary Smith Brown (or Mary Brown).

WEDDING ANNOUNCEMENT

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend of mine, who is a widow, is about to be married again. Wouldn't it be more correct for her to announce her marriage after it has taken place? And how is the announcement made by her mother, who is also a widow, the announcement to read:

Mrs. Carl Smith
Announces the marriage of her daughter Mrs. Jean Smith Carlisle to
Mr. John Brown

Query.

Yes, this would be correct.

(Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers).

Oshawa—"Cat Burglars" are operating in the city, believe the Oshawa police. The series of over 40 minor breakings and burglaries, which have occurred in the city during the past two months are believed to be the work of experienced housebreakers, possibly working with an assistant, declared Chief O. D. Friend. The latest reported, was entry into the house of Robert Aitchison, 50 Park road north, where a sum of nearly $20 was stolen.

Bowmanville — Orono, widely known for its annual fair, its swimming pool, its unemployment, and its baseball team, will this year celebrate its centenary. Historians have discovered that its first settlers gathered in Orono one hundred years ago in 1832 and organized around a pioneer corner store as a community. The village is in the earliest settled portions of Durham County and many families prominent in the district and in the province come from near Orono.

Some People Still Beat Rugs!

No wonder housecleaning time is dreaded. Some housemakers start in energetically, the week themselves out and are still not satisfied with their labours.

Modern's methods of special cleaning return lost beauty to rugs and other furnishings difficult of cleaning.

Let us, this year, cleanse your rugs, drapes, and every stuffed furniture. You will be more than gratified with the results.

Women's Interest In The Home

Leaving Too Much To Teacher

(By Constance Cameron)

Mother precipitated matters when she inadvertently inquired of five-year-old Richard what he did during recess that day in kindergarten.

"Nothing," said the small boy, "I didn't go out for recess." To his mother's "Why not?" he replied that his teacher had kept him in because he wouldn't get his rubbers on, and she had spent the recess period teaching him how.

The mother flamed in maternal indignation. Keeping her baby in during recess! No fresh air; no play! What did that teacher think she was doing, anyway? She'd see her about this.

But let us consider the teacher a minute. At mid-semester she had received more than thirty new pupils. Most of them had learned at home how to do things for themselves. Most of them had mothers who felt that home responsibility included making them competent to get in and out of outer clothing, teaching them proper toilet habits, neat arrangement of clothing, getting a drink of water unassisted—being, in short, pretty independent little human beings.

But Richard's mother, who had babied him to such an extent that he couldn't get into his rubbers alone, became enraged at his teacher for trying to show him how. When you feel indignant at the teacher's seeming neglect of your child, remember:

A teacher can't put on rubbers, coats or hats for thirty children, and get them all out in the next ten minutes of play.

A teacher cannot hold thirty handkerchiefs while thirty small noses are blowing—or keep her thirty small fingers if they get pinched or scratched during the day. You can do that at home for one child that you can't do for a group. Think of this before you scold or roll your child for his first school days. The more he progresses with you the man he will be the happier he is going to be and the faster he will progress. And your big teacher will bless you.

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Coiffures Are Getting Decorative

Considering what's being done with side and rear wisps—tags of hair, how they are formed into lines of sausages standing at attention, or done into the most delectable little small curls, it would appear that every woman who is a passenger on the beauty wagon should have a personal beauty attendant always near. A patient, attentive Marie who will put those little sausages in place while her mistress reads the morning paper. Sounds elegant, doesn't it? And what a holler we'll register, those of us who haven't even an Ellen to wash the dishes, who are so fiercely chased by the demon of Duty and the lures we call jobs that we feel we're doing well to get a permanent every Spring and to rake out the old wispe once or twice a day, as we are able to snatch the time.

Nevertheless, one never knows. Perhaps by sitting on the edge of the dusting or crawling out of bed a bit earlier, one might indulge in some of these new coiffure tricks. There's nothing like a new hairdo to set bells ringing inside one's head. When a woman doesn't correspond to an appeal for remodelling the brain pool, she's pretty far gone. One of the simplest and fancy birsute offerings are certainly comforting to the eye.

You choose your coiffure pattern, then you have the hair trimmed for it. You can, if length of hair warrants, have your small puffs doing a ring-around-arosy. Or, if you prefer to have them of the detachable order, they are easy to get at the buying. False but beautiful.

A chic and swaggering effort is achieved by parting the hair in the centre way down to the back of the neck, drawing it away from the face at the sides—the ears are out in the public eye—fastening the ends with bobby pins and so arranging the ends that there are six puffs set on the bias, three to a side, each row between the back parting and the ears that may or may not carry dangling ornaments.

In perfect cut and condition are the "leavings" of a wind-blown bob that so popular Paris design, the coiffure with smooth sleek crown and eight or nine flat sculptured curls on either side of the head. Usually there are two rows, the lower one along the hair line providing a quartet of what our grandmamas referred to as beau catchers, only they are somewhat more robust looking, less whispy, than these relics of the day when quince seeds were utilized as a makeshift curling agent.

The trouble with curls and puffs is that they take time to arrange and they are perishable, even when the hair has been permanently waved.

Face washing gets in horrific licks and the hair gets a squash on them. But they are heavenly. No doubt about that!

There's no such thing, on the fashion calendar, as straight fringes at the rear, too reminiscent of the day of the shingle. You either have two or three inches of treaslocks there, disposed of in up curls or under curls or puffs, or you grow an additional three or four inches and arrange your pigtail material in some stiffly formal flat ribbon-like line.

Back hair is the heart and substance of the mannerly coiffure, that's what tells the story decides whether a girl is duddy or a beauty wow.

Mrs. Beare Thankful for Way in Which Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Helped Her Back to Health

Gained Weight and Color

"I can truly recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for they did wonders for me," writes Mrs. Mabel M. Beare, New Westminster, B.C. "After a long and very trying illness, I was down to 90 lbs. in weight. I could not eat a hearty meal. In fact, I have had to go away from the table hungry, from a dinner I dared not touch. I was very pale, and had often read about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, so thought I would give them a trial. I soon found I was able to eat with anyone, and life began to look brighter. My weight came up to 118 lbs. and my lips and cheeks had a color that no more cheek rouge ful I ever took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I only hope others will try them.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually create an abundance of new red blood, which is the reason they have given new vitality and strength to thousands of such nervously exhausted women. Equally helpful for growing girls. Try them. At your druggists or in the new glass container 50c.

NORANDA HITS NEW LOW

Only Higher Priced Stocks Appeared Under Heavy Pressure

Toronto, May 2—Light trading interest left the major section of Standard Stock and Mining Exchange listings unchanged in the forenoon today. But a few of the leaders appeared under heavy pressure, with general price trend downward.

Noranda, showing resistance in the first hour, weakened towards midday, price dropping to a new low for the year of $14.10 for a 50-cent net loss. International Nickel, off 1/8 at $14.75, was hovering around its previous low. Eldorado was steady.

Hollinger, whose annual report shows a 72 per cent decline in the value of holdings of its investment trust, sold off 20 to $4.55. Teck-Hughes and Wright-Hargreaves were firm. Among cheaper issues Kirkland Lake eased an eighth and Moss Mines were off a couple each. Ore remained in the discard.

Most Issues Carried Down One Dollar to Three Dollars

New York, May 2—The selling wave continued on Wall Street.

Losses of 1 to more than 3 points carried much of the list to new lows for the cycle, although trading was again small in volume. Selling was fairly general, but oils held their ground well.

Issues losing about 2 to 3 points included Santa Fe, Union Pacific, Norfolk and Western, American Telephone, U. S. Steel Preferred, Bethlehem Preferred, Safeway Stores, Macy, Coca Cola and a few others. Hershey was sold about 5 off more than $1. U. S. Steel common sagged nearly a point and other issues a point.

The oil shares may have been helped somewhat by the ordering of the regular extra dividend of 20c by Standard Oil of New Jersey, in addition to the regular quarterly payment of the same amount.

CLOTHES STOLEN FOUND ON FENCE

Taken From Cloak Room of Dance Hall on Saturday Night

Sunday morning about nine o'clock Mrs. Ellis, 227 Wright, discovered a light grey fedora hat and grey overcoat hanging on a fence in the rear of Mr. M. D. Hanley's grocery store on the corner of West Bridge and James streets and at about the same time a number of blankets were also discovered to be missing from the clothes line in the rear yard of the house occupied by Mrs. Herman, 27 West Bridge street, which is next door to Mr. Denton's store.

The city police department was called by Mr. Denton and Constable Evans responded to the summons. The articles found were brought by him to the police station. Later Mrs. Ellis came with the answer to the description of the coat belonging to Mr. Harry Hamilton, 12 Willard street and a hat belonging to Mr. Joseph Lee, 221 Front street, both of which were reported to the police by the owners as having been stolen Saturday night from the cloak room of Johnstone's Dancing Academy.

It is thought that the coat and hat were left on the fence, while the blankets were being removed from the line and that being alarmed the person, who took the blankets made haste to get away and left the coat and hat behind. The police department is making further inve-ligations.

ARKONA FARMER ENDS HIS LIFE

Sarnia, May 2.—Percy Nutt, 32, bachelor farmer, residing two miles north of the village of Arkona, committed suicide by hanging yesterday. TABERNACLE W. M. S.

On Thursday afternoon the Ladies of Group No. 4 Tabernacle W. M. S. known as the "Joy Group" gathered at the home of Mrs. E. Kerr, 294 Bleecker Ave., for their regular meeting. Mrs. Proata, convener, was in the chair. Hymn 240 "Rescue the Perishing" was sung, followed by the Watch Tower Study by Mrs. Proata. Mrs. Trumbull and Mrs. Emerkin on "Korea."

Mrs. Proata asked the Ladies to decide on a name for the Group. Mrs. McMullen suggested Joy, meaning "Jesus first, others second, yourself last," as a good standard to measure our lives by.

It was moved by Mrs. Yeomans seconded by Mrs. McCutcheon that the Group take up as its motto and motto.

A Responsive Service, lead by Mrs. McCutcheon, was sung. A solo was offered by Mrs. McMullen "Have Thine Own Way Lord." Prayer was offered by Mrs. Lent. Per Scripture lesson was taken by Mrs. E. Kerr and Mrs. Alexander. Hymn 240 was sung verses 1-3. Benediction. Verses 11-18. The Study of Prayer taken by Mrs. Proata (The Lord's Prayer) was very interesting and helpful, teaching one to say "Thank you" for the many blessings, offer Praise as well as Prayer, Readings by Mrs. McMullen on "Christian Stewardship of Prayer," Mrs. Lent on "Stewardship of Thankfulness" and Mrs. Fisher on "A True Story" were well received. The Closing Hymn was "Pass Them Through."

After the meeting closed, Mrs. Kerr served a dainty lunch which was very much enjoyed.

Unlike the famous European stories that make their homes in towns, the American stories, the Wood Ibis, lives in isolated southern swamps.

NOTED CRITIC SELECTS
10 BEST SHOWS OF YEAR
DRESSERWARE GIFT NIGHT

For twelve years, Burns Mantle, nationally known dramatic critic, has published a year book of the ten best dramatic stage productions of the year and his selections have come to carry an official flavor. Mantle's latest volume, covering the season 1930-31, to be published shortly, includes Philip Barry's latest Broadway stage hit, "Tomorrow and Tomorrow," which many more critics pronounced the best drama of the season, and which also caused wide public discussion due to its extraordinary theme, comprehended in the question: "Is a woman morally and psychologically bound to accept a childless marriage?"

Ruth Chatterton is now appearing in the stellar role of Pearl Mamount's illustration of "Tomorrow and Tomorrow," with Paul Lukas in the leading male role. This intriguing picture drama is the feature of the Belle tonight and Tuesday, Matinee and night.

Two plays right now under contract to Paramount as film writers will have plays included in Mantle's new volume. They are Louis Weitzenkorn, who adapted "Laugh of the Big House," and whose "Pitter Stat Fink" was chosen and Vicki Baum, in Hollywood to write an original for the screen, who is presented by her "Grand Hotel."

Among the current "Ten Best" is "The Barrets of Wimpole Street" written by Rudolph Resier which was produced and directed by Guthrie McClinty and Katherine Cornell, is starred in the play.

The remaining six dramas are "Elizabeth the Queen," "Once in a Lifetime," "Green Grow the Lilacs," "Alison's House," "As Husbands Go," and "Overture."

A very funny Charlie Chase comedy, "In Walked Charlie," the popular Belle Newsreel, and Screen Snapshots, with its entertaining glimpses into the private and professional life of famous Hollywood screen stars.

Dresserware Night

An exceptional Dresserware gift is announced in presentation to each lady attending the Belle this evening, the article selected being one of the most desired of the entire set, and an extra quota has been procured to insure each lady receiving one.

At The Capitol

"MICHAEL AND MARY"
SUPERB PLAY

Seldom has realization so thoroughly lived up to advance reputation, "Michael and Mary" came to the Capitol Theatre today for a six day run heralded as the best picture ever to come out of England. Even so, that did not seem so terrifically exciting. After looking at this masterpiece of marvelous play transferred almost bodily to the screen, it is the opinion of this reviewer that "Michael and Mary" will rank as one of the Ten Best pictures to be shown in this country in 1932. It is the first picture of the year that this department has marked up for future reference in that regard.

We hear that Herbert Marshall and Edna Best are to return to this country the middle of February in a new play. They are now playing on Broadway in "There's a Young Julia." "Michael and Mary" will do a great deal to establish a popularity which is already remarkably well established. One reason for the splendid characterizations is because of the fact that they created the roles on the stage which they portray on the screen. As a matter of fact, the entire cast of "Michael and Mary," with one or two minor exceptions, is the cast which played in the production when it opened at the St. James Theatre in London. This is the first instance which this reviewer has noticed where this could be said. American producers could profit by this experience, as they did in the case of the Lunts in "The Guardsman," in England, to have Herbert Marshall and Edna Best are the equivalent of Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne in this country.

Seldom has anything so touching, as the love story of these two, "Michael and Mary," been portrayed and seldom have players been more lost themselves in their roles as do Herbert Marshall and Edna Best. It might have been their own story they were playing. Frank Lawton, who created in London the role of young Woodley, adds just the touch of modernity to the love story completely, which this thoroughly modern story of a twenty-year-old secret requires; and Elisabeth Allan plays capitally the role of his sweetheart. One of the most intriguing characterizations, however, is that of the villain, Hagar Price. The role is played by D. A. Clarke-Smith, who can give cards and spades to most of our American villains in the ingratiating way in which he makes his villainy real and almost appealing.

Don't miss seeing "Michael and Mary." It will give your jaded romantic sense a great thrill. It will appeal to your artistic sensibilities, and you will go home feeling that the moving picture business is on the upgrade, which it is.

Dresserware Gift

Tonight each lady patron of the Capitol Theatre will be presented with the tiling article of Wedgewood Dinnerware with the compliments of the management.

In giving off its heat the sun loses 360,000 million tons of matter a day.

Rent-Free Flats To Jobless of Montreal Offered

Montreal, May 2.—(CP)—The May Day parade of the city developed a new feature this year.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Jerry Makes An Acquaintance

By Thornton W. Burgess

Sometimes politeness may not pay, But then again perhaps it may —Jerry Muskrat.

Anyway nothing is lost by politeness even though nothing is gained by it and more often than not it does pay. Jerry Muskrat found this out a long time ago.

Jerry had just had the narrowest of escapes. It made him shiver just to think of it. He had been sitting at the end of the dam of Paddy the Beaver wondering about that nice pond and the big house in it when there had come the sudden, sharp splash of the slap of a tail on water and Jerry, having learned when he was a very little fellow that such a sound meant danger signal, had plunged into the water. Now as he looked back there he saw Old Man Coyote sitting right where he had been sitting and on Old Man Coyote's face was a look of bitter disappointment.

"He almost got you that time," said a voice just back of Jerry.

Jerry turned quickly to discover a brown head not unlike his own but very much bigger and among the biggest teeth he ever had seen. "I'm Paddy the Beaver," said the stranger, "and I take it that you are Jerry Muskrat."

"Yes," replied Jerry, somewhat timidly, for he couldn't keep his eyes off those teeth of Paddy the Beaver's. "Yes I'm Jerry Muskrat. I've often heard about you and I'm pleased to meet you." He said this in his most polite manner.

Jerry politely. He guessed just how Jerry was feeling. "I saw Old Man Coyote just in the nick of time," said he. "He was just getting ready to scratch a hole in the ice good thing that you recognized my danger signal. If you had stopped to look around you would have been caught."

"Me it was you who signalled!" cried Jerry. "I've been wondering who it was. Thank you so much. Let me my life to you and I'll never forget it."

"You owe your life to your good sense in acting first and looking afterward when you heard me slap the water," retorted Paddy. " A signal is useless unless those who hear it heed it. You must have heard such a signal before."

"It is the same danger signal we Muskrats use, only we make louder and more of it. I have had to because I heard such a signal as that." He said this admiringly.

"Oh that was nothing," replied Paddy. "It is all in the tail. Yes sir; it is all in the tail. Such a big, broad heavy tail as mine is bound to make a loud noise when it slaps the water hard. By the way, where have you come from?"

"From the Smiling Pool down on the Green Meadows," replied Jerry "That is where I live. It is very nice down there. I mean it is very nice when there isn't a flood." he hastened to add.

Paddy shook his head. "I don't think I should like it down there," said he. "In fact I know I wouldn't. I want the Green Forest all around me. I must have trees, for you know I live on the bark of certain kinds very largely. How does it happen you are way up here so far from home?"

Jerry grinned a bit ruefully. "I haven't any home just now," said he.

Paddy opened his eyes very wide. "No home, no home!" he exclaimed. "Why not I should like to know?"

"I had two and both are under water now," exclaimed Jerry. Old Smiling Pool has disappeared and the Laughing Brook is out of its banks and Mrs. Jerry and I had to go somewhere and as I had always wanted to see something of the Green Forest we followed the course of the Laughing Brook and here we are."

"And where is Mrs. Jerry?" asked Paddy.

She turned back", replied Jerry. "I'm glad I didn't," he added.

BEAUHARNOIS AID SPURNED

Bennett Party Refused Offer of $100,000— Says McRae

OTTAWA, April 30.— General A. C. McRae, Conservative organizer and general Organizer for the Conservative Party, during the Beauharnois Commons investigation debate in the Senate on Friday, read a statement which he said he proposed to make and present to the committee, and which he was desirous to have accept with the same force and effect as though it were made under oath, as it would be if he had it presented to the committee? He had not been presented because counsel for the committee said it did not come within the committee's scope. The statement read as follows:

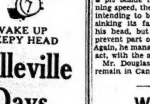
"About two weeks before the election, in July, 1930, Howard Smith called me at the Mount Royal Hotel, Montreal, and said he could get me a $100,000 contribution for the Conservative Party. I asked him who was so enthusiastic about the success of the Beauharnois'; to which I replied, 'Nothing doing.'

Foreman Inquiry

"Then followed a discussion, in which I explained to Mr. Smith the position my Leader (Mr. Bennett) was in, and how he had already taken in the House of Commons on the Beauharnois project; that, in my judgment, an inquiry into the Beauharnois development was a certainty if we carried the country; that it was patent why such a contribution was being offered and in the circumstances, if I were to accept a dollar of Beauharnois money I would be false to my trust.

"Later in the same week, Mr. Smith again called on me, and said he thought the offer could be increased to $200,000. I told him the same principle still applied to a $200,000 contribution as to a $100,000 contribution, and I could not entertain it. After some discussion, he asked if I did not think I was taking a lot of responsibility on my shoulders in refusing the offer. I asked him what he had in mind, and he suggested it is up to the Leader. I told him that I would do so, that Mr. Bennett would be in Montreal in a few days, but I was quite certain what his answer would be.

"When Mr. Bennett arrived the following Sunday, I referred to the matter to him, and his immediate reply was 'Not a damned cent.' The answer was so inevitable that there was no further discussion about it. Mr. Smith called on me the next day, and I told him the chief said: 'Not a damned cent.' That ended it."



Policy, Not Expediency

General McRae also emphatically denied the statement of Mr. Macdonald, K.C., at Quebec on October 20th last, that the return of the contribution by the Conservative Party to Beauharnois was a matter purely of party expediency and not public policy.

"That statement of the right honourable gentleman is absolutely and totally untrue," said General McRae. "It was not tainted a dollar from the Beauharnois interests, and never accepted a dollar from them, and consequently never returned a dollar to them—Beauharnois, Sweezey or others. I detailed Beauharnois interest. On the contrary, from start to finish I steadily and positively declined to accept any contribution from that source."

The most forceful lives have been those whose early years were acquainted with the value and necessity of work.

Foreign countries have increased their interest in American engineering practices since the financial depression, it is reported.

ONLY REGRET IS NO LION

Geologist Returns From Rhodesia With Thrilling Tales

Montreal— (By The Canadian Press)—Equipped with two years experience in the wilds of Northern Rhodesia, George Vibert Douglas, Canadian geologist, arrived here recently with many thrilling tales, and only one regret—that of not shooting a lion.

His knowledge of venomous snakes however, is based on first-hand information. One day, he relates, while making his way through the bush, one of the native boys screamed and jumped sideways. Wheeling, Douglas saw the head of a huge python darting towards him. He had time to discharge his rifle only once, but fortunately it was a clean hit, blowing the head of the creature to pieces.

Entailing even more action was his dispatching of a cobra, this time while travelling in an automobile. Only a shoulder of his quarry saw the bloated snake's head rising from a pit beside the road. With lightning speed, the cobra shot its venom intending to blind its victim before sinking its fangs. Douglas ducked his head, but not fast enough to prevent part of it touching his ear. Again, he managed the coup de grâce, with the aid of his rifle.

Mr. Douglas says he intends to remain in Canada permanently.

Oh! that sagging bed—no matter how carefully you make it each day—you just cannot make it look right. Its dejected sag spoils the appearance of the loveliest room. PARTRIDGES TO BE IMPORTED

64 of Hardy Game Birds Shipped From Alberta to Quebec

Montreal — (By The Canadian Press)—Sportsmen and lovers of game will welcome the news that the much-discussed plan of importing Hungarian partridge into the province of Quebec has been brought to fruition.

Sixty-four of these hardy game birds have been shipped recently from the farm of S. B. Benditz at Leduc, Alberta, and released in the township of Rouse under the guardianship of the Provincial Division of the Fish and Game Association. The district there seems to be an ideal one for the "Huns" with its rolling pasture land dotted over with small clumps of spruce, birch and hawthorn where they can find ample shelter and quantities of food.

The task of importing and laying down of these partridges was undertaken by a small committee headed by C. R. Holland and sponsored by the Province of Quebec Association for the Protection of Fish and Game and confidence is expressed that the experiment will prove successful.

"Unemployment?"

He nodded. "I ran into young Shepard there," he said. "I had heard Dwight left the bank." He refrained from mentioning the source of his information. "I understand that he and Lynn are —well, aren't just as yet."

Sarah said hastily, "How ridiculous! They're always quarreling about nothing at all."

"Are you sure it's nothing, this time?"

"Why?" She looked at him, looked away again.

"Just for the sake of argument. Only last summer, when we were all together, Lynn honored me with her confidence. That is, she mentioned no names, but being a normally astute soul, I guessed. I am not at liberty to repeat what she told me, but I will say this much; she and Tom disagree upon a matter of business ethics. If Tom followed his inclination in the matter, she was through with him. I take it he has followed his inclination," said Dwight, and rose.

Sarah rose also. "David, what are you going to do? You promised——"

"I think I have been absolved from my promise," he said.

"No. No."

But he had gone, stopping in Norton's room with a casual nod at young Hastings, in which Norton the usual holiday greeting. Sarah stood where he had left her, looking after him.

CHAPTER XXXVII

Many things were not yet clear to her, but a nebulous theory was forming in her mind. That night she went to Lynn's apartment and found her consenting bread and milk and cocoa before rushing off to a class.

"Sit down," invited Lynn. "I'm almost through."

"No, Lynn, please tell me the truth this time. Did Tom know about this merger proposition a long time ago and did he speak to you about it? Did you disapprove of his attitude?"

After a moment Lynn nodded.

"And you think now——"

"Sarah, what am I to think?" She flung her hands out. "Tom's new rumor; the stock buying; Tom's new job; his new car. He has broken his word."

"Are you sure?"

"He hasn't been near me since I accused him of it. Her lips shook. Sarah went back upstairs. She had not spoken to David Dwight of this last summer, Dwight knew. It was possible Dwight knew, also, of a position to know more, to know definitely that Tom Shepard had broken on his word.

But what was more important to Sarah was that Dwight had told her that he was absolved from his.

Downstairs Lynn was putting on her hat and coat. How Sarah had come by her information she did not know. Possibly Mr. Norton had been talking to her. The telephone rang. Tom? She ran to the instrument.

"Lynn? This is David Dwight."

She said, after a moment, "How do we get you get my number? It isn't in the book."

"I saw Sarah today," he answered.

That was odd. Sarah had not spoken of him, yet she had given Dwight her telephone number. Lynn dismissed it from her mind. As a matter of fact, the telephone number, neatly typed, had been in plain view on a sheet of numbers lying on Sarah's desk. Dwight remembered numbers.

He said, now, "I've missed you. Will you be home this evening or tomorrow night?"

There is a curious little road house not very far from Yonkers. It has an "authentic" atmosphere of a cliff overhung, and is perched on a cliff overlooking a deep ravine from which the pines figured heavily. Gay lights, with dark, straight trunks. The inn itself is bright, evenings, with Japanese lanterns, and is run by two sisters. If the cuisine is not precisely what you think, American and better French food is served there, and of recent years, the Cherry Blossom has found it expedient to engage one of the better orchestras in Manhattan.

For a long time, and so very many a night have brought the three Blossom people here, about the Cherry Blossom. Lately, however, the orchestra, priding itself, always, upon having for excellent sustaining programs, placed a semipermanent installation in the road house and on divers nights brought the turbid or violent music made by the modernist descendants of African kings into the corners of rugs in colonially termed "millions of listeners."

In this inn the art forms of remote continental reached out and touched Lynn figuratively speaking, for the absolute.

Dwight had taken here there the evening of their reunion. He had been very amiable that evening, and Lynn had accused him of a wish to rears of attention.

"It's not altogether my fault; and not my inclination. Sarah"—he raised a whimsical eyebrow—"has a grudge against Miss Christmas metahhor, that."

Lynn said unsmilingly, "She needn't have bothered. That's over, you know."

"No. I didn't know. I'm sorry. No, that's a lie. I'm not sorry. But if you're unhappy, Lynn, then I must be sorry."

"It's hard. I—please don't talk about it," she said, vainly trying to control her lips. "Let's dance, shall we?"

Later, driving her home, he said, "Christmas won't be so very merry this year, will it? Suppose we celebrate together, I'm lonely, too."

"You, lonely!"

"Why not? Acquaintances, friends, even, can't make up for other things."

She thought he spoke of his broken home, his children; she touched his hand and said, "I do understand." She didn't of course.

After a moment he drew his hand gently away. "It is sad, or crash to the ground the delicate structure of confidence he was assisting her to build.

"You're a darling," he said lightly. But he had not thought of his flat-footed, flat-chested wife or of his unsalnly youngsters. As Christmas time he dismissed the latter from his mind by opening his check book.

"I have to have Christmas dinner with Sarah in the middle of the day," she told him.

"Then give me the evening. We'll be very foolish. We'll do all sorts of absurd things. Is it a bargain?"

It was a bargain. She made her excuses to Sarah, not very well. Sarah commented coldly, "I hoped you'd stay with us."

"I promised—someone," Lynn told her.

Afterward she wondered why she had not told her all the truth. But at the moment she could not. Sarah wouldn't approve; Sarah, moreover, had been interfering, just as Jennie had said she would.

Jennie was in a flurry for Christmas, a great box of it, tied with red ribbon, "Good luck" on the card, "and happy days. Come see me on Christmas if you can."

That meant that the mysterious Jake was at home with his people. Lynn took a bus early Christmas morning and went to Jennie's. Jennie, in a negligee, opened the door to her friend. "Dave my smoke the day off," she explained.

Jennie had trimmed a Christmas tree. She displayed Jake's gifts—an ermine wrap, stockings by the dozen, a wrist watch, candy, flowers, fruit. "He's a good egg," she admitted, yawning.

The apartment was just as you'd think it might be; long-legged dolls and frilly cushions; lots of furniture; inherent radio money may buy. Jennie in lace and chiffon, trailed about the place, disenlisted.

"Has Tom said anything about Slim? she asked Lynn.

"Not every much," Lynn answered carefully. "I—haven't been seeing much of Tom lately."

Jennie nodded. "So I gathered from what Slim said." She pointed to a little package clumsily tied in red paper. "There's what he sent me," she told Lynn. A pair of gloves —wrong size; some handkerchiefs; a funny little pin fashioned in the shape of a perky Scottie, and a Christmas card. "Sorter sweet," said Jennie, low. But in a moment, as Lynn laid the things back in their box, "Drink?" asked Jennie, moving toward the c'Lave.

"Heavens, no! At the hour of the morning? Jennie, you're not going to——"

"Believe it or not, I am! Look here, Lynn, I'm bored to bones. I even look forward to going to work," Jennie admitted.

The long blue eyes were tired. The wheaten hair had lost some of its luster. She was bigger than ever, a little haggard.

"You and Tom been fighting again?" she inquired.

Lynn stiffened. "No. It's over and done with, that's all."

"Darned shame." Jennie stared at her, at the gloves, at the pin. "Well, it's not my business," she decided. "Have a little drink. It's a mistake for two sops to love each other a lot. What do you say to a session with me? We'll be pleasure for the rest of the trouble you have to wade through." Her face was sweet.

Lynn asked quickly, trying to divert her from the subject of Tom and herself. "Is it Slim, Jennie?"

"Yeah. Dave's all right, but——" Jennie, without anger, "with his long legs and his eyes like a hungry dog's, my dear, he's the child of always couple of inches too short. Slim's not much conversation. She was on my own, free. That's funny isn't it, Lynn? I'm not domesticity. I'm this dump, alone nights—lonely, it's different, I've got to work my head off. I'm not used to lonely.

Lynn left her presently, Standing at the door, Jennie said:

"Why you wouldn't, I'll stick around here, go out to dinner, come home and wait for a long-distance call—not that it matters, Lynn, what do you do with yourself now that you're free?"

Lynn said, "I have my work up at Columbia, I'm busy, Jennie." Lately, David Dwight has been taking me out. . . . I'm sorry I'm going to take your place out of town, the Cherry Blossom."

Jennie looked at her. "I saw you there once."

"You did? "Lynn stared. "Why didn't you come over and speak to us?"

"Pat chance! Lynn, you are a kid! I was with—oh, a gang. We had a private room. You didn't think I wanted to let you know I was there so you could help carr yme out?"

"Jennie!"

"Run along and eat your turkey," said Jennie, and gave her a gentle push, "and don't fret about me. I'm like—everything is Jake. That's pretty good, isn't it? That hands me a laugh!"

She was still laughing, lonely, forlorn laughter as Lynn closed the door.

Christmas with Sarah was a failed merry affair; a small tree and presents, and a heavy dinner; not much conversation. She knew it was on my own, free. That's funny isn't it, Lynn? I'm not domesticity. I'm this dump, alone nights—lonely, it's different, I've got to work my head off. I'm not used to lonely.

But her eyes were alone. Why hadn't Jennie left his card with the flowers? She'd rather have known at once than longed—and prayed.

CHAPTER XXXVIII

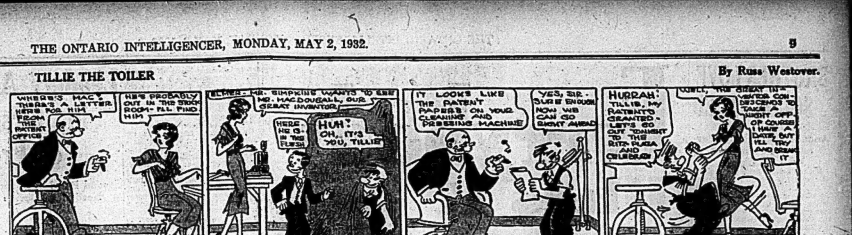
"We're going riding," he said, "where there's snow. On the island. Go upstairs and see what Santa brought you."

She ran up the stairs under the friendly eyes of the man Wilkins. In the bedroom she found a suitcase fitted, stamped with her initials; and in the suitcase a winter sports outfit, including, sweater, scarf, beret, chamois coat, amusing trousers, gloves.

"Oh!" her voice floated down to him.

Wilkins put his head around the door. "Carry it for you mum?"

She went downstairs, laughing. "Commander Byrd," she hailed him, and smiled. "Shall I put them on now?"



"It's not antarctic but it's something of an expedition," he warned her. "Not, wait till we get there."

Presently, the suitcase and one of his were put in the car. They drove out of town swiftly through the twilight. It was a while Christmas. Lighted trees shone from the windows of apartments and houses and from churchyards.

"It's beautiful," said Lynn, listening to the chimes.

They had left the town behind them. There was little traffic and Dwight drove fast. Beyond Great Neck he turned into a long, snow-rutted lane.

Paulyitch pretended to show the boy how to secure the ape should it exhibit signs of rebellion during the trip. Jack laughed: "That's not necessary—he'll do whatever I tell him." "Come here!" said he to the ape, so as I tell you, or you can't take him to Dover!" The boy did as told. Still smiling, he held his hands behind him. Th Russian slipped the noose over Jack's wrists and quickly knotted the cord tight.

The fellow's attitude of friendliness now changed immediately! With an ugly oath he wheeled his prisoner about, hurling him violently to the floor. His fingers sought the boy's throat as he grinned down horribly into his victim's face. "Your father ruined me," he mumbled crasily. "This will pay him some! Now I will bring him to see you body—and tell him the ape did it!" the twisted fiend cackled with gloating laughter.

Suddenly the room echoed with the growls of the maddened ape! Its great muscles surged out beneath its shaggy hide. Paulvitch looked up, his face white with terror—THE APE WAS FREE! With a single bound the beast fell upon the man, wrenching him from the struggling boy. Great fingers sank into the wretch's throat; there was a snapped shut, and when they closed the breath of life had gone forever from the dastardly Paulvitch.

Assisted by Akut, the boy worked over the bonds that held him. . . . Finally they yielded their secret. He cut the cords from his body. Opening one of his bags he drew forth some garments. His plans were well laid! The beast docilely did all that Jack directed. In the midnight stillness, under the shelter of the darkness, no casual observer would have noticed that one of the two was an ape!

A machine that shuffles and deals four hands of bridge in 30 seconds or less has been invented.

There are approximately 2,000 lepers in the United States.

More than 250,000 people saw the French art show in London this year.

Piles Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting

Itching, bleeding protruding piles are caused by bad circulation of the blood in the infected parts. The parts become weak flabby, slow to heal. Only an internal remedy can remove the cause—that's why salves, suppositories and cutting fail. Dr. Leonhardt's prescription, HEM-ROID succeeds because it removes congestion, restores circulation, brain and strengthens the diseased parts. HEM-ROID has such a wonderful record of quickly ending even piles of long standing that J. S. McKeown's Drug Store says one bottle of HEM-ROID Tablets must end your pile agony or money back.

BROTHER LOVE SOCIAL NEED

Annual Oddfellow's Parade and Sermon at John St. Church

Headed by the Belleville Municipal Band the members of the fraternity of Oddfellows held a church attended divine service, at John Street United Church on Sunday morning. Well over 100 members of the Canton under George Kerr, of 194 Bellevue Ave., and 50 Sea Rt. S. under G. N. E. Pollitt, of Mispah Lodge No. 127, under G. W. Mrs. A. Lazier and of the Rebekah Encampment No. 59 under C. P. Geo. Connors were met by the Quinte Lodge of Rebekahs No. 133, under Sister Mrs. A. O'Connor and escorted into the church where an inspiring address was delivered by the Rev. Robt. Hall, pastor of the church.

"True neighbourliness" was the subject upon which the Rev. Hall spoke to the members of the visiting branches of the fraternity of Oddfellows and the congregation present. Mr. Hall chose for his text the parable quoted in the scriptures known as that of "The Good Samaritan". Mr. Hall was of the opinion that the present world would be far better off if more theological arguments of this description were used as controversy today. He pointed out that it had been more deeds which had caused the various breaks in the Christian faith during the generations past and noted many controversies which had taken place among the Christian teachings in the past. Jesus Christ came to preach good tidings and to try to help his neighbours wherever they might be, pointed out Mr. Hall as he related how the Master had never been tempted by worldly things but tried in humility to carry the word of the gospel by stating this parable: "Go thou and do likewise".

Mr. Hall pointed out that it was not the color or the creed all were God's children, but to learn and learn to love each other regardless of whether they were black, red or brown or whether they are Japanese, Chinese or Indian. He said these were the teachings left by our Lord, "Thou shall love thy neighbours as thyself" was the text the speaker, Mr. Hall was of the opinion that it was one of the greatest needs of today more today than ever before in the face of the fact that due to the fact that we are closer to the other countries of the world today than ever before and that in their next town a few years ago, due to newspapers, radios and the faster means of locomotion such as aeroplanes which are now in evidence", Mr.Hall stressed that we need more "brotherly love" in the world today than ever before. Mr. Hall looking on the world like a crowded street car where there is to be a certain amount of neighbourliness shown, when strangers stand by.

In conclusion Mr. Hall pointed out that "we must learn the virtue and wisdom of the golden rule" and that we wish to attain brotherly love." "Any development of peace, or any trouble, as we all depend on each other", said Mr. Hall when pointing out that "other people's welfare was our welfare and therefore we should accept the Christian teachings although they are hard to follow and difficult in the present world". Mr. Hall spoke directly to the members of the Order and urged them in saying "Your fraternity is a school for the teachings of Him who is known best, the Son and Him likewise".

Mr. Hall welcomed the members of the visiting branches of the Oddfellows to John Street Church, where they gathered to attend divine worship yesterday, on behalf of the church and the congregation.

A beautiful three link floral display lay at the foot of the pulpit as an emblem of the order which was attending the service. During the service the choir sang with attention "The Heavens are telling" while a trio consisting of Mrs. Geo. S. Hunt, Miss Leona Riggs and Mr. Jas. Bannier, sang "Father Protector", Mr. Bannier, Riggs and the choir leader of John Street Church played the accompaniments of the vocal selection played during the offertory was "The Pilgrims Chorus".

Following the divine service the members of the various branches of the order of Oddfellows marched back to the Oddfellow's Temple, again headed by the Belleville Municipal Band.

CAR IS SAVED FROM BURNING

Force Windows to Get at Blaze Started By Cigarette Butt

Trenton, May 2 (Special) — Due to the promptness of the police department, a car parked on Dundas has was saved from being destroyed by fire. The owner of the car, Mr. C. P. Chalmers, 66 of Millard St., Rochester, N.Y., had evidently dropped a cigarette stub in the car through a window. Smoke was noticed in the interior of the car and the police were called. On their arrival they found the car, a Buick Coupe, was locked, and were forced to break one of the windows in order to get at the fire which was soon extinguished with a chemical pump. The cushions in the car were badly burned.

Season Opens

The trout fishing season opens today and men who suffer no circumstances could arise before eight in the morning, will now be up and are by daylight. Indications are the widows it will now be trout widows. Equipment of all kinds will be testing streams a wonderful trout lurking in the pools their location a carried secret, will be fished. A long tramp thru the brush and steadily along the streams a casting under likely looking boulders and logs net the fishermen about half a dozen small ones. Too many people wish to fish and too few wish to aid in the stocking of our many streams. Ideal trout streams abound in the vicinity but due to the fact that we have too many fishermen and not enough sportsmen one is unable to get a decent catch nearer than Maynooth. A club should be formed of the fishermen in this neighborhood, each member securing the maximum number possible from the government each year. In this way we would soon have some fairly decent fishing.

Cars Collide

Mr. Fred Culverson, while driving a De Soto sedan owned by Harold Crowe, east on highway number 2 Saturday afternoon struck a Chevrolet car driven by a Mr. Whaley of Toronto. Mr. Culverson was attempting to pass the car when it went to turn up the Smithfield side road. Owing to the fact that he was alongside of it when it turned he collided with Whitley's rearing the ten

Leaders Are Elected in First Balloting of French Election

Second Poll Next Sunday Needed to Decide Leader

HUGE VOTE

Over Nine Million Go to Polls With No Disorder

Paris, May 2—Returns from 500 out of the 615 constituencies in yesterday's election for the Chamber of Deputies show that 217 Deputies were elected on the first ballot, and the remaining 283 went into the second ballot.

The standing by parties at five o'clock this morning was as follows:

Republican Union	26
Left Republicans	26
Independent Radicals	20
Radicals and Radical Socialists	55
Republican Socialists	5
Total	217

The political groups of the Senate showed a slight improvement in position, which indicated that the second ballot would be vitally important.

Paris, May 2—Early morning returns from 150 districts in the French general election accentuated a swing started in the first. In forty gains and losses there was little change. But the votes cast for the Radical Socialists and the Socialists indicated they were likely to increase their number on the ballot next Sunday.

The Radical Socialists cannot be considered final or definite. Another day's returns, however, beginning and of saw-offs lies ahead before Frances gives her final verdict on May 8.

And while next Sunday's ballot will be the decisive one, present indications are that France will return a Chamber charged with a vote for moderate counsels.

Premier Herriot Retained

The chief party leaders were all successful on the first ballot. First to be returned was Premier Herriot of Edouard Herriot, leader of the Radical-Socialists, who in Lyons would be classed as leader of a Liberal Opposition. Then Premier Andre Tardieu's re-election by Belfort was announced, the frontier territory regarded loyal to the Parisian who leads the Left Republicans. Then Paul Painleve, Oddly enough, both Tardieu and Herriot received 11,000 votes, but Herriot had about a thousand votes in hand because he necessary 11 per cent. of votes cast.

Leon Blum, Socialist leader, was elected in Narbonne, and the leader of the Democratic Republican Union, Louis Marin, was in the Chamber from the Socialists in party tendency. Louis Marin, who also returned to the Chamber, is a prominent figure who has been again seen in the Chamber are former Premier Paul Painleve, Republican Socialist; Edouard Daladier, former leader of the Radical-Socialists; Georges Bonnet, Radical-Chaulemps of the Radical-Socialists, and Leon Bolmont, Socialist Speaker of the Chamber.

Wins Without Opposition

M. Boulsson indeed ran away from his Communist opponent, M. Bidi, winning by a majority of 10,000, as in the 1928 elections, M. Boulsson, aged 51 was the only candidate campaigning.

Other stalwarts of the Tardieu Ministry, which went into office with a majority of 300 at the second Laval Government, were nearly all successful in gaining re-election. Among them were Pierre Etienne Flandin, Finance Minister; Georges Mandel, Minister of Colonies; Paul Reynaud, Minister of Justice; Camille Chautemps, Minister of Public Health; Charles Chermier, Minister of Public Works, and Etienne Richie, Under-Secretary to the Department of defense, following Tardieu's lead in the first ballot.

Two Under-Secretaries campaign again for the second ballot—Pierre Cathala, Under-Secretary to the Prime Minister, who read M. Tardieu's last campaign speech, while the Premier was laid up with laryngitis, and Charles Pechin, Under-Secretary of Public Works.

It was estimated that 9,000,000 French electors—90 per cent—have the vote—went to the polls despite the rainfall in most parts of the Republic. Polling took place in 611 constituencies. Four other districts part of the colonial representation vote later.

In three districts, the name of a dead man was on the ballot papers —in the second districts of Bordeaux, where Henri Lorin, Social-Democrat, died, and Marseilles, died suddenly yesterday; in the fourth district of St. Etienne, where Antoine Durafour, the Radical-Socialist member, died on Tuesday, and in the 2nd district of Grasse, where Jean Gnols, former Socialist Deputy, was killed in an accident on Saturday. Gnol's Foe Not Returned

Franklin-Boullion, Leader of the Right Radicals, and an old antagonist of the late Aristide Briand, was erroneously declared re-elected. He has already been active in efforts to unite the moderate parties, and will go before the second ballot. George Scapini, blind deputy, was returned in one of the Parisian constituencies.

In all France no candidate had a harder campaign that Georges Mandel, who sponsored the famous electoral law, which would have suppressed the second ballot, and given the vote to woman, but meanwhile being passed the Chamber and thrown out in the Senate. Mandel has to go to the second ballot in Lesparre, Gironde Department. His bitter meetings generally ended in riots, and when he tried to hold meetings confined to his own supporters the Opposition battered in the doors.

DRIVERLESS CAR RUNS INTO CROWD

Coupe Dashes Into Peterboro Crowd Injuring Ten

PETERBORO, May 2.—A driverless motor car ran wild at one of the city's busiest intersections yesterday afternoon, shot across a corner, And over a swath through a group of humanity like a reaper through a field of grain, knocking down and injuring 10 persons before a boy with presence of mind stopped its rush.

The injured were: Matthew A. Jamieson, Peterboro', head injuries and shock; Raymond Bulmer, Smith Township, cut head and face; Mrs. Archibald Bulmer, Smith Township, shoulder, head injuries and shock; Edna Bulmer, aged 5, laceration of forehead; Gordon Bulmer, aged 5, Peterboro', severe head injuries; Mrs. Thomas Jamieson, Lakefield, lacerations, bruises and shock; F. B. L. Hatton, Peterboro, injured leg; Reta O'Toole, aged 11, Peterboro', leg injuries; Mrs. Hatton, Lakefield, bruises and shock; Adam Cox, Peterboro', owner of the runaway car, injured leg.

Streets Crowded

The streets were jammed with people waiting to watch an automobile parade. Suddenly Adam Cox, Board of Works foreman, drove his Chevrolet coupe, a closed coupe, which stalled at the intersection of Hunter street. Cox jumped from the car, left the door open and forward knocking him down and the machine, driverless, into the crowd at the corner.

Men, women and children were swept off their feet and into the roadway, while the heavy machine plowed over Sidney Bulmer. Constable Hunter street, where scores of other people were standing in the path of the car and apparently destined to be struck down. The truck will behind them. The coupe, however, crashed into a Hydro guy wire, recoiled, then swung around and stopped against the wire again. The interruption allowing a motorist time to jump into the car and shut off the engine. First Aid to Injured

Then the crowd turned to the task of picking up the injured. They were taken to the city police station and to the hospital.

Constable Bachelor was widely known throughout Peterboro and Victoria counties, and was secretary of the local police commission, clerk of the municipality of Dysart, a member of the school board of the city and a church both. Besides his wife, he leaves his father and mother.

LAID CHARGE OF MURDER AS MAN IS KILLED

Ten-inch Knife Wielded as Culmination to Drunken Quarrel

CLAIM CONFESSION

Two Men, Including Police Constable, Held as Witnesses

Toronto, May 2—On impulsous stab of a ten-inch carving knife killed James Donald, 44, truck driver, in a drunken quarrel at 491 Queen Street east early Sunday and had its swift sequel in the arrest of Jake McDowell, 33, on a charge of murder. The woman had been living with Donald as his wife.

The stabbing came as the culmination of a drinking session attended by Constable Evans Tran Thomas (4580) of Dundas Street east division, and Ernest Cromarty, 28, of 152 Stephenson Avenue, who left the party just prior to the murder. These men were taken into custody as material witnesses. P.C. Thomas was off duty Saturday night.

In a confession to police yesterday, the accused said that Mr. Donald snoring on the couch in the kitchen and accompanied her pause to the door. After they left she went across the street to get some ginger ale, but, finding the store closed returned. As she entered the kitchen Donald spoke harshly to her, she claims, for making so much noise.

She answered him back and he got up and made a lunge at her. She grabbed for the knife.

"I don't know what happened after that ... everything went black," she told police.

Double Hi Is Dead

Repeatedly after she had been taken to headquarters for questioning, she said she didn't believe "Jimmy" was dead.

"I can't believe it," she cried again and again.

For some minutes following the stabbing neither the accused husband or the woman with whom he has lived during the past six years, realized how severely he was wounded.

Decidedly under the influence of liquor, according to police, it took several minutes before the man became conscious of his wounds.

When the woman saw him weakening she ran excitedly out of the house calling for help. Constable Thomas was near by and responded. He called in Detective Cromarty and the wounded man was rushed to St. Michael's Hospital where he died before arrival.

Detectives Inspectors Frank Crowe and William McAllister were dispatched from headquarters and commenced an investigation which was not completed until late last night.

CALL DECARY, EX-C.N.R. DIRECTOR OVERLEASE

Fred W. Harcourt, Prominent Lawyer and Mason, Dies in Toronto

Robust Words Hurled Across Room Charges Fly Thick and Fast While Thornton Residence is Under Fire

Former Director Decary Will Be Summoned to Appear Before Railway Committee to Give Evidence on Leasing of Pine Street House.

MAJOR POWER'S PROTEST

G. H. Sequin, Notary Tells of Transaction — Sir Henry Thornton Called But Had No Part in Completion of Negotiations For House.

Ottawa, May 3 (By The Canadian Press)—The thunderclouds which have been lowering over the official residence of the Canadian National Railways President, on Pine Avenue, Montreal, for the past few weeks again broke in the House of Commons Railways and Shipping Committee today after an hour's debate in which robust words were hurled across the room and charges flying thick and fast. "Graft," "breach of trust" and other robust expressions were bandied around; and the end is not yet.

Former Director E. R. Decary of the Canadian National Railways, will be summoned to give evidence.

It was on Mr. Decary's solicitation, according to the testimony of G. H. Sequin today, that Mr. Sequin completed the transaction with the Montreal Trust Co., which ended with the leasing to the C.N.R. of the Pine Avenue house. The official with whom the negotiations were conducted will also appear before the committee.

Mr. Sequin, a notary, was the Montreal Trust Co. and with that sum bought the official residence, paying therefore $175,000 for the property and $10,000 for the furniture.

Two Per Cent.

He had obtained the money at 1-1-3 per cent. and the lease he gave to the C.N.R. was for 8 1-2 per cent. He explained that the extra 2 per cent. was to take care of amortization of "eventualities."

"In other words," Peter McGibbon (Cons.) Muskoka), "you took a graft of two per cent."

Strong objection was taken to the charge made by Major G. Power, (Lib. Quebec South) protesting against "Brow-beating", the witness. "To R. H. Gagnon, (Lib. Quebec South), Chairman of the Committee. This witness declared that the house and the financial arrangements incidental to the deal were both "Mr. Decary's child".

Called Breach of Trust

"Then," said Mr. Hanson, "Decary, in his capacity as a director of the C.N.R. bought the house and leased it to the railways, a transaction in which he got a profit."

This action, he declared later, was a "breach of trust on the part of Decary".

Again Major Power protested. Such a charge was a severe one against a man of Mr. Decary's standing.

Sir Henry Thornton, President of the C.N.R. gave evidence, but had no direct contact in the negotiations. His testimony was largely corroborated that of Mr. Sequin.

Engineer Raffled

OTTAWA, May 3.—(By the Canadian Press)—Government ownership and the words passed in the House of Commons Railways and Shipping Committee today when the subject of Sir Henry Thornton's official residence in Montreal, was once again under discussion G. H. Sequin, notary, who drew the deeds papers of the firm of Decary, Barlow and Joron, was summoned to the witness chair and told how he had "put through the purchase deal".

Mr. Sequin's friend, Major Peter McGibbon (Cons. Muskoka), Sergeant-at-Arms.

He told how, under instructions from E. R. Decary, at that time a director of the Canadian National Railways, he had borrowed $185,000 from the Montreal Trust Company in August 1930 and with that had purchased the Pine Avenue Residence, leasing it to the C.N.R. He had borrowed the money at 6 1-2 per cent. interest and had charged the C.N.R. 8 1-2 per cent. he said.

He (Sequin) had the property and leased it on the same day, the transaction being completed on August 8th.

Why the Hurry?

That, according to Dr. McGibbon, was the day on which the new government took office. What, he asked, was the hurry? He (Sequin) said that Mr. Decary was "just a tool in the hands of Mr. Decary". an expression to which objection was taken.

Mr. Sequin declared that he did not get the 8 1-2 per cent as interest so much as rent plus two per cent. for amortization of the principle.

"So the C.N.R. financed the whole thing and amortized it at 2 per cent." said Dr. McGibbon. "Who owns the house?"

"I am the registered owner," said Mr. Sequin.

STORK BEATS AUTOMOBILE IN MAD RACE

Brantford, Ont., May 2 — In a race from Hamilton to Brantford, participated in by the stork and an automobile, the bird won out—by a couple pound boy girl, was born to Mr. and Mrs. George Lawton, formerly of this city, now living in Hamilton.

The parents of the couple reside in Brantford and arrangements had been completed to have the happy event occur here. Mr. Stork, however, took little attention to the plans of mere man and the child was born shortly after the car left Hamilton. The mother and child are both doing well in hospital here.

SOMEBODY CAN HAVE ELECTRIC CHAIR CHEAP

Prairie Du Chien, Wis., May 3 —What a shocking bargain this item of unclaimed freight would be!

It's a real electric chair the state used in some prisons for executions and Keeper Jack Tregeder of the Milwaukee Railroad's warehouse for unclaimed and damaged freight says it is for sale.

Whoever it came and for when it was intended is a mystery that he didn't know. It was just unloaded and left on the railroad's freight platform the other day. Ferwell, a 76 year old French Canadian, said it was the "queerest piece of unclaimed freight" he had seen in his 39 years as keeper of the warehouse.

LINDSAY WILL FEED HUNGRY

Town Council Grants $600.00 Aid to Relief Association

LINDSAY, Ont., May 3.—Lindsay will continue giving direct relief to the needy families of the town during May at least and probably June and July too. The town council decided last night in granting $600 to the Citizens' Relief Association to carry on. C. H. Stinson, K.C., Federal Member of this district, told the council he told the Association that the Provincial and Federal Governments will almost certainly continue contributing to direct relief and that definite official announcement has been made yet.

During the winter about 700 people or 10 per cent of Lindsay's population were wearing a brown overbreaker, blue pants black boots and blue cap.

Grieve is five feet and six inches in height; weighs 185 pounds; slim build; brown hair; good teeth; fair complexion; brown eyes. He was wearing brown pants, blue suit coat and vest with a pin stripe and was bareheaded.

The Provincial Police will be very glad to receive any information which may assist in finding these boys and returning them to their homes.

The true use of speech is not so much to express our wants, as to conceal them.

MAY BE NEW RELIEF PLAN

Probably a Committee of Three Will Be Formed

TORONTO, May 3. — Possibility of drastic changes in methods of administering relief in Ontario was intimated by Premier George S. Henry following the Establishment of a committee of three to advise the government concerning the best method of carrying on the municipal relief problem which was proposed by Premier Henry at a conference with Premier R. B. Bennett in Ottawa yesterday, Mr. Henry said today.

No decision has been made as to the personnel of such a committee, however.

There is also a possibility that the province will establish stores where people who are getting direct relief would be able to secure their food supplies and other necessaries, he said.

Chinese Vice-Minister For Foreign Affairs Injured

SHANGHAI, May 3.—Almost on the eve of a final Sino-Japanese Armistice in the Shanghai area, The Japanese authorities reported Chinese snipers had slain one of their Chapel sentries and captured a butcher.

Four hundred blue jackets were rushed ashore to the new marine quarters for the missing sentry. The body of his comrade was found when relief arrived to take over the post.

Students Attack Delegate

Shanghai, May 3.—(AP)—A band of 100 Chinese students attacked and painfully injured Quo Tai-Chi, Chinese Vicechinister for Foreign Affairs and principal delegate at the Peace Parleys, here today, as a result in resumption of the Parleys was indefinitely postponed.

The mob attacked Mr. Quo as he was leaving his home in the French Concession. As the attack was committed the minister they accused him of intending to sign an agreement unfavorable to China.

Students Clubbed

French police scattered the students with their clubs.

Chinese authorities announced yesterday the Peace Parleys with Japan would be resumed today and an agreement settling the Shanghai difficulties might be signed tomorrow or Thursday.

The peace terms were not made known, but it was rumored the Japanese would agree to withdraw toward the International settlement and the Chinese would remain where they were, in a wide circle about the city.

Early Solution

Tokyo, May 3.—(AP)—The Japanese Government saw no obstacle to an early solution of the difficulties in Shanghai today, an official spokesman said, and looked for the signing of a Peace Agreement soon.

Because of this assurance, he said, the withdrawal of another division of troops from Shanghai was planned, leaving only Lieutenant-General Kenichi Uyeda ninth division there as a semi-permanent Japanese Garrison.

Little prospect of convening a round table conference of the powers at Shanghai was seen in official circles here, however, because of Chinese objections, but satisfaction with the present situation was expressed in view of the prospect of a truce agreement.

TEMPERS RISE ON RAIL TIES

Air Grows Hot and Word Battle Ensues Over Supplies

Ottawa, May 3 (CP)— The question of supplying ties for Canadian National Railways resulted in another display of temper in the railway committee of the House of Commons today. The matter was brought up when Senator Smith for Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals, left the chair. Under the air grew hot, while the minister, the chairman, R. B. Hanson, and other members of the committee engaged in a word battle. Finally one of the new departments like a storm, proved, however a passing squall and the committee adjourned quietly to meet this afternoon as four o'clock.

2 DETECTIVES SCRATCHED BY COLORED GIRL

Toronto May 3—Sheila Harrison, colored, was sentenced to two years imprisonment for stealing $70 from a man today, and she objected very forcibly immediately sentence had been passed. The woman became screamed and yelled. Two detectives who attempted to quiet her were badly scratched but she was eventually carried from the courtroom to the cells.

SUCKERS LEAVE GO UP STREAM

"Run" on the River Becoming Mere Crawl at Present

What was formerly a "run" in the Moira River developed to a mere crawl as the suckers which were so plentiful in the water disappear up the stream to their spawning grounds in the inland lakes. This year the catch of any of the fish can be seen by those who care to visit the stream and very few visitors implements designed for their capture. The fish there has been a greater demand for them than ever before. Hundreds of them have been taken from the water during the Minister of the river, and with many families in the city they have formed a staple article of diet when the larders were depleted of other stocks. While the run was on many of the unemployed resorted to the fish shed, and by selling the fish they had caught, from door to door in the city and rural sections, together with fish pole are about the only fishermen which are to be seen along the banks of the river at present.

NO ROAD CAMPS NEXT WINTER

Announcement to This Effect Made By Government

Port Arthur, May 3—Trans-Canada highway camps are not likely to be in operation next winter, Hon. William Finlayson, Ontario Minister of Lands and Forests, warned city councils and Chambers of Commerce in Fort Arthur and Port William yesterday.

He said the labored cities must be prepared to do more for unemployed next winter than they had done this year, because direct relief was cheaper and it was all the government could do.

Road work will be confined almost exclusively to maintenance and there are poor prospects for any elaborate programs on the trans-Canada highway because it costs $15 to $20 per man to keep the men in the camp, only one-quarter of that amount being for wages. The Minister said Port Arthur and Port William, along with North Bay, were the only cities the game inasmuch as they had considerably more relief to meet than their rightful share, and he had been doing enough relief work on their own account.

A good crowd turned out and they were not disappointed in any way as diversified events kept the evening interesting throughout. Mr. Jack Norris, president of the Trenton Men's Anglican Club, expressed his approval and hearty welcome to the out-of-town clubs which attended. The Rev. A. R. Caldwell, of Marmora, tendered his thanks for the kind invitation to attend one of their host's well known enjoyable evenings. Mr. Jones, of Marmora, gave a violin solo, which was appreciated by all. his imitation of the bagpipes had some of the audience nearly bursting their sides. A quartet, forward in their seats. A quartet also from Marmora, J. Clark, C. A. Sanderson, L. Riggs, and O. Woodhouse sang two very delightful numbers. Mr. Clark of Marmora may not be large in population but certainly isn't lacking in talent. Mr. Wm. Bird, of Trenton, then favored with musical entertainment with a couple of selections on his guitar.

Mr. Wm. Ireland, M.P.P., who had been sitting back with a huge smile of enjoyment, rose and voiced the Hon. Chas. McCrea's regrets in that he was unable to speak at the meeting as he had intended, due to the sudden illness of Mrs. McCrea, but that the people were not to be disappointed, that he had sent a man who would fill the bill. Mr. H. H. MacKay, head of the fish culture department for the province, would speak instead. Mr. McCrea hoped that he would be able to pay his postponed visit later in the season.

Mr. MacKay then proceeded to carry out Mr. McCrea's judgment in that he pleased them by telling the audience more about fish than they had hitherto imagined. The lecture was made doubly attractive by the showing of numerous lantern slides. He pointed out that fish culture was becoming more and more important each year as the population increased to an additional country opened up to fishermen and sportsmen from the United States. In connection with the demand the government had now sixteen established hatcheries distributed over the province. The research work that is being carried on to keep pace with the demand is also furthering the work of the fish hatchery. In speaking of the different bodies of water he said that the Bay of Quinte was the most prolific spawning ground on the North American continent. Its shallow waters and sandy bottom emphasized the importance of not fishing before the close season. One female deposits a liquid over the eggs and continues to hover over them until they are fully saturating fish and at the same time stirring the water over the eggs. It can easily be seen that if the fish is caught as many of them are, out of season, that the thousands of eggs that they carry never hatch or be destroyed by other fish. Mr. MacKay, on finishing his lecture was the recipient of a vote of thanks to Mr. MacKay, which was heartily seconded by the audience, which then adjourned to the basement of the hall where a dainty lunch was awaiting them.

Depression Hits Theatre But Dickens Lifts Theatre Funds

By Thomas T. Champion
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 3 (Canadian Press Cable)—The famous trial scene of Bardell vs. Pickwick certainly was never presented by a more distinguished cast than today, when it was given at a special matinee at the Drury Lane Theatre in aid of the Royal General Theatrical Fund. The Duchess of York attended.

Theatrical degeneration is rampant just now and it was doubly agreeable to record today's event was received in an enthusiastic fashion. The veteran Henry Ainly appeared as Mr. Pickwick, Lauri de Frece as Mrs. Bardell, Comic Diss as Mrs. Cluppins, Sir Gerold Du Maurier as the Judge and Bobby Howes as Sam Weller.

Brandsby Williams, whose impersonations of Charles Dickens' famous characters are as well known in Canada as here, took what is from the dramatic viewpoint the most important role, that of Serjt. Buzfuz. The whole thing went with a great swing from start to finish.

COUPLE TAKEN TO LINDSAY

Alfred Bostock Wanted For Theft But Girl Will Be Freed

Constable Alfred Hodgson of the Provincial Police left for Belleville yesterday and took Alfred Bostock and Violet Graham back to their home town of Lindsay, where Bostock will face a charge of theft and the girl will be released as she was employed previous to his arrest in Belleville.

Bostock and the girl were arrested last week in the "jungle" adjoining the eastern city limits. Both he and the girl pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy and they were held in custody for one week awaiting sentence. They had failed to get in communication with the Lindsay police and it was then discovered that Bostock was wanted in Lindsay for theft.

The young girl was taken back to her home in Lindsay and will no doubt lose her liberty due to the fact that she had merely ran away from home and her parents are quite anxious that she return.

Excavations in downtown Philadelphia recently uncovered cypress stumps, one 17 feet in circumference, which grew there in an earlier geological age.

City and District News

MOVING DAY WAS FAIRLY QUIET

Less activity than has been expected in years, was the answer given by local trucking and moving firms, when queried this morning as to whether or not the first few days of the week had shown any increase of business among them in the matter of moving household furnishings of tenants of homes, who were seeking other locations. While a few residents of the city have acquired new homes during the past week or so, as has been their annual custom ,the majority of them this year were staying put, resulting in a decided drop of business among the movers and others who are indirectly benefitted by the yearly trek to other quarters.

Less calls for them to shut off services and change them over to other locations have also been received by the various water works, gas and electrical departments than in other years.

SYNOD EXECUTIVE MEETS AT KINGSTON

Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, Mr. John Millar and Mr. Ernest Mc-George A. Stokes, Mr. O. B. Scott, Mr. R. Smith, Rev. S. F. Ryers, of Stirling, and Judge McLean of Picton, are in Kingston today attending a meeting of the executive committee of the Diocese of Ontario, which is being held in St. George's Hall.

ACTIVITY IN BUILDING TRADES

Considerable activity in the building trades within the city has been reported for the past few days resulting within the past few days resulting in a considerable increase in employment among the skilled and unskilled workmen. Sun porches, additions to homes and general remodelling progress well, with the attention of many of them. Harcware dealers, lumber companies and bricklayers all seem busy owing to the demands of the builders above alluded to, an increase in business within the past few weeks.

On a number of houses in the city roof shingling has occupied the spare time of tenants "and owners and the sound of the hammer and saw can be heard at all hours. With the new shingle in full swing a very large percentage of other home owners will be found actively engaged in painting and redecorating operations inside and out. The building of several large homes in the city has also accounted for a brisk demand for all classes of building trades.

Several new permits for new houses and alterations on the older ones have been given out by the city engineer already this month.

DAY OLD CHICKS CHIRP AT OFFICE

Hundreds of chirping day old chicks inside the post office this morning caused the department to take on a scene resembling a hatchery, and caused considerable commotion among the customers, who entered the building to hear the incessant peeping of the fellows who were packed in the crates. Questioning the employees elicited the information that the chicks were merely stopping over on their journey from Bridgeburg, destined to a customer in Marysville, who had ordered them from that place some time ago. It is not unusual these days to find the baby chicks in any post office in the country as the tiny things are shipped to all points of the country from the various hatcheries in this province.

DUFFERIN STREET SEWER STARTED

Registration of employed in the city took an upturn this morning with the opening of work on the construction of the sanitary sewer on Dufferin Avenue, which was commenced by the department of public works this morning. Although the whole job will not take very long to finish up it will require a considerable force of men to complete it after the preliminary work, which was started this morning is advanced well enough to put them on. Over a dozen men were at work on it this morning and it is expected, that several more will be added from day to day. Several more men were at work on the back fill of the water main and a number more were at work on the connection of the main at the Lower Bridge.

FLIERS PERFORM STUNTS OVER CITY

Three airplanes, flying in perfect formation over the city this morning, and indulging in several varied aerial gymnastics on the outskirts, attracted a great deal of attention among those, who stopped to observe the various manoeuvers executed by the fliers. One of the first perfect flying days that the district has been favored with for some time past, the weather was the fine flying field on the Trent highway.

WORK PROGRESSING AT CITY FIRE HALLS

With the upstairs room of the hall of No. 1 fire station lighted, except for the last coat of paint, which will be added this week, and when the walls and ceiling have dried up, after they had been recoaced and painted, the men of the department were busy this morning in the downstairs portion of the hall where a great deal of work remains to be done. The plaster on the walls and ceiling in the lower part of the hall is in a very bad condition and is being knocked off in large patches where it has bulged loose from the lath. A considerable amount of patching will be necessary after the loose material is knocked off.

TOO COLD FOR FISHERMEN

Poor Trout Catches Reported From North Country

"Too cold for trout fishing" was the consensus of opinion among the trout enthusiasts who have been in the northern section of the county whipping the streams for the elusive trout. Several large parties which left this city during the early part of the week returned back at the lakes and streams but very poor catches have been reported. A large party which returned to the city yesterday, after an unsuccessful trip which lasted since the beginning of the week said that the fish which were in the streams were very small this year, although they were found in considerable quantity. Other sections of the country report varying success with the emphasis however, on the fact that such fish that are being obtained are rather small. It is explained that the back sections of the country is at least two weeks behind the weather which has been experienced in this district during that period of time. Many of them claim that ice can be found on the shores of some of these lakes yet, and that snow still remains in the gullies of the north sides of the hills. The water in the streams is also quite cold. With warmer water the trout would have been correspondingly large.

SPELLING BEE FORROTARIANS

Bert Findlay Proclaimed Best By J. Owen Hergy Arbiter

A real old-fashioned spelling bee was staged at the weekly meeting of Belleville Rotary Club today. Owen Herity acted as arbiter-school master, while George Stokes and John Kerr were captains of the respective sides. Finally Bert Findlay's spelling ability was developed and it took considerable time before the last of the team was killed off. Spellers were eliminated and one Scholastic Scalp was the ultimate victor. J. B. Findlay won premiums honors as best speller, but the contest was most strenuous. Geo. Stokes had a bunch of splendid prizes on a rabbit bunch of luck for the side captained by John Kerr narrowed down to one whole scholar, Tom Webster, who stood up valiantly against the fire of many lawyers, doctors, school teachers and representatives of the Dept. of Education, until finally overwhelmed by force of numbers—the victory going to Captain Kerr's side. Stokes and his prize speller, Bert Findlay, secretary of the Board of Education.

GEO. STEWART IS SPEAKER

An unusual and interesting address was given the Y's Men's Club last evening by Mr. George Stewart, a member of the staff of the Ontario School for the Deaf for many years.

Introduced by President Mel Blanchard as "a man who has done more for the deaf than perhaps any other in Canada," Mr. Stewart announced the title of his talk as "Follow the Dream", and its inspiration the line "I am the master of my fate; I am the captain of my soul."

"Subject to God's omnipotence," said the speaker, "Man is supposed in choice and will, and every lifetime sees the opportunity of one important choice." This thought the speaker proceeded to have been the purpose behind many of the great efforts of Literature, choosing particularly Tennyson's "Idylls of the King" for analysis. The story of the Knights of the Round Table, Sir Galahad, King Arthur, Launcelot, Perceval and others in the quest for the Holy Grail was in reality an allegory designed to illustrate the constant conflict between man's lower or animal nature and his spiritual urge. Their continual disappointments and wanderings were brought about by their imperfections and only as they realize their imperfections to their fellow men was any measure of success granted them. Thus the knight who on leaving the Round Table, haughtily threw a coin in the leper at the gates of Camelot, gave nothing, but when, on his return from years of wandering, had learned humility and ministered to the beggar personally with his last crust, he gave all he had and was rewarded by a glimpse of that for which he had spent a lifetime seeking.

Many other great poets, Lowell, Longfellow, Oscar Wilde and others were quoted, to show that this "Gleam" was the inspiration for their writing. "To be tender, kind and true, God's Will" said the speaker, "such is the "Gleam" and best of all, this was open alike to rich and poor, ignorant and wise."

Thanks of the Club were aptly expressed by Jim Grimmon.

Alec Weir acted as Sergt.-At-Arms, and Johnny O'Gorman as Song Leader. Next week the members are to stage a Bowling Tournament, to determine the Club's champion.

Police Court

Freeman Maracle, an Indian, resident of the Tyendinaga reserve appeared before Magistrate Mikel this morning on a charge of failing to provide for his 16 year old daughter. Maracle explained that he had left the Bible girl in charge of his cousin but he in turn had turned her over to a Kingston Orphanage. Children's Aid Inspector went to Kingston procured the child and she is today a protege of the local Children's Aid Society. Inspector Huston was quite satisfied when Maracle was called upon by the court to pay the sum of $1.50 a week towards the upkeep of the child.

James Jackson, of Sidney, appeared before Magistrate Mikel this morning, the first of stealing a dressing gown, a dress and other items from a local resident. He was also pleaded guilty while on the second charge of non-support Jackson also pleaded guilty. The accused informed the court that he was married and was at present living with his wife's parents and was willing to work if employment could be obtained.

Mr. Mikel receiving a severe reprimand al the hands of the court. Jackson was given two years' suspended sentence and bound over to keep the peace. His worship warned the accused that he was expected to get a job as soon as possible regardless of the distance to the fact that,his wife is at present not in the best of health. Jackson promised to go to work and was then allowed his liberty under the suspended sentence meted out by the court.

WHAT LURE OF SALT DOES TO ALL SAILORS

Michigan College Youth Fired By "Yarns" Seeks Adventure

HOBOES WAY

Bears Recommendation From Famous German Sea Devil

Halifax, N.S., May —(By George C. Murray, Canadian Press Staff Writer)—This is the story of how a freshwater sailor was lured by the heaving Atlantic, by yarns of "old sailor" how he fought, failed, begged, whistled and "rode the rods" on his way from Saginaw, Michigan, to Halifax, Nova Scotia; how an indomitable courage overcame seemingly insurmountable obstacles and placed him on the able schooner Abundance, a three-stacker bound for Spain with deals. His chance came just when that horizon looked blackest, when it appeared all his grit served only to leave him stranded in a foreign port. Given little hope by the ship's agent, he dashed, excitedly back to the pier to have one last look at the Schooner and bid her farewell.

To his delight, he was hailed by the master, Captain Louis Kennedy, who had heard of his yearnings for the sail. A few months later he was signed for the voyage as Norman Boetcher, aged 18, at $15 a month. He had offered to ship without wages.

That was Friday, April 22, and the Abundance was loaded and ready for sea. So eager was she to be off before the captain changed his mind or international complications arose, that he asked that she did not sail at once. Again he was thrilled.

"Not on Friday," said the captain, cautiously.

Norman Boetcher scribbled the first entry in his diary:

"Sailwater men are still superstitious."

He did not keep a diary of his adventures during his wanderings, but he described them in forlorn moments when his chances of boarding a ship seemed slim.

At such times as these, he displayed a card, of which he was proud and which had been his introduction to skippers along the waterfront from New York to Halifax. On the back of the card this was written:

"If you have a place on your boat, take me. I'm a good sailor boy.—Von Lockner."

It was signed by the famous "Sea Devil," German marine hero of the war, whose innocent looking schooner, Seeadler, outwitted, outsailed outfought the best warships that was tied up indefinitely. Whether it was the youth's German blood or a romantic impulse that moved him, Von Lockner offered sympathy and the highest recommendation.

Story Began in August

But the story began earlier. In August, when a white yacht slipped through the Welland canal into Lake Huron. Almost every day she passed that month. In fact, since early spring, the little thirty-five footer with the outboard motor had plied the waters of the bay and lake, dodging ice floes and sometimes turbulent lake. Her skipper, Norman Boetcher, watched the open water, liked the feel of her slanting deck as the wind in her sails pushed her over." He himself at the helm of a see-going schooner—that's the freshwater men from "down east" who now ply their coast trade, carrying it the lake yards told about. At night, when the wind was at anchor, the youth listened to the men yarning; their stories entranced him.

Winter came and with it the first term of two academic during which the yacht with her centre-board hauled out in the shed was in the way.

Studies are irksome. Sagas of the sea—of long voyages through gales, of tropical calms, of northern ice and cold and hardship—sent into daydreams a mind that should have been alert at Michigan State College.

Christmas the longing for the deck of a schooner urged a rebellious spirit to action. He was a good mother to be pacified and a fund had to be found. But the sea called and the freshwater sailor answered. With $180 in his pocket he set out for the coast.

First, New York. Expensive for a stranger to live here, and the docks were sooty and dirty from the fumes of many tramps. The Gulls over wooden ships were few. Von Lockner's recommendation was the nearest he came to getting a berth. Enough of that. Funds were low, but there was enough money to take him to Boston, and maybe to ship on a trim sailer, bound for Hong Kong.

Honest-to-goodness windships were scarce at Boston, too. There were a few schooners, mostly clumsy clubermen of the modern type, but at least they had sails.

Days passed into weeks, funds became exhausted, but one credit still the sail on the Boston waterfront, and that was something. What to do? He remembered that freshwater men were hard to, couldn't be set and quit. Perhaps begging came hard to a cocksure youth used to having plenty of change in his pocket, but hunger soon drives him ashore. His first (and last) "touch" on the second try netted a dime. He fell into his hand. He looked at the coin with contempt. Nearby was a newsboy.

He looked hungry, and the sailwater men were a generous lot. The sailor took a notch in his belt as salvation men do, slipped the dime into the small hand.

New Schooner a Dock

Next day a new schooner ran into a dock, apart from the others. The mate was aboard—a rough looking chap, but these sailwater men were a hard lot. Yes, the ship could stand another man. There disappointment: the mate was a freshwater sailor, a third driver. The youth was disgusted with his suggestions, he said so, and he got struck. His glasses were shattered; but liquor had unsteadied the seaman, and the fight fan of the youth knocked him over, the youth escaped to the dock.

It seemed he was destined to return to the freshwater. Others failed. He was disgusted. Then he remembered those riggers had told stories about Nova Scotia, its wooden ships and iron men—perhaps Nova Scotia was different. There was a boat leaving for Yarmouth that night, he had money. He wondered how stowaways succeeded. He had it! That man on the dock there, the one with the dog on leash. If he would allow him to take the dog on board—he would try it.

But the man happened to be a friend of the captain, any trick the youth would play on the latter would be met with grim humor. However: "Kid, I like your nerve. I'll take you for the dog." And he was done.

That vibration was terrible. Now on a schooner, a little rock maybe, but not that monotonous throbbing that seemed to have confirmed his dislike for steamers.

Yarmouth was much doing here. Lunenburg was the place for himmagrimy sailors with four miles of log schooners, the home of the Bluenose. Once aboard a Lunenburger, a halfway freight car he arrived at La Have, then motored to the famous town. It was a dirty night. He had $1.30 left in his pocket. One month trip; he wondered how far he could stretch that. The cook of the hotel was a good sort, promised to provide a meal in the morning. Business was dull there, and the Bostonese was dull there, and the freshwater man whiled away the hours with the cook. Then he met Bob Cameron, the friendly manager of Corford for 10 years until his death in 1911, and one of the latter sons is now Bishop of Southern Rhodesia.

Liked Ambition

A good-natured discussion on the Lunenburg waterfront liked the Yankee lad's ambition and agreed he would be sailing for two weeks. Those in the know, who were fishermen, perhaps an odd rum-runner. Not much chance there. Halifax was the place for leading deals for sunny Spain. That was the ship he thought, and might have a spare berth.

Halifax was a cold, rainy area, but Boetcher liked the thought of Spain, so he fastened himself to the top of the car and awaited developments. It was cold up there but the lad was chilled to the bound; that was all he cared. All went well until the Intercolonial Waverley, about eighteen miles from the city. Here he was startled with a brakeman's "Hey, you!" Down scrambled the fresh-water man. Now, where was Halifax? The rails must lead to it, so he pushed on. He reached the North End, and went straight to the waterfront. After much questioning he found a three-masted schooner—Abundance. That must be the one. There was no one on board, but she was to sail for Spain a day or two, so he set about finding a bunk for the night.

Ah! There was Hamilton Army here. The letter from the minister back home had preceded him to the hostel clerk, and he was assured of shelter. That was that, so to make sure he did not miss any available ship he went aboard and asked the police if they knew of any schooners sailing for foreign ports. Quite. There were a good lot, but they the best they could do was to point out the mast over the peermen. He had tried his hand at newspaper work on vacation, he talked the parlance, so he approached the police reporters. No, but there was a shipping man at the office who would know all about that boat loading deals. Look this time. The shipping man knew the agents, the captain and almost anything one could ask him. The youth went to his Salvation Army bed, feeling a little more hopeful.

But his consistent hit-luck was with him next morning. The agents didn't think the captain was signing anyone. Here he had come a thousand miles to the end of the world, it seemed, and he was no further ahead than "when he had sat for feet of the riggers, listening to their yarns. Two hours later he returned to the docks, hoping there might be some other mate showing by this time. No, none.

Norman Boetcher was not quite sure what he intended doing now; he was not sure anything was worth doing.

"Like to work, you say about a month? You're willing to cook without wages. Might find ten dollars somewhere in the bottom of your stocking."

It was Captain Louis Kennedy, skipper of the Abundance, the schooner loading deals for Spain.

The excited Norman Boetcher spluttered something in reply; he couldn't remember what when he told his newspaper friends about his good fortune before he sailed.

Member of U.S. Army Yet is Arrested

Windsor, Ont. — After having served four years, two months and eight days in the United States regular army forces at Fort Wayne Detroit, Mich., and having taken the oath of allegiance to the United States William O Jones is now under arrest in Canada on the grounds that he entered the United States illegally.

The alleged illegal entry was made under the name of Sumery Hoverer, Idaho, when Johns was returning from a 60-day furlough which he had spent with relatives at Calgary. Johns says he did not know he was breaking any immigration regulations and adds that if he had not returned he could have been arrested as a deserter from the United States army, been extradited from Canada and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary.

Johns alleges that when the immigration charge was laid he was told he could return to the country voluntarily and later might receive his honorable discharge from the Bee of Chester of the Rt. Rev. Arthur Francis Underhill, who died in 78 years of age, has been Bishop of Nyasaland for 15 years and for 14 years previously was Bishop-Suffragan of Shrewsbury, where he had resided several months of each year. 17 YEAR BOY SAVES FATHER

Dashes Into Flames, Carries Father Unconscious to Safety

Toronto, May 3—Fred Cross, 17-year-old son of S. J. Cross of 480 Robertson Avenue, York Township, was the hero of a fire which gutted the small frame home shortly after 2 o'clock yesterday morning.

After helping the other eight children and their parents out of the building, he watched his father rush back through the flames to retain certain that all were out. When Mr. Cross did not return Paul took his life in his hands and dashed through the cracking timbers and smoke and flame in an effort to locate his father. In a few minutes the plucky lad was seen carrying his father, who had been overcome by smoke, and he soon brought him out safely. The entire family, eleven in all, were taken to the home of their next-door neighbor, Arthur H. Chilton, where they are being cared for.

It was a dog owned by Mr. Chilton which gave the first alarm, when he commenced barking fiercely, and aroused his master, who at once saw the blaze. A call brought the Toronto Suburban Brigade to the scene as the family had just emerged from the burning building. The blaze, which had gained considerable headway in a very short time, was finally subdued, but the house and contents were almost completely destroyed.

Paul, the oldest; Stanley, aged 15, and Frances, 13, are at a rear door which Henry 13, had managed to open when the mother, who was carrying the baby, Jackie, aged 1 week, broke in from burning home, along with his sister, Mary 2. Nine-year-old Sophie managed to jump through a window after she had broken the glass, Joseph, 11, and Peter, 7, came through the back door, following their mother.

According to Chief Hoolt of the Suburban Brigade, the fire here is thought to have originated from an overheated stovepipe between the kitchen and the roof, which is partly covered by insurance, has not yet been estimated.

CAVE MAN DWELLS IN POLICE CELLS

Benton, Ill., May 3—A coal miner told in his part of the world he has lived for two years along the big muddy river, living on fish and fowl and fish, and sleeping in a hole in the ground. Living by his hands and his wits, he was found out of his wilderness stronger and healthier than when he went in.

The miner, George Survel, was arrested for driving without a license. "I got sick and tired of working in the mines around Zeigler. I felt I had to get away from everything and everybody," he said. "I dug me a hole in the ground with a stick and made a bed of leaves. I hid the stick with the bandages. All I ate was only roots, wild fruit, dandelions and wild onions. Later I fixed up a trap to catch muskrats and made a net to take fish. I found some bird eggs and built me a grill to cook them. I also caught mud turtles. I liked them. I'd put them in the fire and let 'em crack.

"When I get out of jail I'm going back to the river and live like a human being."

Two Canadian non-metallic minerals to show large increases in production last year were sodium sulphate and sulphur, the former with an increase of 42.3 per cent to a value of $418,637, and the latter up 36.4 per cent at $429,457.

FUGITIVE SWIMS SHARK-FILLED SEA

Devil's Isle Fugitive Makes Dramatic Escape From Colony

London—Details of a dramatic escape from the French penal institution at Devil's Isle have reached London from the authorities at New Amsterdam, British Guiana. Members of the police force, according to reports here, were startled one morning to find a small, one-masted, unpainted, tattooed man, crawling out of the sea and begged food and water.

He said he was one of a party of seven convicts who had fled Devil's Isle in an open boat, bound for the mainland. All but himself met their fate in the outset. They ran into a storm off the coast of British Guiana and were lost upset. Two of the boats were drowned.

The man who reached Amsterdam said he set out to swim ashore. The sea is infested with sharks whose their boat upset and his was a horrible experience as he slowly fought his way to land. The police arrested him sixty miles to the capital, Georgetown, where he was amazed to find three of his "lost" companions had arrived before him. One was a Frenchman, one an Italian and one a Spaniard. They told him that they had stuck to the boat until all hope was abandoned, when a fishing craft had spotted them and towed them to Georgetown. The tattooed man first rubbed his eyes. "You're back from the dead, too," he said "but where's Georges?"

The others replied they had seen Georges when the boat upset but he died later from exposure and was buried at sea. Next morning, they said, were "There he goes to the sharks. That's the last of our old pal."

The British police at Georgetown decided to allow the fugitives to continue their voyage.

SUSPICION INDIAN MURDER VICTIM

Cornwall, May 3—The mystery surrounding the death of Angus Thompson, 43-year-old Indian of St. Regis reservation, Quebec, whose body was found floating in the St. Lawrence near Lancaster, Sept. 30 last, is believed to be solved by the inquiry under instructions from the provincial police at Toronto.

Thompson left his home on the reservation on Sept. 15 to go fishing in the St. Lawrence to the Ontario mainland, and his body was later taken from the river by Provincial Police and buried without being identified.

Police later ordered exhumation and relatives of Thompson positively identified the remains.

His widow now claims that her husband was murdered on the Canada side of the river in his boat, met a party of U.S. Indians and that a quarrel arose, precipitated by Pete Dischoff, chief chemist of Santa Barbara (Cal.) Cottage Hospital in a paper based on experiments conducted with 1,000 rats over a three-year period by himself, Dr. H. J. Ullmann and L. O. Maxwell. He declared their findings left no doubt that the pituitary gland, the pea-sized gland which helps regulate body growth, contributes also to cancer growth.

ACCUSE CO-EDS OF USING INFLUENCE

Ann Arbor, Mich—Pity the poor co-eds at University of Michigan! First the men proved co-eds are human, and now they have proved the vaunted mental superiority of women to be an optical illusion—the effect of feminine charm on susceptible men instructors.

At least the three judges—two men and a woman—decided it was so proved after a debate between Delta Sigma Rho entries Zeta Phi co-ed women's debating society, and Alpha Nu, men's debating club, on the proposition: "Co-ed women's faculties receive their grades on other than scholastic standards."

There was mention of tea parties at which co-eds beamed upon professors, and of the comparative weight of brains and beauty. One story provided the climax when an Alpha Nu debater confounded the opposition with, "Even Cleopatra and Cleopatra attained her Mark."

Last year, the Zeta Phi Eta team was unable to convince the judges that co-eds are human.

LINK CANCER WITH GLANDS

Claim Malady Arrested By X-Ray Treatments of Pituitary

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—Announcements that the mystery disease causing chemical group which is responsible for cell division in cancer as well as in human tissue has been definitely identified and that treatments which have so far been arrested by the application of the X-ray to the pituitary gland instead of direct to the malignant growth itself were made here before the American Association of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

Dr. Emil Novak, of the Johns Hopkins Research Institute of Lankenau Hospital Philadelphia, who reported a mild sensation two years ago with a preliminary statement regarding the X-ray treatment of pituitary, reported that in the interim he had demonstrated unquestionably that the sulphydryls were the fundamental chemical element in the growth of the malignant cell.

New Method of Application

The new method of applying the X-ray to slow up cancerous growth in rats was explained by Dr. Frits Dischoff, chief chemist of Santa Barbara (Cal.) Cottage Hospital in a paper based on experiments conducted with 1,000 rats over a three-year period by himself, Dr. H. J. Ullmann and L. O. Maxwell. He declared their findings left no doubt that the pituitary gland, the pea-sized gland which helps regulate body growth, contributes also to cancer growth.

ASSESSMENT ON BUILDINGS

There seems much to be said in favor of the proposal of Alderman White made at the last meeting of the city council in favor of a change in the matter of assessment as affecting new buildings. He would for the purpose of giving labor employment in this time when there is considerable idleness in the building trade and for the purpose of the erection of buildings on vacant land have a postponement of the assessment of their construction and favors such action that will make it possible that until such times as assessment becomes operative on such buildings the land shall be assessed as it was at the commencement of the building except as altered or affected by local improvements.

That it would stimulate building, is evident. That it would help the waterworks department and the Hydro through the extension of services and the securing of new customers, and that it would tend to create an air of confidence in the city of Belleville, besides alleviating some of the pressure from depression, is also evident.

It would not take money out of the pockets of anyone to lend this encouragement which would in the long run mean the lightening of the burden on the general taxpayer and indirectly on the tenant. The sound of the carpenter's hammer and the bricklayer's trowel will be welcome.

Citizens ought to give the proposed measure some consideration, in view of the fact that a building enhances values and assessment brings in taxes for an indefinite period in the future.

A TAX BILL RELIC

Some days are gone forever, the days of the small tax bill for instance. Today The Ontario Intelligencer was shown an old tax bill of Port Hope showing an assessment of nine hundred dollars on a house and total taxes of $18.00. It was in 1887, forty-five years ago.

And there were two payments. It was thought a considerable innovation here when the two payment dates were decided upon but such was the custom years ago.

Such low tax rates could be duplicated in Belleville on bills forty and fifty years old.

FOOD DEPOT

Municipal unemployment problems will be more closely followed by the Provincial Government according to the letter, George S. Henry, who incidentally mentioned yesterday the question of the establishment of relief stores. It is his view that the time has passed for the giving of the unemployed needy orders on groceries in municipalities. Depots would be one solution.

This question has in fact been considered in Belleville by individual members of the relief committee. One of the chief points in favor of a depot is that expenditure could be reduced very greatly, probably one-third were depots established. It is stated that considerable freedom is left the purchaser on these relief orders and in consequence while he gets full value for his order he might not make the best purchases for the amount that is specified in the order. Where these goods are handled in large quantities the cost of handling could be cut to a minimum.

In a number of lines the cost to the municipality could be reduced greatly, in others not so much.

In any event the supplies given the needy would be standardized so that there would be no waste, no buying of expensive goods where just as good could be had for a cheaper price. Buying generally from so many sources has added greatly to the cost.

If relief has to be carried out next winter it is believed that some form of this scheme will be adopted generally. Some places indeed have it under contemplation at the present moment.

NAMELESS JOYS

By Aline Michaels

Out of the heart of the universe
Into the linnet's song it flows,
Painting the wings of the butterfly
Reddening the petals of the rose.
Something for which there is no name
Lends of its loveliness to the dawn
Out of the heart of the universe
Ever and ever it journeys on.

One with the cosmic urge it seems,
Driven by forces that never tire,
Giving man glimpses of realms afar,
Lifting him up toward his heart's desire.
Waves of its glory swept us all,
None has named it, for who could name
Something more glamorous than the dusk,
Something more bright and fair than flame?

Part of the cosmic urge it seems,
Rapture the spirit sometimes knows;
Out of the heart of the universe
Into the linnet's song it flows.

"TOO TRUE TO BE GOOD?" George Bernard Shaw's latest contribution to the stage, has run the gauntlet of New York and Boston's fiercest dramatic critics, who have knocked it from every angle and still admits that it is worth seeing. Beatrice Lillie seems to be the bright particular star of the piece, in a minor part, and helps the leading man to make a hit. Yankee dramatic critics do not seem to know what the play is all about, even after seeing it. Here's some of the chirps from the metropolitan critics:

"A tired play by a tired man".—John Mason Brown (Evening Post).

"As zigzagging and busily errant about its ideas as a spreeing waterbug".—Gilbert Gabriel (New York American).

"A chatty cadaver, again expounding the sage's patriarchal doctrines".—Percy Hammond (Herald Tribune).

"It is talk that may tire all the people some of the time, and some of the people all the time. But it is also good talk, true talk, stimulating talk much of he time".—Burns Mantle (Daily News).

"A inchoate discursive play, with dull spots weighing heavily upon the comedy and the ideas".—Brooks Atkinson (Times).

"An accumulation of stomachaches by a Grand Old Man who can no longer take it".—Robert Garland (World-Telegram).

"Often brilliant and amusing and cantankerous and always sad"—John Anderson (Journal).

Notwithstanding, what the critics say, people will go to a show and play, and like it.

Other Papers' Opinions

OTHER EDITORS OPINIONS A GREAT CANADIAN

The Iroquois Post, which he founded, has published a very fine memorial supplement containing the life story of Colonel Lorne Winfield Mackay, D.C.M., brilliant lawyer and gallant sportsman, who died at his home on Simcoe St., Lawrence River, Iroquois, Ontario, on Thursday, at the age of 53. Best known to Canadians as Lorne Mackay, blinded in the South African War, the "maimed one" has certainly been followed by his wounds, cheerfully created fresh obstacles to surmount scorned the paths of least resistance, and supremely successful in all tasks he undertook, and his death comes at a time when his powers of intellect and his great secretary's abilities appeared destined to still further achievements.

Born on a Canadian farm, blinded in his early twenties, he continued his education, was called and is secretary, was graduated with honors from two Canadian universities, became one of the most outstanding speakers of our day on literary and political economy, was offered more than one a seat in the British House of Commons, was on the staff of the Royal Military College, and became a successful publicity director. He had been referred to by Hon. H. H. Stevens as a "Minister without Government. As early as 1910 he was one of the leaders in the Great Britain in the fight for tariff reform and Empire preference, such as are now being planned at the Ottawa conference.

"Mulloy's life," it is well said by the Post, "should be a text book in our schoolbook, told from every pulpit and repeated at every Canadian fireside. As a boy he was an inspiration to the boys and girls of Canada, and the story of success and triumph and high ideals will perhaps never be forgotten."—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

MEETING THE PEOPLE

A considerable amount of publicity—and rightly so—has recently been given the action of the Provincial Secretary, Hon. Dr. Forbes H. Challies, in summoning a meeting of the secretary treasurers of the different municipalities of Dundas county, to discuss matters in the Legislature, and setting before them the financial position of the Ontario government. As one of the statements relating to other public matters of current interest. It is said to have been the first occasion upon which a Cabinet Minister had stepped from Queen's Park to obtain the feeling of municipal representatives in financial matters, and the fact that the meeting was attended by about seventy reeves and councillor in the county proves that the Provincial Secretary's action was appreciated.— Brockville Recorder-Times.

EASING THE PRESSURE

The welcome announcement of Massey Harris Company that not only the whole line of their farm implements but part debts and accounted interest will be reduced 15 per cent., comes as a bright ray shining through the gloom. It is not necessary for the farmer to describe the embarrassing position to the world, it is apparent to all. In his pays with deflated goods for implements and equipment that are held at little if any below the prices that prevailed before the depression struck the land. That lack of balance and equity is recognized on every hand, but as Mark Twain once said about the weather, "Nobody does anything about it."

Here, at last, in the Massey Harris discount is a definite step in the reaching significance, and one can only wait and see what sort of business structure of the country can adapt itself to the policy expressed in this new and liberal concept to equalize values so trade may be resumed. Only such a readjustment be accomplished by simply taking an old catalogue and recalculating

Fight and Wrestling Card in Aid of Belleville Nats. Endorsed by All Present

Final Bout Halted When Physician Refused Boy Right to Continue

LOCALS PROMINENT

Wrestling Bouts Disclose Some Splendid Amateur Ability

Boxing came into its own in Belleville last night when nearly 500 howling raving fans jammed into the City Hall to witness one of the finest boxing and wrestling cards ever staged in this city. Every bout from the curtain raiser to the final bout of the evening was received with hearty applause and the return of the fight game in this city is assured, thanks to the Belleville Nationals.

The only thing to mar a perfect evening was the sudden termination of the final bout, when under the orders of Dr. R. A. Flynn, City physician, Dan Miniolla of Peterboro was forced to quit the ring due to a deep cut over his left eye, which George Semark had previously opened with a hard right cross late in the second round. Semark was declared the winner of the bout on a technical knock-out and after the affair Semark promised to give Miniolla a return bout in the main bout of the evening came to a rather abrupt ending the two rounds that were wrangled by the fans were fast and furious as both boys were quite willing to mix it and tried to wear each other down with heavy body blows, which were landed on both fighters. During the latter of the two rounds in which the boys bored or rather it should be said fought, as no quarter was asked and none given, Miniolla had secured the better of the infighting due to the fact that he appeared the more weak heart ter than his rival, while Semark was considerably handicapped most as well. It was not until late in the second round, that Semark was able to hit his mark to any advantage and then he cut his Peterboro rival's eye so badly that Miniolla was forced to quit, when the bell sounded for the opening of the third round. After being examined by the club physician the bout was awarded to Semark on a technical knock-out due to the fact that Miniolla's eye knew was in no condition to continue.

Elmo Gole Decision.

The semi-final of the evening, between Scotty Elmo of Belleville and Jack Gardner of Peterboro, was another thriller that brought the fans to their toes time after time. Once again the Belleville fighter was the better but his stalwart infighting Gardner looked a little the better. Elmo's clever ring generalship tactics were too complicated for Gardner and Scotty used his ability to an advantage, which eventually brought him the judges decision.

The first was a three round affair and Kline had piled up enough points during the first round of rival to squeeze out a narrow decision after Gardner opened up in the third round and had much the better of the round. Kline so set the only knock-down of the bout, when he floored Gardner in the first round with a vicious right swing, which clipped Gardner on the side of the head. Gardner took his sad right cross was him the victory was the bout. The other two boys will be welcomed back on any terms by the fans of Belleville as they both hit hard and are not afraid to mix it up a bit.

The opening bout of the night was a three round go between J. Hinton and Doc Ridley both of Belleville weights 135 lbs. Hinton soon was worn down by the heavy attack of Doctor Ridley and finally timed very nicely and eventually pulled through in the win. This was the first time, that these two boys ever appeared in a ring before the public and their efforts were loudly applauded. Ridley out fought and outgeneralled Hinton, who through the three rounds and earned a clean decision.

Art Angell of Belleville, the blonde slugger, out slugged Jack Smith of Peterboro in one of the most aggressive bouts seen in Belleville in years. Both of these boys received rounds of applause and the fans were on their feet time after time when they stood toe to toe and tried to out slug one another. Due to his ability to hit somewhat harder Angell took a hard right into Smith's solar plexus late in the first round and Smith went down on one knee just as the bell rang. Angell received a fair split decision under the dim roars of the crowd at the end of the three hard fought rounds.

Johnnie O'Neil wore N. Seman down to his own size and weight in the 120 lb. class and after a well deserved decision over Seman, who had gained the decision over him in the past. These two boys stood toe to toe and slugged all through the final round of the three round bout that they so well presented. Both of these boys are local lads and O'Neil's condition eventually brought him the decision over decision.

In the bantam class Cordie Morris of Belleville got a well earned decision over Fred Chads of Peterboro. Although these two lads weighed but 113 lbs. they displayed more than the usual amount of aggressiveness.

Morris displayed a better plan of attack and pounded Spanks' body at most will. Morris' right hand is especially was poison to Spanks and before the final round this also was a three round bout. Spanks has learned to respect Morris' right hand with the result, that Morris received the decision. Late in the second round Morris cut Spanks' lip upon Spanks and kept adding to this advantage by jabbing at Spanks' bleeding nose and mouth the rest of the bout. Late in the second round, however, Morris slipped and took the count of eight, Morris was dazed for the rest of eight seemed to work wonders for the fans round. Urged on by the fans round. Executive Meeting W.M.S. Held at John St. Church

PROGRESS MARKED

The executive meeting of the Bay of Quinte Conference Branch, W. M. S. held in John St. Church, Belleville on April 27, 28 and 29 was of unusual interest. Inasmuch as it took the place of the annual meeting of the Conference Branch, which this year had been cancelled, in order that the money which would go into expenses for this large meeting might be released for actual work in the various fields.

With the exception of three officers, one of whom sent a substitute all were present and took an active and enthusiastic interest in the discussion of the different problems and plans which were brought forward. A great deal of important business was transacted, and many matters of vital importance to the work of the society were considered.

Mrs. Tabberner, Kingston, presided.

Several important communications had come down from the Dominion Board and were given special attention.

First of these was the plan of the "Special Contributions Committee," those last words being substituted for women of wealth in the work of W.M.S. and "to draw attention to financial resources undeveloped within the membership." At the last meeting of the Board a standing committee was formed for this purpose and is asking that a "Special Contributions Committee" of five members be chosen in each Conference Branch. The matter was carefully considered and the following appointed for the committee: Mrs. H. Thompson, Whitby; Miss E. Fessels Brown, Belleville; Mrs. T. H. P. Anderson, Newburgh; Mrs. W. J. Garland, Cobourg; Mrs. C. O. Johnston, Kingston.

A suggested list of objects which might be presented for a special appeal was sent and will prove useful when the committee begins to function.

An important item was the recommendation that the W. M. S. co-operate with the Presbytery in that the first step be a conference with the executive of the Presbyterial meeting with the Presbytery's committee on Evangelism and Social Service, to be brought together by the Chairman of the committee of Presbytery."

Kingdom of God Movement

Rev. Dr. J. M. Shaw, Queen's Theological College, convener of the conference Committee was expected to address the meeting on this subject, but was unable to be present and it was decided that the President, Mrs. W. L. Smyth, again communicate with Dr. Shaw, asking him to get in touch with the committee, in each Presbytery, and that meetings between the two workers be held in the church for the good of the kingdom and the plan of co-operation be set in motion with a view of furthering the "Kingdom of God" movement and the deepening of the spiritual life of the church.

Each Branch Secretary, when she writes should mention the "Kingdom of God" movement, thus keeping it before the minds of all women. Changes in Constitution.

Christian Stewardship is presented regularly by 135 Auxiliaries, 23 T.W.A's. and 16 Mission Bands.

On Wednesday evening the service of worship was conducted by Rev. Rev. Robt. Hall of John St. Church, who gave an inspiring address on "Spiritual Appetites."

The report of the Associate Helpers' Secretary, Mrs. T. H. P. Anderson of Newburgh told of an excellent plan, whereby "Circulating Leaflets" are being passed around and proving of great benefit. Publicity.

Gabaws Presbyterial reports an increase in giving of $20.00 though there has been a decrease in membership. Money with 33 auxiliaries has 30 Associate Helpers' Secretaries Kingston has 366 Associate Helpers with contributions of $304.13. One auxiliary has only 1 Associate Helper, but she is 92 years old. Renfrew Presbyterial heads the list with 534 Associate Helpers, 91 subscriptions to the "Missionary Monthly" and contributions $234.47.

Increases in the numbers of Press secretaries and in the number of items appearing in the local papers, showing increasing interest in the work everywhere, was reported by the Press Secretary, Mrs. S. E. Reville of Kingston.

Mrs. W. J. Garland and Mrs. J. F. Mears were in charge of the devotional exercises.

Mrs. E. W. Rowland, secretary of Mission Bands and Baby Bands, reported 15 new Mission Bands and 8 new Baby Bands. In Mission Band departments there is an increase in membership of 129, of meetings 191, of attendance 508 and of subscriptions to "World Friends" 343. In the Baby Bands there is also an increase in all departments. Membership increases 228, fees, by increase by $63.60, Mite box givings $124.64 and in money sent $33.28.

Interesting parts of the above reports of the 7 Presbyterials were read by Mrs. Rowland and proved a wonderful work carried on by the little folk, bringing splendid results. The supply work forms a big part of their programme. Christmas gifts, toys, books, Rubber Layettes, knitted goods etc. Other activities were parties, entertainments and sales. Systematic givings is practised. Lack of testing leaders is also proving a great handicap in the work.

Miss R. Tripp, Dist. C.G.I.T. secretary said this work had gone on well. Nearly all the groups were holding Japan and mission study and through interesting and worthwhile projects.

World Friendship Rallies.

World Friendship Rallies were proving a great asset in Missionary education. Five Presbyterials each had a rally and 3 others were to have a Leaders' Rally. The subject for discussion groups was "Peace Efforts and Disarmament" and some presented a Japanese play "Mother Earth and her Children."

Miss V. H. Spargo, Bowmanville reported for Toronto Conference and Two New Y. W. A's. and one new Circle are reported for the year.

An increase of 61 in the subscriptions to the "Missionary Monthly" is very encouraging. The 6 new Circles at Albert St. Oshawa, has 10 members and each Circle.

Peterboro and Renfrew have the largest number of Circles (17 each), Renfrew having the largest number of members (350). Presbyterial Cobourg and Belleville have the highest average attendance.

Belleville Leads

In Mission Circles Belleville leads with 17, total membership 350, Renfrew has 8 and Oshawa 7. Renfrew secured the largest number of subscribers Cobourg and Kingston have the highest average attendance.

The Study Book has been used. One society found the "Blue Book" or Annual Report by the Dominion Board very helpful. Effective and interesting study book they have used. Belleville has sent delegates and delegates to Whitby Summer School. The "Kingdom of God" movement is winning its way among the Young People.

Thursday afternoon the devotional exercises were in charge of Mrs. W. J. Garland.

Miss A. Henwood, Port Hope, Literature Secretary, again urged a secretary of literature in every auxiliary.

Literature Report

Reports of Literature were received from 194 auxiliaries, 23 T.W.A's. 21 Circles and 105 Bands. 462 copies of the Study Book were purchased by auxiliaries and 119 copies of the Mission Band text book. Smith's Falls had the largest number, 28, Sydenham - St., Kingston had 25 and Picton 22 copies.

70 per cent. of the auxiliaries used the Study Book at the monthly meetings and 48 study classes were listed.

Some interesting methods of study were sent in, viz.: maps and charts, pictures and illustrations, curios from the country studied, supplementary reading, reviews, questions, papers or addresses, etc.

340 copies of the annual report listed means only 1 in every 22 has a copy. Port Hope reported 26 copies, Smith's Falls, 24, and Brockville, 20. These were the highest.

Besides individual purchases between meetings literature to the value of $275.00 has been sold.

Circulating

Mrs. J. T. Daley, Port Hope, reported for the Circulating Library.

18 auxiliaries and 2 Mission Bands have made use of the library during the past year. This is not very encouraging but if the 18 auxiliaries average 6 readers, each reading 6 books, we have 108 readers reading 648 books on Missionary topics. Six auxiliaries have taken out their first lot of books this year and have been pleased with the list sent them. There have been requests for new books. 31 books were purchased with the special offering taken at the branch meeting last year.

Mrs. George Hardy, of Oakwood, "Missionary Monthly" secretary, made a most earnest appeal for this splendid publication, urging that we take up in earnest the slogan: "Every auxiliary a subscriber to Missionary Monthly subscriber." How can we follow up leads on our membership card to help along the "Kingdom of God" movement if we are not careful to try to gain information about the missionary work, and where can we find so much useful information as in this small magazine costing only 35c?

Discussion

Much earnest discussion followed on Mrs. Hardy's report and a resolution passed that the special six months' offer of the May issue be drawn to the attention of every member through presidents, vice-presidents and "M. M." secretaries, and our women urged not only to subscribe but to read and study this magazine and so become familiar with the work of the missionary enterprises.

Mrs. A. T. Chiken, Strangers' Secretary, told of a wonderful work of love and kindness carried on by our secretaries of this department. It should be called the "Department of Friendship." The following statistics give but a faint idea of the large part of this department: Letters written, 2,194; cards sent, 1,095; total number of new Canadians under instruction, 19; total number of letters sent, 3,289; total number of strangers cared for, 2073; total number of Jewish strangers cared for, 5613.

Emergency Relief

Mrs. James Glasier, of Brockville, Supply Secretary, told of the splendid relief work that had been done to that of the regular supply work, and also of the tenderness and opportunity for helping in this great work have come.

Bales have been sent to the five Indian Reserves in Alberta, also to the Ukrainian Mission in Manitoba, two missions in Manitoba, one in Saskatchewan, one in Alberta, besides many bales to the National Emergency Relief Work.

The total value of bales for the year 1931-32 was $5128.94, and for the National Relief Fund, $4,266.27, making a sum of $9395.21 in all this year.

Mrs. Glazier spoke with grateful appreciation of the kindness of the C.P.R. and C.N.R. who transported freight all the way outside of Ontario free of charge, and a letter expressing appreciation of their generous is being sent them from the executive.

Temperance Work

The Temperance Secretary, Mrs. R. C. Lawlor, of Oshawa, said that all reports indicated work along temperance lines in Mission Bands, Sunday Schools and day schools, bringing before the minds of youth the evils of alcohol.

Much valuable literature on the subject is distributed by many societies are taking advantage of it. Essay contests are being carried on, voted to Temperance, others give addresses at each meeting or monthly meeting. The societies having Temperance Secretaries are of course do the best work, but out of 194 auxiliaries only 150 have secretaries. Of 21 Circles 11 have. Of 105 Bands only 38 have. Belleville leads on "Scientific Temperance" with charts being found most useful along scientific lines. One auxiliary, Band in Smith's Falls sold 100 pledge cards. With regard to a resolution sent in as this is a matter affecting the Dominion Government it was decided to send these on to the different Conference branches in Ontario and have it taken up with the Provincial government.

New Foreign Workers

Mrs. R. O. Jolliffe, Candidate Secretary, reported immediate need for educational and evangelistic workers in Japan and West China, as well as nurses. There is one accepted candidate, Miss Lillian Hinton, of Oshawa. Miss Skinner who was not accepted, is now training for a nurse with prospects of being accepted if she can finish her course. Twelve other names had come in as prospective candidates. Mrs. Jolliffe explained a new plan of work suggested by the board, viz. the work among foreign students by friendly contact. This matter was left in the hands of the Advisory Committee.

Mrs. Douglas Bevet, of Belleville was appointed to the special committee in place of Mrs. R. Barbour, Kingston, unable to act.

As Mrs. T. H. P Anderson, Newburgh, has been elected presidents-elect of Belleville Presbyterial, Miss Dubocq of Lindsay, was appointed in her place

Word Study

Mrs. W. J. Garland, Cobourg, third vice-president, was appointed convener of a committee to promote Word Peace, through co-operation with other organizations working along this line.

The special committee will carry on for another year, as will the nominating and finance committees, the name of Mrs. Jas. Ewing added to the latter.

Invitations

A communication was received re school of missionary to be held in Whitby July 2-10, and the branch asked to name names for this two to be chosen from the branch executive, and two names to be sent to the Dominion Board, the latter the name of Y.W.A. worker and one Mission Band worker. The following names were secured:

Belleville Presbyterial—Mrs. Rowland, Miss Joy Paul; alternates, Mrs. Willis, Miss Ruth Fraser.

Cobourg Presbyterial—Miss Henwood, Mrs. Elliott; alternates, Mrs. Hall, Miss Dorothy Hall.

Kingston Presbyterial—Mrs. S. E. Reville, Mrs. R. Trotter; alternates, Mrs. F. S. Young, Miss R. Tripp.

Miss Doris Cee, of Brooklyn, Ont., was appointed to the Whitby Summer School of Missions.

The motion re biennial meetings of Dominion Board was discussed and defeated.

Each of the seven Presbyterial presidents told a story of earnest endeavor, many of them with much enthusiasm which were bringing wonderful results along every line of the work. Each showed a splendid a spirit of optimism and showed a determination to go forward to greater and nobler deeds than ever before.

Mrs. T. H. P. Anderson reported for the Belleville Presbyterial; Mrs. J. P. Mears for Cobourg; Mrs. A. W. Fulford for Kingston; Mrs. A. P. Laiter for Lindsay; Mrs. C. W. Carscallen for Oshawa; Mrs. A. J. Wilson for Peterboro, and Mrs. C. L. Callan for Renfrew.

Mrs. R. O. Jolliffe, Kingston conducted the service of worship on Thursday evening and Mrs. W. L. Smyth on Friday morning.

The members were delighted to welcome their president, Mrs. W. L. Smyth, whose serious illness prevented her from attending the executive meeting in September, but who has now fully recovered and occupied the chair in her usual capable and pleasing manner.

After hearty votes of thanks to every member the closing service of worship that they stand last: "Be steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord" was an inspiration to all, and an effective incentive to carry each on to greater service during the year to the close in the work of the coming year.

Each Branch Secretary, when she writes should mention the "Kingdom of God" movement, thus keeping it before the minds of all women.

Changes in Constitution.

The Constitution were noted and passed on. These related to classification of Young People's and Junior Organizations, relation of the younger groups to the Presbyterial, Leaders' Conference and Study Book. Mrs. Hall's report on Wednesday was taken by Mrs. J. C. Gilk, of Port Hope, Mrs. C. Dafoe, Recording Secretary gave an excellent summary of the proceedings of the September executive meeting.

The Corresponding Secretary Mrs. J. G. Silk in her comprehensive survey of the year's work showed clearly that in spite of the trying times progress can be reported.

The loyalty, enthusiasm, zeal and prayerful devotion of the women has never been greater and though financial gifts were not as easy as in other years, there was never a lack of gifts of time, loving service and earnest prayer.

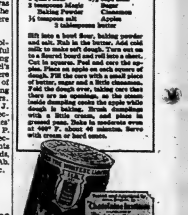
Miss Jessie Marie Do Both makes her delicious

Apple Dumplings

with Magic Baking Powder

WHEN a young housewife asks me what baking powder she should use," says Miss De Both, director of the famous Do Both Home Makers' Cooking Schools, "this is my advice: Use the best—one that is pure, uniform and invariably dependable. You can't use second-rate baking powder and expect first-rate results.

"My experience with Magic has been particularly happy. I find that it never varies—that it is consistently reliable. And I know it is pure, and free from harmful ingredients."



Statements by other well-known authorities given above make wholehearted support to Miss De Both's judgment. • • •

In fact, the majority of dietitians and cookery teachers recommend its use and recommend Magic exclusively.

Apple Dumplings

1 quart flour	1½ cups milk
4 teaspoons Magic Baking Powder	1 cup Crisco
½ teaspoon salt	Cinnamon
	Sugar
	2 tablespoons butter

Sift into a bowl flour, baking powder and salt. Rub in the butter, Add cold milk to make a soft dough. Roll out on a floured board and roll into a sheet. Cut in squares. Put an apple over the pieces. Place an apple on each corner of dough. Fill the core with a small piece of butter, sugar and a little cinnamon. Fold the dough over, making sure that there are no openings, as the syrup could disintegrate under the apple and cook dough in baking. Brush dough with a little cream and sprinkle with ground sugar. Bake in moderate oven for 40 minutes. Serve hot or cold with cream or hard sauce.

"CONTAINS NO ALUM" This statement on the label is the guarantee that Magic Baking Powder is free from harmful ingredients.

Trees laden with snow, frosty, gleaming, bordered it on either side. A turn, and there was a house, white, a house from an old-fashioned Christmas card. Every window was lighted; they were wreaths of holly; there were two lighted trees outside. As Lynn got out of car she heard voices, laughter.

"Bob, where—who—"

"Friends of mine. You'll like them. Lois and Mike Hayward." She did like them. Their hostess, a fat woman, had the skin of a child, the wide blue eyes of a child. The host, her husband, was lean, bronzed. There were other people all in sports cloth. The Carters.

While Lynn, powder, a bedroom to change in, the toboggan on the hill, the first wild sweep with skis, Lynn's feet helplessly shooting from under her, Dwight, laughing, picking her out of a snow bank and all mid-afternoon, dancing.....

At nearly three o'clock in the morning they turned out of the Haywards' drive and spun quickly into the quiet of the waning night. It was light when he left her at her own door.

"Tired?"

"No."

"Happy Christmas!" he asked her.

"Awfully."

She smiled up at him. He took the myrtle of mistletoe from his buttonhole and held it over her head; and kissed her under the startled eyes of a lone and cold policeman. Not with the light kiss—nothing other kiss. She drew back, afraid. Not repulsed, but afraid. Not afraid of him but of her loneliness, of her youth, her warm blood, her awakened senses.

"My Christmas present," he said, and drove away.

Trembling, she went into the house. She thought, I ought not to see him again. Jennie was right about his being dangerous. But why? she argued. I like him a lot. I admire him but I don't really care for him. It's Tom, always Tom, only—

Only what. Only that she was unhappy, that she was lonely, that she had become accustomed to the career of love.

"I won't see him again,' she decided.

But she did.

Seeing him was a perilous pleasure. Impossible not to realize that he was attracted by her; more than attracted by her. Where would it lead? she wondered. She knew that it would lead wherever she wanted it to lead.

He was married; and had, so far as she knew, every intention of remaining married. She feared that he squarely cared. She was aware of his reputation; Jennie had enlightened her—and Tom, Tom.

Tom was no longer in the picture. He'd gone; he wouldn't come back. What was there left for her? Years of work, of climbing the ladder, of reaching Sarah's place sometime! Not alone her position, but her place in the scheme of things. An apartment, perhaps, with another woman. Being busy in a trivial way; trying always to believe she wasn't lonely.

There might be another man some time. Someone strong and gay like Tom; someone she'd love a lot.

But love might not be. There hadn't been anyone for Sarah, for a hundred others she had met. Perhaps passed love by, or love had passed them by. Was it worth while to keep on for the sake of a raise in salary, added responsibility?

Once, not long ago, she had thought it very worth while. But somehow the time when David Dwight had undermined that theory. Life with Dwight—and success, be-ause simple. Luxury, admiration, something which might manage to under the name of love. Oh, If he really cared for her, if he really wanted her—what would she do?

She was so afraid of loneliness. She knew that it was like, now, close spell over her senses. Oh, not love, not Dwight, all of them, that many women—and men—ever knew. If he should ask her, what would she do?

She didn't know.

He one day, however, if she said yes. No one need be hurt. No one but herself.

Tom would never know. If he did know, she thought with the impulse of a child to strike, to wound, he'd be sorry.

Tom's fault.

She looked back over the stormy career of the last years and laughed her quarrels and kisses; passion aroused and denied; love and hate and rebellion; happiness and unhappiness, all mixed up, turbulent, chaotic.

If Dwight wanted her—?

All the storm, the stress would be on his side, she told herself frankly. On hers? Oh, comfort, ease, no great demand on her emotions. Things must be more comfortable than they, mustn't they?

He had said nothing yet but she knew the situation could not mark time much longer. Some day he'd speak. What would he say? What would she answer?

Jennie solved that question for her.

One morning in January the telephone on Lynn's desk shrilled loudly. She answered, astonished to hear Jennie's voice, broken, roughened with anxiety, "Lynn, can you come up here to see me—quick? It's awfully important."

Lynn looked at her watch. It was after eleven. "I'll take my lunch hour early. What's wrong, Jennie? Are you ill?"

"No. Oh, step on it!" cried Jennie, the self-reliant.

Lynn went into Sarah's office. "If I'm late getting back from lunch will it be all right?" she asked. "It's Jennie. She's in trouble of some sort."

"That's to be expected," Sarah told her tartly; then, softening, "Of course it's all right, Lynn."

She smiled, with a little effort. She had not seen much of Lynn lately. Even without proof, it was impossible not to conjecture with whom she had been spending much of her free time.

She thought, I must speak to her, warn her. But could she?

She was torn between her loyalty to Lynn and her illogical loyalty to David Dwight. She was frightened. She was miserable. And she was aging under it.

An oversophisticated imitation admitted Lynn to Jennie's apartment. Jennie was walking around the living room, half dressed. Her face was gray-white; her eyes had dark circles beneath them. For the first time Lynn saw her face bare of make-up the lips pale and dry. That startled her.

"What's happened?" asked Lynn.

At the sound of her voice Jennie pulled herself together. "Plenty," she replied briefly. Lynn looked at her at the vanishing look of the maid. "It doesn't matter," Jennie told her wanly. "She'll listen at the door anyway, she knows enough as it is."

"Tell me. Heavens, you look awful!"

"I feel worse. It's Slim. Oh, I know I didn't know as much as I do now. But since—after, it was different somehow. I was bored, too, fed up, couldn't call my soul my own. Lonely. And Slim hung around Last night he came here. Not the first time—the third.

"Don't look at me like that, Lynn! I only it. I couldn't help it! Anyway, Jake showed up. I don't know if he just took it into his head to come on or whether someone had tipped him off. That girl's in his pay, I suppose. Or was. I pay her plenty more now.

"Well, she might elevator man tipped me off. Held him down there, while I got Slim out by the freight elevator. It was—pretty bad. If I hadn't been for that night mist—"

"But what do you want me to do?" asked Lynn, helplessly.

"See Slim. Jennie brought her. "Tell him to keep away. I don't care about myself. I can go back to living on my salary. Tell him I'm going to Ecuador. Jake said last night he wanted me to come and live—nearer. I said I would.

"Lynn, don't! Let him go; live on your salary. There'll be Slim! You'll be happy!"

"Not me. Slim's sick at himself already. I'm sick of myself, too. He—he wouldn't marry me now, you know. He's funny that way. Old-fashioned." Jennie told her with a futile attempt at wise-cracking, and laughed. "Anyway, I'm not going to marry him. Tell him I'm going away; tell him I'll send him my address. Tell him to keep away."

"Jennie, don't you care for him at all?"

Jennie looked at her friend. Her eyes were a little mad. "Lynn, get wise to yourself," she said impatiently. If I didn't, I'd stay on and two-time pay roll. Or drive him off, and become a working girl again—with a wrestle. But it can't be, don't you see that? I'd just drag Slim down. I've done it already. What a fool I've been!" she said bitterly. "You'd see him? I count on you. I'm pulling out of her as soon as I can get packed. Jake will stand for the broken lease. Tell him to keep away."

CHAPTER XXXIX

Lynn said, feeling as if her mind had been bested, "I'll see him. Then—I shan't see you again?"

"Not for a while. I'll write that worry you." She put her hands on Lynn's shoulders. "You're a good kid. Look here, where's wrong between you and Tom, mark it up, I'll doesn't it? Or not to. You don't know how lucky you are, I do."

"Jennie, I'm frightened."

"No, I suppose not. Slim told me about Dwight. Said you were all sunk. Said he couldn't find out why—all Tom would say was that you'd left him and believed something that wasn't so. Don't be that way, kid. Get over it. Don't you mind? He's done or hasn' done. I don't care. Only, if he's your man, what does anything he's done matter? It wouldn't do me, murder, arson, robbery—"

"Lord, if a good guy loves you and you love him, you forgive," Lynn said song. But I mean it. Don't you suppose I'd like to be with Tom, now that-I know? But I was always the Cunce in my class. I always know the answer too late. Well, I'm doing the next best thing for him."

She asked again, "You'll see him, won't you? Swear you won't tell him what I've told you. Just say, 'She's leaving town—and you stay on your own side of the fence.'"

Lynn promised. A moment later she was out in the corridor. The door had shut. Jennie was whistling—what was it? Jake was sorry for Jennie, and Dwight's so very long ago. Lynn's cheeks were wet. She went on her way, shuddering, as if she had escaped some terrific danger. She had escaped. Jennie had shown her the way in which madness lies. There was no longer any temptation in the thought of Dwight.

That afternoon she telephoned the house on Perry street. If Tom answered Waiting, she felt ill with fear—and with hope.

Slim answered.

"Slim? This is Lynn. I want to see you. It's important. I have to go to a class appointment. Can you ride up a way with me?"

"Sure, I will, Lynn; glad to," he replied, thinking she wanted to talk about Tom. "I'll be at the door at a date, but I'll get now, I guess."

He's been trying to phone Jennie, she thought.

He came along presently. She was waiting outside the apartment. They boarded a bus, found an empty seat.

"What's on your mind?" he asked her.

"It's seen Jennie."

He frankly. He said, with an effort, "I suppose she—told you?"

Sparing him as much as she could, she denied it. "No, nothing. Except to ask me to see you at once and tell you she's leaving town. She's going West, Slim."

"Leaving town?" He was silent a moment. He said presently, "Running away, eh?

"I suppose so. I thought I'd follow her. She's wrong."

"She doesn't want you to follow her, Slim," Lynn told him, low.

"No, I suppose not. I don't blame her. She's picked the sort of job that means most to her; she doesn't want her shabby friends hanging around interfering."

His voice was bitter, but Lynn thought of the firefight elevator. He moved away from Lynn. He said, "Nice of her to let me know."

"Slim, you don't understand. Don't be so hard on her. She—"

Lynn stopped. She'd promised. Besides, it would do no good to tell him, to try to interpret Jennie for him. It might do harm.

Slim said, against his will, "I was crazy about her. I wanted her to marry me—once. She wouldn't."

He was silent. There was nothing he could say of the things crowding and wounding his mind. He had loathed Jennie for years, but he had not been his fault, he told himself. Jennie knew he was crazy about her. Slim must have known how he felt when —when she moved uptown. Sophisticated, fastidious, hating everything. But love, or love's little sister, hadn't died, couldn't. She'd known that too, phoned him, asked him up. Everything was wrong! Everything was spoiled. He hated her now more than ever; and himself.

Now she was leaving, sending this unfamiliar message. Well, good riddance; she'd played fob with him, all right!

He asked thickly, "Is—is there anything more?"

"No, Slim; that's all," Lynn said.

But her eyes pleaded although her mouth was mute. Tony How was

BRINGING UP FATHER

MR. AND MRS. — JUST A SUMMER SUGGESTION

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 14.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

The killing of the Russian by his great trained ape was a nine days' wonder to all London. The papers were filled with the mystery when no trace of the missing animal could be found. Then another and other news soon caught the public's attention—and everyone forgot the matter. All but Tarzan of the Apes, who, after futile search for his ape, realized that he must have slipped away to the jungle.

Just as an African-bound liner was about to sail, two last-minute passengers came aboard. One evidently was an old lady, heavily veiled, and so weakened by the infirmities of age she had to be wheeled up the gangway by a young man who stated the old lady was his grandmother. The youth would permit no one to assist him to their stateroom, and, during the long voyage, that was the last seen of the old lady until they disembarked.

The supposed grandson insisted upon doing the steward's work inside their cabin, saying the presence of strangers was more than the seastck old lady could stand. Outside the cabin—and none there was who knew what to the contrary—the two were just as any other healthy, normal boy. He mingled with the passengers, and became a favorite with the officers and men. But in his unsuccessful up to the day they landed on the African coast.

Among the passengers who sought the boy's acquaintance, with but scant success, was a noted crook "wanted" in a dozen countries. He had paid little attention to the youth until one day he had seen him accidently display a large roll of bank notes. From that moment the noted blackguard schemed to find means of transferring that money to his own pocket. Clever as he was, he had been

Previews and Reviews of Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

At The Belle

"CHEATERS AT PLAY" AND "GOOD DIGGERS OF BROADWAY"

Thrills on the high seas and adventure ashore, an unusual romance between a youthful thief and a society heiress, and the whole well spiced with hilarious comedy is the unique entertainment of "Cheaters at Play", which makes its debut on the screen of the Belle Theatre, on the outstanding Two-feature program to be exhibited tomorrow and Thursday, matinee daily.

These elements are deftly blended into a sparkling film that will prove a absorbing interest to Belleville fans, according to Manager Forman of the Belle.

The story taken from one of Louis Joseph Vance's best sellers, deals with the efforts of various international crooks to steal the famous Hapsburg emeralds. The owner a wealthy society woman, is bringing them back from Europe with her, and twice they are stolen aboard the ship. Both times they are recovered through the ruthless use of a jeweler who in his younger days was himself a master-thief and who knows the tricks of the trade.

When one of the crooks persuades the society woman to let her niece fly ashore with him on the ship's mail-plane and bring the emeralds with her, a rival thief aboard the vessel communicates with his associates ashore. The two youngsters are cleverly kidnapped on arrival, and doomed to death when they make an unsuccessful attempt to escape. The jeweler, however gets on the trail as soon as the steamer docks, and his efforts bring about a thrilling climax as has ever been filmed.

With Thomas Meighan and Charlotte Greenwood heading the cast as the jeweler and the society woman, and William Bakewell and Barbara Weeks as the youthful crooks, the picture is further enhanced by such celebrities as James Kirkwood, Linda Watkins, Ralph Morgan, Colin Kenny, Lucien Prival, Fawley and Anders Van Haden in important parts.

Meighan's role gives this noted actor plenty of opportunities to show his physical prowess as well as his dramatic talents, while Miss Greenwood's flair for comedy provides most of the frequent laughs in the production. Her encounter with the three crooks in a stateway is said to be one of the funniest scenes in recent years.

Many novelties are embodied in the story, including the take-off of a ship-to-shore phone from the Sherlock Holmes days. Hamilton MacFadden, who directed such hits as "The Black Camel" "Oh, For A Man" and "Riders of the Purple Sage", set out with the intention of furnishing a thrill-a-minute type of offering, and his success is indicated by the reception picture has been given in other cities.

"Good Diggers of Broadway," a Local Hit

Local fans are bound to hear of the revival of that riotously, uproariously hilarious comedy, "Good Diggers of Broadway", the second feature offering on the same program, and is notable for scenes of stunning splendor. Ravishing Rhythm and Harmony abound, and introduces a brilliant array of stage, Screen and Radio talent.

Paul Lukas appears opposite Ruth Chatterton in the role of the romantic doctor in the filmization of Philip Barry's play "Tomorrow and The Morrow", and emotional and highly dramatic triangle-theme story, which opens a two-week's engagement at the Belle, tonight.

Francois Picheral, Bishop of Bayeux and Lisieux has announced that the beautification and inauguration of the crypt and underground cathedral of the "Church of Peace" in honor of the Normad Saint will take place July 3.

To mark the inauguration, a week of "Theresian fetes" will be held June 26 to July 3. It, is believed that many pilgrims will attend, after the International Eucharistic Congress, in Dublin, next June.

The Dutch scientist, Anthony van Leeuwenhoek, rose from the post of church janitor to the maker of the finest optical lenses of his time.

At The Capitol

SMART COMEDY OF NEW YORK SOCIETY

Fresh from its record run upon the Broadway stage, "The Greeks Had a Word for Them," Samuel Goldwyn's film version of the Zoe Akins play, comes to the Capitol Theatre on Wednesday with Ina Claire, John Blondell and Madge Evans portraying the roles of "Them!"

Thus the screen gets a new idea in film entertainment. Smartness and sophistication are its keynote, a keynote which demonstrates anew the daring showmanship of Samuel Goldwyn. For months New York laughed at the wise-cracking adventures of those three gay blondes, this triumvirate which might easily have been sisters of "The Three Musketeers." And now these same adventures have been adapted for the edification of the country at large.

Men Under Chief Aim

Never before has the screen seen the counter part of these merry maids of Broadway, whose squabbles and loyalties provide the hilarity of the story. Jean, Polgreb and Schatze—each as different from the other as is possible—prepare for all and all for one, unless it concerns the affairs of the heart, in the offing, and then all bets are off.

Sharing the spotlight with them is Gabrille Chanel, the world-famed style authority of Paris, who has designed thirty outfits in which the three blondes appear in the picture—gowns and coats and other apparel which cost in the neighborhood of $100,000. Ina Claire, Radio Kor ation comedy to the screen and Richard Tay Goldgard in the lings. Alfred Newman, composer, Irvin Cobb humorist, and Lowell Sherman was assigned to direct.

Sherman, incidentally, also plays one of the leading male roles in the picture, he being one of the few Hollywood artists equipped with sufficient talent to double in brass.

The story was photographed and "shot" as written by the author, Samuel Hoffenstein, without a single deviation, as has been the custom from time immemorial in Hollywood. "Street Scene," another Broadway winner, was the first picture to be thus photographed and the success attained there, both in revenue and artistry was so gratifying that the system was repeated here.

What the "Word" Is

From the beginning—even from the beginning of Miss Akins' stage production—these artists as to what "Them" was. Each of the four Fans will learn now that the word is "fetters," meaning blondes on the loose. In fact, the Greek "heteres" and the Latin "co-alesco" "gold-digger" appear to be related under the skin. The girls are always saying: "Meet my fiance . . . not that I'm engaged or anything like that—but" Susceptible millionaires are never safe when they are in the offing.

One thing they prove, though, and that is that gentlemen really do prefer blondes. They also prove that it isn't the woman at all who pays and pays and pays.

Miss Claire, who has the leading role, is a Canadian by birth, and if anybody ought to know about these matters, she certainly should She will be remembered for her brilliant work in "The Royal Family of Broadway" and "Ulysses Bound," her other screen character-izations. And Actor John Blondell Madge Evans are two of the fastest-coming young women in Hollywood, the latter, by the way, being the little curly-haired girl who posed a dope at Polly Ann's party fifteen years ago.

Premier Henry Says 1,000,000 H. P. Will be Developed at Cost of $12 Per Unit at Plant on St. Lawrence

Cost Delivered at Toronto Will Be From $21 to $22 Per Horse Power Prime Minister Indicates —Agreement With Dominion Within Fortnight.

LEGAL VERBIAGE ONLY TO SETTLE

Capital Investment Figure of $120,000,000 For Ontario Hydro Includes Contribution to Two-stage Development—Not all at Once, Stated in Interview.

Ottawa, May 3—At a capital expenditure of $120,000,000, to be financed by the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission, the Province and Dominion will receive from the international section of the St. Lawrence waterway approximately 1,000,000 horsepower of electrical energy at a cost of from $21 to $22 a horsepower, delivered in Toronto, equivalent to about $13 at the generating plant.

This is the essence of the agreement now being negotiated between the Province of Ontario and the Dominion Government, as explained by Premier Henry. The agreement, said Premier Henry, might be concluded, as far as Ontario is concerned, within another fortnight.

"All that remains to be settled," he said, "are mere matters of legal verbiage. The rest of the negotiations will be largely between the solicitors."

Premier Henry was here all day yesterday conferring with Premier Bennett, Hon. W. D. Herridge, Canadian Minister to Washington and federal engineers. Accompanying Mr. Henry and participating in the conferences were Hon. J. R. Cooke, chairman of the Hydro commission; F. A. Gaby and Dr. Thomas Hogg, Hydro engineers, and Stratchan Johnston, K.C., who is handling the legal end of the negotiations for the Ontario Government and the Hydro.

In this composite picture, the first to be given, of the costs of the waterway power development, Mr. Henry estimated that on the basis of a $130,000,000 capital expenditure, the power would probably cost about $12 per horse-power at the power plant. It would cost another $2.50 a horsepower, he believed, to step it up to the voltage necessary to transmission, "The difference between this $14.50 cost at the transformers at Paris and the $21 or $22 lay-down cost in Toronto was accountable," he said, to the expense of transmitting the power from the transformers to the Queen City

All-Inclusive Figures

Mr. Henry said his figures of $120,000,000 total cost included the province's contribution to the joint power and navigation works and the costs chargeable to power alone, such as the expenditures on power houses and transformers. He declined to give any definite sum as the probable amount which the province would contribute to the Dominion as its share of the cost of the joint power and navigation works. He preferred to leave it at saying that the outside total amount which Ontario must pay would be $130,000,000.

This sum, he said, would be raised by the Hydro commission. If any bond issues had to be floated, the province would guarantee them, but in accordance with the usual practice, the Hydro would open a sinking fund out of which bond principal and interest would be met from the receipts from the sale of power. He did not think, however, that the $120,000,000 would have to be laid out in one lump or, in fact, during any short period. The development would be proceeded with in two stages namely, the Prescott Island and the Barnhart Island stages, so that the whole expenditure would not be entered into at once.

Clears Away Barrier

Premier Henry's statement that the Province and the Dominion have reached practical agreement clears away the final barrier to the conclusion of a treaty between Canada and the United States, it is believed here. According to reports here, the Canada-Federal agreement was held to be a prerequisite to the international treaty.

The two national, it is reported are in harmony on all the points previously outstanding between them. The major matters occupying the negotiations were the division of the costs of the waterway, Canada's claims regarding the Chicago diversion, and the controversy between the engineers as to which was better—one-stage or a two-stage development. These differences, it is believed, have all been composed.

Though Premier Henry's statement of today, opinion among those who have been following the negotiations is that the treaty to be signed between the two nations will likely be delayed and probably until this year, its ratification by the legislatures of the two countries is still well into the future. Political comment includes the fact that the periods during which both legislative bodies did not harmonize in all respects, and the factors which it is said, may withhold ratification.

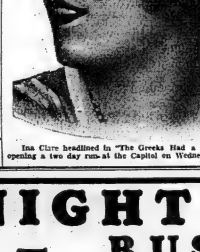
It is now conceded that the Canadian House will prorogue by May 20, and that means that if the countries are to ratify this Spring, the treaty must be signed and passed by the National Council of Parliament in each country before the date. It is now considered a prospect that the treaty will even be signed, let alone ratified, by May 24. The signing may be close but not close enough to 24.

A certain provision of the treaty is that Congress must ratify it first. Granting that Congress could not ratify it—even were it ready—by May 24, the treaty now remaining before the prorogation of the Canadian Parliament, there is only one assumption left. That is that Congress may ratify at some time after the prorogation of the Canadian House and leave the latter to ratify during the Fall session of Parliament which, by all predictions, will probably be called in October or November.

Congress Rises In June

Even this assumption is unsafe, however, in view of the fact that Congress must rise by the end of June for the presidential nominating and election campaigns. Congress as now constituted is not likely to ratify the treaty while members are busy with these matters of Congress. There has been some talk in Washington of having Congress come back after the convention and continue its session during July and August, but there is little or no well-informed opinion reaching Ottawa that such a step will be taken. United States Legislature is opposed to the idea of Congressmen, and said to feel that with a national election during the Fall swing, they are better occupied in their home districts than in Washington. They want to be in touch there, not in the House.

All these appearances there-fore would indicate that the treaty, if it is to be ratified during the Summer, will not come before Congress earlier than December and will not be introduced in the Canadian House of Commons earlier than January or February. On this basis—and there is nothing to dispute it—the treaty negotiations—work on the gigantic project for the Great Lakes St. Lawrence, as it is called, can scarcely start earlier than the Fall of 1933, or roughly 18 month from now.



Quebec's attitude is still something of an enigma. It is known that Premier Taschereau hovers in the background, ready to throw his power to defeat the treaty will prove effective if the doubtful Premier Bennett, according to well-informed opinion, goes too far in making concessions as definite as Premier Henry is said to have made. Under the circumstances could be given that Congress entitled the treaty, there would be a hold-up here. In this connection the Prime Minister undertook to take care of any objections which may crop up among his own following from Quebec.

U. S. HOUSE REJECTS PLAN

Washington—The United States House of Representatives yesterday rejected a proposal that the army and navy be consolidated under a department of national defense. The proposal was sponsored by the Democratic leadership and was variously estimated to save from $25,000,000 to $100,000,000. Its defeat came in the form of the approval of an amendment to strike the merger provision from the pending Omnibus Economy.

WHEAT CROP OUTLOOK BEST IN THREE YEARS

Magistrate Payne of Campbellford Dies After Brief Illness

Drastic Cuts Do Not Impair C.P.R. Property Beatty Tells Meeting

Shareholders' Meeting Optimistic' as Statements Are Presented of Conditions of Railway and of Finance in General

400 to 500 MILLION CROP

President Shows How Waterways, Hydro and Radio Are Cutting Into Earnings of Rails and Telegraph Lines Everywhere

Montreal, Que., May 4 (Can. Press)—Crop prospects in Western Canada are better at this season than at the same time in any of the past three years, and a wheat crop of from 400,000,000 to 500,000,000 bushels might reasonably be anticipated, E. W. Beatty, President and Chairman of the Board of the Canadian Pacific Railway told shareholders at the annual meeting today.

The President reported drastic economies in the operation of the railroad and steamships services in conformity with reduced earnings, but pointed out the condition of the company's property had been maintained unimpaired.

The annual meeting was optimistic. Officers and directors re-elected and all reports adopted. John W. Hobbs of Toronto, was elected to the directorate to fill the vacancy left by the death of Sir Vincent Meredith.

Freight Rates on Grain

"It will be generally known and acknowledge that the mileage freight rates on grain, the principal product handled on western lines, are substantially less than those which the C.P.R. railway was permitted to charge," Beatty said. "Over corresponding distances the rates now charged in the U.S. range from 30 per cent. to 100 per cent. greater than those charged in Canada. Climatic conditions, the large amount of grain moved, operating costs are more severe in Canada than south of the border. The freight rates in this country are relative to those in the U.S. coal rates are higher, and traffic density of class 1 railways in the U.S. is about 60 per cent. greater than that of Canada.

Offsets Decline

"The extraordinary decline of $47,282,000 in gross earnings since 1929 was offset by a reduction in operating expenses of $33,000,000, with the result the operating ratio has been increased from 72 per cent. in 1929 to 81.96 per cent in 1931. The company in 1931 earned its fixed charges, its preference dividend and 63 cents per share on its ordinary stock. Working assets at the close of the year were $27,223,000 current liabilities $14,000,000, an excess of $49,- 782,000, or a ratio of 1.94 to 1. The anticipated capital expenditures of approximately $7,000,000 for the year are materially less than those of previous years.

Chateau Balance Sheet

"The company's balance sheet shows the following changes since Dec. 31st 1930: On the assets side there is an increase of $4,000,000 in lake and river steamers and hotels' accounts to $30,984,000, made up of branch lines, expenditures on leased and acquired lines and on rolling stock equipment, $3,000,000; ocean and coastal steamships increased $2,000,000, as represented mainly the final payment of the Empress of Britain and Empress of Asia. Acquired securities increased $12,- 191,218. Of this increase $10,000,000 is due to the capitalization of advances made to controlled properties. Advances to controlled properties decreased $12,162,255 due to the capitalization of advances above stated, and the transfer of property investments of amounts advanced in excess of securities issued.

Assets in lands and properties decreased $3,462,797, due mainly to writing down the value of mineral lands. Materials and supplies on hand decreased $3,262,112. Trade balances decreased $1,331,094, largely due to adjustments with the Canadian Pacific Express accounts by writing off intercompany balances now incorporated against that company. Cash in hand decreased $14,806,744.

"On the liabilities side, the capital stock increased $1,000,000 on the issue of 81,625,000 preferred stock warrants exercised. Funded debt decreased $1,492,943.

Equipment obligations increased $3,278,965, and current liabilities decreased $12,492,943. Reserves and appropriations in the aggregate increased $1,822,671, and the amount "premium on capital stock sold" decreased $9,011,997, due principally to charging it with the discount of preference stock issued in the year. Net proceeds of lands and timberlands decreased $1,262,756, due to excess of cancellations and expenses over sales and interest, exchange and taxes. Appropriation for investment and development and interest on outstanding note certificates. The surplus revenue from operation decreased $19,243,790, and surplus in dividends declared decreased $1,101,042.

Reduction Not Checked

"The earnings and expenses during the first quarter of the year 1932 indicate that the reduction of gross earnings has not means subsidiary checked. Indeed the percentage decreases for the month of February and March are less than for the month of January, the decreases for the three months decreased $6,508,000, and the economies effected throughout the system resulted in a decrease in working expenses of $6,060,000, leaving a modified decrease in net earnings for the quarter of $448,000.

Resident Investment

"At the end of 1931, your company's investment in the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company of Canada was represented by 2,000,000 shares of the par value of $10 each, or $1.65 per cent. of the issued outstanding stock. The cost of your investment in the consolidated company was $12,393,944 and the total cash received on the investment on interest and dividends to the end of 1931 was $11,215,612, and in addition that company contributed during the year freight earnings during the last ten years an average of over $4,000,000 per year.

Brighter Outlook

A moderate strengthening in metal prices will restore the earning power of the consolidated company, and its immediate and future prospromises to be a definite success.

"Shareholders are aware that new forms of competition are seriously encroaching on railway earnings. Canada is developing and improving its waterways, making them available for larger tonnage at no cost to those that use them, thus permitting transport of goods at a cost below that which railways must charge. Private and public automobiles, buses and trucks operating on public highways are increasingly withdrawing traffic from the railways. Speedy transport is also also the order of the day, and in this communication is rapidly coming into competition with telegraphs.

Prisoner of Devil's Island Home After Twelve Years

Kehl, Baden, Germany, May 4 — Paul Schwartz, the man who was forgotten for twelve years while he served as a prisoner of war on Devil's Island, Cayenne, returned to his home town yesterday, and was enthusiastically greeted by thousands of persons gathered at the railway station.

Schwartz found all the members of the German Turnverein waiting to welcome him. He used to belong to that organization, and his old colleagues prepared him with a gold honor medal. Friends hoisted him to their shoulders and carried him through thronged streets to his old home on the festively decorated market-place.

Schwartz's homecoming was added to the death, a fortnight ago, of his 83-year-old mother, who instigated the movement that brought about his release by the French Government.

RETURNS PUT ROOSEVELT IN SECOND PLACE

Hint at Third Place For Alfred E. Smith in California Total

GARNER SECURED

Hoover's Regular Slate of Delegates Running Ahead

San Francisco, May 4—A steadily increasing margin of votes piled up for John N. Garner, speaker of the United States House of Representatives in California today as his backers claimed victory in the first Presidential primary in the State Presidential primary.

Taking the lead from the ticket of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt by his strength in populous Los Angeles county, returns from several jurisdictions in favor of the New York governor.

With 7,260 out of 10,571 precincts reported Garner's total was 147,782 as against 134,462 for Roosevelt and 109,248 for Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic Presidential candidate of 1928.

Garner's Strength.

John B. Elliott, southern California manager of the Garner movement, asserted the speaker had carried the state by a majority of 50,000 over Roosevelt and 50,000 over Smith.

Washington, May 4. — Mounting returns in California's vital United States Democratic Presidential primary gave Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt twofer a precarious lead and hinted at third place and defeat for Alfred E. Smith.

But veteran New York Governor's bandwagon would hurdle Smith's Massachusetts victory and go rolling on to a first ballot nomination, rested with the tremendous vote for John N. Garner piled up in the southern part of the state, particularly Los Angeles.

Favorite Son Candidate

The Garner candidacy was exceedingly close to both opponents in that section, with an enormous number of precincts still to report. This left the speaker an excellent chance at winning the state's 44 votes in the ballot-by mark. Roosevelt had 81,063, Garner following with 77,506, and Smith winding up the procession a scant two thousand behind.

Total of 363.

Out of other primary contests yesterday, Roosevelt appeared assured of all 24 Alabama convention votes as well as all but two of the 36 Georgia votes which he took unopposed. Governor Ritchie of Maryland polled pledged and claimed to 303.

Governor Ritchie's "regular" slate of delegates in South Dakota was running ahead of the "progressive" anti-Hoover candidates, indicating a likelihood he would add the state's eleven to the 730 originally pledged and claimed tol he already holds.

In Indiana,

Congressional races in Indiana showed four representatives headed by the wets leading their opponents. The four, Hogg and Purnell, Republicans, and Peterson and Gillespie, Democrats, had cast their votes against prohibition during the last congressment. Other incumbents running on wet platforms were also far ahead, leading in their respective districts.

CAR HITS POST ON BAY BRIDGE

Mr. Geoffrey Abbott, 240 William Street, Belleville, had a peculiar accident about one o'clock this afternoon that has for the present closed one span of the bay bridge road this morning and has caused considerable delay and that while endeavoring to locate the cause and drive at the same time. The car struck and bent a post on the bridge, damaging the car slightly.

Belleville Days are Happy Days

The above slogan has become familiar to the readers of the Ontario Intelligencer of late, but the exact meaning has been more or less a mystery. Belleville Days have been fixed for Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. Belleville Days idea originated with the Belleville Retail Merchants' Association, with President Charles Hanna at the helm, assisted by Secretary Fred Smith and other executive officers. Meetings were held attended by the progressive merchants of Belleville and it was determined to have these big Belleville Days with exceptional values in all lines of goods, a Trade Stimulation Sale that would mean great savings to the shoppers from all parts of this district, and long be remembered with pleasure by all who had any part in it.

Manchurian Report Does Not Fix War Responsibility

Enquiry Commission Cites Data Given By Japanese of Increase of "Bandit" Forces Since Occupation of Mukden

Geneva, May 4—The first report of the League of Nations Manchurian Enquiry Commission published here today, makes no recommendations for fixing responsibility for the situation in Manchuria.

It cites data given by the Japanese authorities setting out that "The Chinese government does not now exercise authority in any part of Manchuria."

It also quotes reports of the Japanese military authorities saying "bandit" forces appear to have increased in numbers since the Japanese occupation of Mukden in September.

The Japanese, it said, consider that withdrawal of their troops from Manchuria provided in the resolutions of the League of Nations Council, depends on the progress of the organization of the Manchurian gendarmerie, which is estimated now to number 80,000 men.

BOY TAKEN AFTER CHASE

Caught Stealing Chocolate Bars in Local Store

A young boy under the age of fifteen years was taken into custody shortly before noon today, when he was caught with another boy of the same age "hitching" chocolate bars from a local store. Constable Evans made the final capture on Everett street, after the proprietor of the store had chased the boys some distance, only to catch one and then lose the other boy soon, when the constable hove in sight. The proprietor caught the boy in the act of stealing the bars and chased them out of the store onto the bridge, where one was apprehended. Coming back to deliver his charge to a constable, he was then on the run and ran towards the lower bridge with the constable in hot pursuit. A car was commandeered and the boy was finally taken on Everett street. He was escorted to the police station but was later allowed his freedom in the custody of his parents. The proprietor stated that the boys have a habit of this kind in other stores and while the clerks are busy taking a handful of bars.

ELECTED DIRECTOR

Montreal, May 4—John W. Hobbs of Toronto, President of the Consolidated Plate Glass Company, was elected a director of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company at the annual meeting of shareholders here today. Mr. Hobbs replaces the late Sir Vincent Meredith on the directorate. Other directors were re-elected to office.

TOO MUCH OF WORDS, ALSO RESOLUTIONS

Rome, May 4. —(AP)—Dino Grandi told his Chamber of Deputies today there are "too many words, too many resolutions (inprincipio" at the World Disarmament Conference "for the modest results obtained."

He used plain language in a review of political and economic affairs in discussing the budget of the Foreign Ministry which he heads.

"The world's people, anxiously hoping for peace and new "system of international living" he said, "are not concealing their impatience, and their impatience is more than justified."

It is said that nothing is impossible; but there are lots of people doing nothing every day.

MAGISTRATE PAYNE DIES

G. A. Payne Had Been Ill But Very Short Time

Peterboro, May 4—Magistrate G. A. Payne, Campbellford, died at his home this morning after a very brief illness in his 73rd year.

Magistrate Payne was one of the oldest and most highly respected members of the legal profession in this district and had sat on the bench for a number of years in this county. He was at his office yesterday in Campbellford apparently in fair state of health. Besides his wife he is survived by one daughter, Grace of Campbellford, and one son, Charles A. Payne, K.C., of Belleville.

The funeral will be held on Friday at Campbellford.

Output of central electric stations in Canada practically doubled between 1924 and 1930 or from 9,318 to 18,083 millions of kilowat hours.

FINANCIAL DICTATORS AUTHORIZED

Border Municipalities Are Given Power to Name Brd's Control

ARE PROTECTED

Boards May Declare Moratorium on Debts of Municipalities

Windsor, Ont., May 4 (CP)—Giving the Detroit-Windsor municipalities the right to appoint boards of control who would act as financial dictators, the Ontario Municipal Board today for the first time put into force provisions of a bill passed at the recent session of the Ontario Legislature. The Board of Control have power to declare moratoriums on debts of the municipalities.

Upon such applications were made by Teumseh, Sandwich East and Sandwich West, Windsor Riverside and Sandwich.

Le Sails was advised to make another attempt to work out its own financial salvation. If tax collections improve before the next month or so the control protection will be withdrawn. On that date the moratorium goes into effect. Under Protection

The six municipalities granted relief were under the protection of the financial dictatorship of the municipal board. Through local boards of control from noon today, publication in the Ontario Gazette of notice that the control has been established will be made a week from today. On that date the moratorium goes into effect. Meetings between local officials and holders and other creditors against whose claims moratoriums are declared for hearing at the present Supreme Court sailes in Sandwich, can continue, and the drastic power is given. If it is possible for the suits to be tried and judgment given prior to a week from Saturday, the suits organized today do not interfere However, since boards of control will be in charge, the creditors will have difficulty realizing on their judgments. Therefore, in actual effect, the moratorium protection is also already in operation because of a number of criminal cases now in progress and those to follow. It is thought, in any event, the civil actions against the municipalities will come to trial before a week from Saturday.

Mayors, Reeves, members of municipal councils, officials, municipal utility commissions and other local bodies, as well as ratepayers generally will not be accepted by the Ontario Municipal Board as nominees to the Board of Control.

The three members of the municipal Board of Control are Judge Chairman, Vice-Chairman J. A. Ellis, both members of the Board of Municipal Affairs, and H. L. Cummings, recently appointed, were unanimous in their decision, made clear, although they refrained from discussing it.

Their stand came as 6 sharp surprise to the many delegations of aldermen, councillors, officials and lawyers who packed one of the court-rooms in the Sandwich courthouse. Many of the municipalities had already decided on the names of those they intended nominating for the board of control and in most cases mayors, reeves or councillors were among the number.

A kind of gooseberry which can be grown further south than the recognized "gooseberry bell" has been developed.

Russia Sees Japanese at Work, is Ready for Defence

Moscow, May 4. (AP)—Moscow newspapers today added their denunciation of the dynamiting of a bridge over the Sungari River as solved Soviet citizens of any connection with the outrage and established that it was provoked by "certain Japanese military circles bent on aggravating relations between the Soviet Government and the new Manchurian and Japanese governments."

These provocations, the despatch added, were aimed at "the arrest of leaders of Soviet institutions in Manchuria and the seizure of the Chinese Eastern Railway." At the same time diverting public opinion from the growing rebellion of Chinese groups.

Eastern Eastern at Harbin had been arrested which said that an investigation of the dynamiting of a bridge over the Sungari River revolved Soviet citizens of any connection with the outrage and established that it was provoked by "certain Japanese military circles bent on aggravating relations between the Soviet Government and the new Manchurian and Japanese governments."

Pressure Against U. S. Dollar is Lightened in Markets of World

Federal Bonds Pressed Down in Heavy Liquidation

BILL IS BLAMED

European Gold Currencies Continue to Advance Today

New York, May 4—Pressure against the United States dollar lightened somewhat in the foreign exchange markets today, but Federal Government bonds were again depressed in the securities market.

Selling of the U. S. Government obligations was attributed by dealers to the shattering of the Governmental Economy Bill in the House of Representatives yesterday.

Three of the Treasury issues declined more than a full point or $10 on a unit of $1,000 par value. The Liberties held up somewhat better. Franc Sags Little

Although selling of the U.S. dollar was smaller than it was yesterday, several of the European gold currencies continued in advance. The French franc sagged a little, then stiffened, selling up to 3.96 3-4 cents, or 1-2 of a point for cable transfers. The belgian franc, however, was lower The Holland florin continued its advance at the expense of the dollar, touching 40.65 cents, up .25 of one cent, and the Swiss franc rose .01 1-2 of a cent to 19.9.

The currencies were at levels which would make gold exports from New York profitable. The export starting was also higher.

The stock market continued its slow decline of recent sessions, registering several losses of $1 to $3 a share.

WEATHER

Toronto, Ont., May 4—Synopsis: pressure is high over the southeastern states and from Lake Superior northward over Hudson Bay and to the north from the Mackenzie Valley southward to New Mexico. A few light showers have occurred in Western Ontario and the Maritime Provinces, but the weather over the Dominion has been mostly fair.

Lake Superior—Moderate to fresh northeast winds; fair and cool today and Thursday.

GIRL SEEKING FLOWERS LOST SEARCH IS ON

Los Angeles, May 4—Hampered by yesty rain, driven by cold winds, deputy sheriffs and police continued a search today in the wild, mountainous area around Crystal Lake for three-year-old Cecelia Mitchell.

Lured by hillsides of flaming wild flowers, the youngster wandered away Monday noon from the home of her mother, Mrs. Geneva Mitchell, ranch housekeeper, and disappeared.

She was last in a section in which there are known to be rattlesnakes, coyotes, half wild hogs and mountain lions. Assuming she escaped harm from animals, it was feared rains through the night might cause her to succumb to exposure.

4 CENT BOND TAX IMPOSED

Lumber Import Taxes to Be Written in U.S. Bill

Washington, May 4.—A flat rate of four cents on the sale of each $100 bond was voted today by the United States Senate Finance Committee.

The rate was the same as set yesterday for stock sales. The House of Representatives had fixed its bond sales tax at two cents on each bond or not less than one eighth of one per cent. of the selling price.

The committee disposed of this item before plunging into another dispute which appeared impending pitting the House into the new revenue bill.

Senator Jones (Republican, Washington), told newspapermen as he went to his committee room he expected to offer lumber import taxes written into the bill today.

The Washington Senator is sponsor of several amendments to put import levies on logs, shingles and pulp wood.

Minnespaw's, May 4—Dick Williams, a butcher, went fishing and caught a chicken.

Wearing a derby to lure a trout on his line without success, Williams returned to his automobile and dozed in the seat, leaving the line dangling out the window with a worm on the hook.

A big tug on the line aroused him and there was a chicken, hooked for good. The bird had to be killed before the hook could be removed.

City and District News

RESORT DWELLERS ARE IMPATIENT

Resort dwellers, who have engaged various cabins and buildings at different locations around the water's edge in this district, have been impatiently waiting for the weather to warm up to enable them to move into their cabins for the summer. The city. A number of them have located on the shores of both of the various lakes, and still others have ventured as far away shore as the Prince Edward County shores and along the Trent Highway. Other larger resorts have also been hampered by the recent cold weather which has been prevalent. Rents are cheaper this year than they have ever been it has been reported.

BEAUTIFYING GROUND AT FILTRATION PLAN

Grounds and buildings of the filtration plant were this week being given a complete overhaul and clean up for the coming season. The settling of the banks of earth, which had been built up around the buildings last summer with material removed from North Front street and East Moira street paving operations, was evidenced this spring, caused by the rain and water washing down the material, and in some cases washing it in tiny rivulets into the nearby water. Considerable work remains to be done and the ground is levelled again. It is the intention of the manager of the department to plant more trees and shrubs in these grounds to add to their attractiveness and assist in holding the soil together. This year it is expected to make the grounds one of the scenic attractions of the district. Members of them will be encouraged to use the location for a day's outing.

DECORATE STREETS, STORES, HOUSES

Belleville citizens should take part wholeheartedly in the three big Belleville Days being staged by the Retail Merchants' Association Thursday, Friday and Saturday, when there will be many visitors from outside points. All merchants should put out their flags and other decorations, and householders should also put out flags and generally tidy up premises and look as smart as possible for the occasion.

DETAILS PERFECTED FOR SHOPPING EVENT

Belleville Retail Merchants participating in the Three Big Better Belleville Days met this morning in the Y.M.C.A. and perfected all details for the big shopping event. Prize coupons will be given out with every purchase, one coupon for every purchase of one dollar or fraction thereof. Particulars of the drawings will be found on another page.

DEFINE HOURS FOR WATERING LAWNS

Some uncertainty has been felt by a number of residents regarding the opening date in which it is permissible to use garden hose or outside taps to sprinkle lawns and roads in front of residences. This matter was cleared up this morning by Mr. E. T. Austin, manager of the local waterworks department.

"While lawns certainly do not improve or look better under the sun than during the summer months, I am pleased to be able to say that we are going to keep sprinkling running for hours at a time, the period for operation being considerably longer than the first of May until the first of October," he explained. The cost of water this year may entail the installation of a water system in homes which become habitual consumers, declared Mr. Austin. "No water will be allowed to be used except between the hours of 7 to 9 in the morning, and 7 to 9 in the evening."

SOCIAL HOUR AT KIWANIS CLUB

The attendance committee of the Kiwanis Club were sponsors of the programme at the weekly luncheon held on Tuesday at the Queen's Hotel and from the laughter and hearty applause, the day was a complete success. Considerable amusement was created among the members and Ross Hunter as a sergeant-at-arms collected a large amount of fines. A. B. Collins occupied the chair, while Claude D. Tice was called to the high seat to announce the programme rendered.

Charlie Goyer and his orchestra composed of Jerry Collins, Floyd Martin, and Johnny Gallagher held the members with their popular tunes during the luncheon hour. Miss Mary Bannerman delighted with two solos, Rachold Carruthers the same. Miss Katherine Smith, a number of readings and Miss Bernice Holand, although suffering from a heavy cold, gave solos from two popular song hits.

The artists were in splendid trim and the appreciation of the club was expressed by the members at the conclusion. There was no speaker for the day but the members had a real get-together for a social hour.

PROBABLY SOME RAINY WEATHER

Although the probabilities are that rain may fall—within the next 24 hours, the temperature for the past forty-eight hours have not varied as yet. Yesterday's registration was 57 high and 31 low. Today registrations, however, do not show a marked variation, when the mercury only fell to as low as 46 during the night and had soared to but 53 at noon today.

AGED WOMAN WANDERS OFF

Gets on Bus at Napanee And is Brought to City

When the motorbus en route to Toronto, arrived at Belleville, from Kingston, Wednesday morning, about ten o'clock the conductor called at the office of the Ontario Provincial Police and informed them that he had a passenger in a very old lady, whom he had taken on the bus from the highway a short distance this side of Napanee and who had not money to pay the fare; did not know where she was going or where she was from, nor how she had got there.

The Provincial Police took the old lady in charge and eventually succeeded by telephoning to the authorities at the House of Providence at Cornwall that she was from that institution and in some manner had been aided to get past Napanee when picked up by the Toronto bus.

Later in the morning she was placed in charge of the conductor of a bus going east and returned to Kingston.

FROLIC NIGHT AT CHAPTER

Moira Members Enjoy Euchre and Bridge Game

With Ex. Comp. John Burgess in the chair, Principals' chair, the regular monthly convocation of Moira Chapter No. 7 R.A.M. was held in the Masonic Temple last evening. As the meeting was to be of the social nature a good attendance of companions and visitors were present. The work called for the chapter on the floor of the lodge was brief and to the point so that the companions could adjourn to the club rooms, where bridge and euchre were played and enjoyed before the refreshments were served by the stewards.

No speakers were engaged for the evening and the card party was voted a decided success by the members and visitors present. This was something new to the companions and they all expressed their appreciation to Ex. Comp. Burgess for the novel and interesting evening the night's entertainment ended with the singing of the junior warden's toast.

PIPE GOOD 45 YEARS LATER

Section of Water Pipe From City is Upon Exhibition

Nearly fifty years ago the new waterworks system in Belleville was finished and put into operation. The second permit issued for a service from the main was given to Mr. H. McIlmoyle, who was then mayor of this city. In the year 1887, and who was mainly instrumental in having the water works company to construct the system. Yesterday the water service in as good shape as it ever was, according to Manager E. C. Austin, in answer to a query as to how long the average service should last. The house then occupied by Mayor McIlmoyle is now owned by Sergt. Detective J. Thrasher. Some time ago it became necessary to put an addition to this service, the pipe was then covered and a piece taken out of it. Brought up to the manager's office it was displayed by him to interested salesmen representing pipes and fittings for water services. Finally it was acquired by one company and now on exhibit in their head offices. All marvelled at the good shape the piece was in. The pipe is of pure wrought iron, very hard to work at the present time.

The first permit issued for a water service in the city was given to Mr. R. H. Smith, who ran a photograph gallery then on Front Street. This location has been lost but it is believed that the pipe then put in is still serving one of the many offices which have been opened at that location. Both permits were installed in August of that year, 1887.

SIGN PLEDGE AND GET PASS

3000 Montreal Boys Must Not Smoke or Use Vile Language

MONTREAL—(By The Canadian Press)—A pledge not to smoke, use profane language or to abuse players or umpires will entitle 3,000 Montreal schoolboys between the ages of 10 and 16 to season passes for the Montreal ball park.

Frank Shaughnessy, a veteran ball player and baseball manager of the Montreal Royals of the International League, has taken boy leaves in promoting clean living boys. Maisonneuve Boys' Knothole Club will diminish extensively now that youthful fans can get in beside the baseball stadium by merely flashing an annual pass.

Shaughnessy will distribute 100 passes to each of the city playgrounds and the number will be handed out through the schools on closing day.

The only stipulation is that the lucky boys must sign the pledge and promise to keep it whenever he is in the ball grounds.

SEEK TO STEM FLOW TO LEFT

French Candidates Withdraw in Large Numbers For Second Ballot

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Nov.—From every department of France comes word of withdrawing candidates in preparation for the decisive second ballot of the French elections next Sunday. The groups of the right and the centre are making efforts to approach a common front in view of the critical test, with the hope of stemming and indicates flow left.

But the Radical-Socialists and the Socialists are made gains in the first ballot when 346 candidates were elected—337 are to be elected next Sunday and there are 1,000 candidates—are "barring the way to reaction" in their own words and they are evidently likely to be the chief beneficiaries. Their withdrawals are most numerous. Voters with left tendencies will in the majority of cases take only one strong candidate to support.

LONDON STARS IN NEW PLAY

Miss Marie Tempest and Gladys Cooper Star in Light Comedies

London — Two of the greatest ornaments of the London stage, Miss Marie Tempest and Miss Gladys Cooper, are now appearing in new plays. Miss Marie Tempest is at the Ambassadors in "So Per and No Father," by H. Harwood, who has already achieved some success in light comedy writing. In this farce Miss Tempest is cast as a popular actress who, having parted from her husband many years earlier, is confronted with a sudden demand from her children to produce or give an account of their father. Unwilling to reveal the truth she invents a father, and even describes funeral details. The rest of the play is concerned with the complications which follow as a matter of course.

Anybody who knows Miss Tempest's talent will appreciate that, given proper scope in a character of this sort, she stands supreme. It seems open to question, though, whether in the present instance the author has displayed the craftsmanship which will allow this celebrated leading-lady a wide enough range. The farcical nature of the theme does not appear in the eyes of some critics to have been handled very nearly by the author. Miss Tempest however, gives abounding evidence that she is not nothing of her own delightful qualities.

Miss Gladys Cooper has resumed management at the Playhouse with "Fiesta Queen Xmas," also by H. M. Harwood, in collaboration with R. Gore Browne. Plays concerning Hurtlandia are plentiful enough; perhaps that is one reason why several critics seem to have been a bit bored with this latest effort. Possibly their restiveness is aggravated because there is so much talking in the play, the talk mainly coming from the men. Charming as ever, Miss Cooper has nothing of a spectacular role as the Princess. According to one critic the play "rambles along until it reaches at the end a love-scene of singular pathos, with Gladys Cooper assuming her best lovers' tone and fields heralding her abdication are their wedding bells." Some of the Leon Quartermaine had his work cut out to prevent the hero from being a dull fellow, and he had some difficulty in trying to take a floor.

A bitter experience attended the production of "Punchinello" at the Globe. Produced on a most elaborate scale, this work by John Hastings Turner, with Laurence Irving as scenic and costume designer, was withdrawn after only four performances. The production had marked the return to the stage, after a three years' interval of Laura Cowie, wife of the author. Plenty of nice things were said on the opening night about Laura Cowie's acting and about the mounting of the piece, but the handling by the author of the legend of Punch, despite some shrewd character drawing here and there, proved entirely inacceptable. The minor characters also were not suitably distributed. This is easily the most spectacular stage failure in London for some time past, but it does not stand alone. Within the last week or so one farce was taken off after two, and another after five performances.

RABBIT JUMPS THRU SHIELD

Goderich Animal Clears Engine and Hits Glass

Goderich, May 3—H. J. Brimicombe, Goderich Township doesn't believe in hunting jackrabbits with a gun upon his shoulder, tramping in the fields for a chance shot at the long-shanked bunnies. No sir; he merely allows the rabbits to jump right into his car as he rambles along the road. He must admit, however, that this method is rather expensive.

The fact is, as he and Mrs. Brimicombe, were driving along the Hayfield road between 7 and 8 o'clock, a jack suddenly shot out into the centre of the road in front of his car. Thinking it would continue across the road, Mr. Brimicombe did not slacken speed, and, as they reached it, the animal leaped almost straight in the air, cleared the engine, and crashed through the windshield of the car, and fell with a thump into the tonneau.

Neither Mr. nor Mrs. Brimicombe was injured, but it cost about $6 for a new windshield.

GIRAFFES LOST IN PHONE WIRES

Kenya Colony, Africa, May 3 — Giraffes have compelled the construction of telephone lines in Kenya Colony to use higher telephone posts. This fact was revealed by the creation of 1,000 new openings of the first big telephone trunk line in East Africa.

It was declared that existing lines were broken by the necks of giant giraffes, which were not infrequently strangled to death in their efforts to release themselves from the wires.

The new service will link Nairobi with Mombasa and Dar-es-Salaam, the capital of Tanganyika, a distance of about 600 miles.

Wakefield's Gift Helps Empire Cause

London, (by the Canadian Press) —Lord Wakefield's recent gift of $125,000 in aid of the Imperial Institute has come at a most opportune time because the various government grants have been more or less reduced owing to present conditions. The Institute, which renders such signal services to the Dominions and colonies and to India through its investigations and intelligence work in connection with the plant and mineral resources of the Empire, has, owing to the general financial stringency, been facing the prospect of a severe cut in its annual grant from the Treasury, and Lord Wakefield's munificent gift has relieved the authorities of considerable concern and anxiety.

The Imperial Institute was founded in 1888 as the national memorial of the jubilee of Queen Victoria for the purpose of promoting the utilization of the raw materials of the British Empire. It is financed by annual grants from the Treasury, the Dominions, India, and the Colonies. The General Executive Committee of the Imperial Conference of 1930 found "that the present activities of the Imperial Institute cannot be abandoned or cut down without definite loss to Imperial interests." In spite of this the various contributory governments have in many cases found it necessary under the present economic crisis to reduce their contributions temporarily.

AIRPORT ON SEINE

Paris, France — Andre Lucrat, young French architect, has advanced the idea of an airport on the River Seine to enable planes to land in the heart of the city instead of in the suburbs. The field as visioned by Lucrat, would be built on piles in the middle of the river, room enough being left on each side to permit river traffic to function normally.

Only about five per cent of the potential oil land in Alberta has been leased, according to expert opinion.

CUP OF WATER TO RUN LINER

Splitting of Atom Declared Achieved at Cambridge

London, May 3—Creation of a modern Aladdin's Lamp was envisioned with announcement by Lord Rutherford that the splitting of the atom—described as the ultimate goal of modern science—has been achieved in the Cambridge University laboratory.

This, scientists say, would pave the way for such seeming impossibilities as driving a liner across the ocean by a glass of water, or the transformation of a bit of iron into gold.

According to theory, the discovery would mean the complete revolution of the physical world as known to man. It would unharness power, said to be inherent in all matters, the releasing of which to-day is but a dream.

Lord Rutherford explained atoms were split by bombarding them with 120,000 volts of electricity, millions of protons being sent through a vacuum tube at 4,000 miles per second. Only some of the atoms were split, but the energy from the energy from 100 to 160 times stronger than that fired into them. Thus energy was not produced on the whole, because only certain of the atoms were broken up.

New Road May Wipe Out Amphitheatre

London, (by the Canadian Press) — A Roman amphitheatre outside the walls of the City of Chester, is in danger of being wiped away by the construction of a new road. The existence of the amphitheatre was not known until about two years ago, and even now very little of it has been uncovered. Trial excavations, however, suggest that if it is fully disclosed it will prove to be one of the finest known examples of the legionary amphitheatre. In places the inner area will still stands to a height of about 10 feet, and the massive coping has been found where it fell, at the foot of the walls.

The authorities, however, are determined that the new highway must be made into Chester. The necessity for it is not in question, but it is possible to divert this new road so as to leave the site of the amphitheatre undisturbed. Archaeological societies are appealing for the sum of $40,000 which would make the deflection of the road possible.

In the meantime the Chester City Council has agreed to stay its hand in regard to the making of the new road for three months. Last month one of the council's press surprise at the "anxiety of the heads of the Christian community to save a pagan monument."

RELIES ON PAPERS IN JAILING MAN

Atlanta,—Municipal Judge Jesse M. Wood has high regard for the power of Atlanta newspapers and he relied on their dispatches in determining the sentence of a defendant.

The man, charged with violating prohibition laws by possessing 100 gallons of liquor, was placed on trial but prosecuting officers failed to appear as witnesses.

"Were the newspaper accounts of your case substantially correct?" the judge asked the prisoner.

"They were," the latter admitted.

"Twelve months on the chain-gang," said the jurist.

ARRESTED FOR SERIOUS CRIME

Captain Lancaster Accused in Death of Haden Clarke

Miami, Fla., May 3.—Captain W. N. Lancaster, former British aviator and flying partner of Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller, Australian aviatrix, was charged with the first degree murder late yesterday for the death of Haden Clarke, 26-year-old author and her fiance, who was mysteriously shot eleven days ago at her home here.

The charge was placed by State Attorney R. Vernon Hawthorne, who said he based his action for the most part on the declaration of J. V. Haring, an expert in the examination of fraudulent and questioned documents, that two notes, purportedly written and signed by Clarke, were forgeries.

The State Attorney said Captain Lancaster admitted writing the notes and signing Clarke's name, but that the first denied killing Clarke.

TABLE GARBAGE CANS

London—"Lay dust bins for six Mark", may be the order of the society hostess of the future, if an invention shown at the inventions exhibition catches on.

It is a small box, about the same shape as a mail-box, and with a large slit in it. The idea is to have one in front of each diner, and the purpose is to conceal the bones, bits of gristle, and other debris that otherwise are left at the side of the plate.

History Points to Prosperity Return

Sigrid Ekstrom, Swedish Industrialist in Radio Talk Heard Here

His subject Versatile Treaty

World-wide improvement in economic conditions was predicted last night by Sigfrid Ekstrom, Swedish industrialist, in an address broadcast from Stockholm over a network of the National Broadcasting Company. He based this belief on the view that "history repeats itself and that after bad times comes good times, after depression comes prosperity."

He held that the world was suffering from the World War and its political and financial consequences, and he assailed the Treaty of Versailles, asserting that business men had pointed out when it was being drawn up that it would hamper trade. He also condemned increasing tariffs.

Mr. Ekstrom made it plain his faith in Sweden in referring to the regretable Kreuger catastrophe, saying:

"We feel that the old belief that the world had about Sweden's honesty has been shaken. We Swedes, however, wish to see a clean breast of the whole matter, and we hope that the old conception of Swedish honesty will be reinstated."

He noted that Sweden, like all other countries, had been hit by the depression, but he asserted the affairs of the country were sound, and added:

"I wish me to make a statement of which I am proud. No bank depositor has yet lost one single dollar in Swedish bank for the last hundred years."

THE CLINGING OF MEMORY

Many a former scholar of the Belleville High School and the old Albert College has faint recollections of Latin learned from the grammar edited by Dr. John Henderson who died in Toronto at the age of eighty-seven years. He was the one who first gave them the Latin declensions and taught them through instructors how to read a simple line of the Commentaries of Julius Caesar, the Aeneid of Vergil or the Odes of Horace.

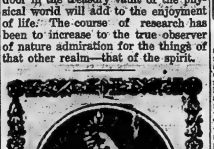
A language is soon forgotten when student days are over unless one keeps them up. But even if the words are lost memories cling about the classics to which such grammars as those of Dr. Henderson serve as introduction. These memories of school days and teacher cannot be effaced. How good for the world that it is so!

GARDENING LOTS

That action should be taken to use as much of the vacant land in the city as possible for gardening purposes is the feeling of a number of citizens who see an immense advantage in increasing the food supply at a very moderate expense particularly if as many expect the improvement from the depression can not be as rapid as expected. There is a large amount of unoccupied land which might be used for this purpose.

Some communities have taken steps along that line. What action, if any, will be taken here, remains to be seen. But as said before, a number who have been in touch with the local situation in providing for those who are out of work, favor some united action. If anything is done, it must be done quickly.

BLASTING THE ATOM



Getting at the secret of the universe whether in the mass or in the small atom, has always been the goal of a certain number of men. For others the hills are green or brown according to season, and grain and food do does drought the thoughts of the forces behind these manifestations of nature do not throb their minds. But for the searcher after truth this delving into the secrets of nature provides the happiest of all occupations. It is not a job, it is to them a quest of a golden fleece.

How ancient this seeking may be gleaned from the word "Eureka" (Greek for "I have it")—the quest is as old as civilization and will end only with civilization. The battlings yet that search is always illuminating and the search goes on conquering and conquering.

Will nature ultimately yield every fact that is? It is hardly in the build of things. But that there will be a gradual flowing out of knowledge from research may be assured. No one can comprehend the vast treasury of life in the nature, but much is done and can be done. All science has immensely benefitted mankind in the improvement of living conditions and in knowledge of the world in which we live. Dependence upon science may in a way have for some mortals caused a shrinking of the imagination but for the true seeker it has opened up realms which not even the most fervid imagination of the most imaginative of races could create in the recesses of the mind. Truth in nature is richer than what man's mind can contrive or fashion.

Now two young scientists of Cambridge, England, have split the atom —one of the great goals of scientists. The atom is the basic particle of all physical matter. What will this finding mean to man? No one can tell. It may revolutionize life's surroundings and add new vistas of thought and imagination. It may transform the conditions with which we have surrounded ourselves.

Whatever it does this is assured —in the economy of nature it will be for the good of man. It was thought that man might, if he split the atom, destroy the world. But it has not. Worlds are not so easily wiped out. More likely this new key to another door in the treasury vault of the physical world will add to the enjoyment of life. The course of research has been to increase to the true observer of nature admiration for the things of that other realm—of that of the spirit.

THE POET IN MAY
By Aline Michaelis

The four walls stifle me today,
And from the tyranny
Of the grim office clock I fly away
My life I must be free!

I must have rest from weighing word
With word, for sound and sense;
And oh! to sing as sings the bird
With blithe inconsequence!

To sing and soar into the blue,
As lark that seeks its mate;
To sing with thought of none but you,
And minstrel heart elate!

The four walls stifle me today,
So I shall leave behind
The sombre city, grim and gray
To dance through sun and wind.

To read, where Nature's roundelay
Is voiced by joyous birds,
Scrawled there, across the springtime day
The greatest Poet's words!

BE CAREFUL AND LIVE ONE HUNDRED YEARS, or would you rather live careless like and be withdrawn from circulation much earlier? Listen to this my merry lads who are kept awake by the noise of your arteries hardening, and have taken the degree of Angina Pectoris—would you like to live one hundred years despite the Biblical reminder that man's span of life is only three score years and ten and if by reason of variations of any kind from this formula he may live longer yet is his extension of living devoid of pleasure and full of pain and sorrow. However, here's the hundred-year prescription:

Sir Humphrey Rolleston, Cambridge professor, tells how you can hold out for a century in a new book, "Medical Aspects of Old Age."

Heredity plays the strongest part in producing long life. It is important to maintain activity of the mind and body. Premature retirement does not tend to produce long life.

As for smoking and drinking, says Sir Humphrey, in moderation they have little influence in shortening life.

But food in excess certainly does not help you gather years.

Will-power, said Sir Humphrey, may prolong the life of your nerve cells. He prescribes: "Fresh air, meagre fare, freedom from care."

The vicar had been informed that two of his flock were on exceedingly bad terms and that there was a hint of a domestic split. So the good man went to their home one evening and found them glowering at each other over the fire. Also on the hearth-rug asleep, were a dog and cat. The vicar seized this chance and said, "Look, my friends, why not try to agree. Even your dog and cat live amicably together." "Yes," growled the husband, "but tie 'em together, parson, and you'll see a dickens of a racket."

LAND FOR THE UNEMPLOYED

The possibility of putting not only single men, but also the married men on the land takes on a new and greater importance with the decision of the Dominion the policy of relief works. There is reason to believe that large numbers of the single men can find work on the farms if they will accept a change when work until conditions improve. Those who will not take such jobs when offered should be disciplined by the taxpayers of Winnipeg. And the placing of families on the land also becomes a more important consideration. The city government should be willing to cooperate in a scheme of that kind if it is found there that more than one of direct relief for the families in any case. And if should be possible to place a large number of families on farms, no subsidy will be more available in Manitoba.—Winnipeg Free Press.

TOEING THE LINE

It is no accident that foreign correspondents in Germany are at pains to pipe down on British optimism. They take their cue from official London, which is plainly warning the taxpayer that he has heroically balanced the budget, he must see to it that it stays balanced. There is no subsidy for revenue, the very vitamin of the body economic. While other nations are adding to the taxing passes at balancing their budget, John Bull must keep his eye on the path of financial rectitude. Where other nations might be tempted to ease off after a successful year's laurels, John Bull keeps on plugging away. It is "dull and unthrilling though," then the rest of the family must put up with little more mudding.—Montreal Star.

NO COERCIVE TRAINING

There is a firm conviction among some people that to shoulder a wooden rifle and to march about in a cadet corps is to become imbued with the spirit of militarism. Censorship than they have. High school registration would be a step in the right direction, and the addition of scientific courses, orderliness and respect for discipline. It is not without merit as an introduction to participation in national organization. But since there are those who strongly believe that military training of any kind, even for defence, is wrong, surely it is desirable that the benefits of cadet training should be restricted to those who can conscientiously put obedience to their conscience. The strongest defensive force for training will be found among those who would put it to the test—voluntary training relying on encouragement rather than coercion.—Toronto Telegram.

END OF WAR DEBT PAYMENTS MAY BE NEAR

Germany's official declaration of its intention to pay no more war reparations must be viewed as the down on the whole question of future payments. Germany has its claims on debt and reparation account. If economists are right a return to normal economic conditions will be hastened and the world as a whole will be the gainer. But for the slate is wiped clean of these burdensome accounts. The United States and France hold the key to the solution. There is no official recognition in the former country that it cannot expect to drain all the gold out of Germany. And at the same time sell its goods in Europe. Germany is the key.—United Press.

Pop was smoking and reading in his private chair the other day when on the floor thinking and listening to the wind until I was sitting on Hay pop, if I suddenly opened all the windows and doors in the house everything all around the room, including your newspaper, would you think it was funny?

No, and neither would you, in fact you would regard the occurrence as one of the saddest episodes of your life, particularly after a session, pop said.

Morning what he would do to me, and I said, Well if I mixed up a lot of dirty water in a bucket and came up in back of you and smeared it all over your face with a whitewash brush, would you laugh?

I'd laugh just as much as you would laugh directly afterwards when I warmed the seat of your pants so thoroughly that all your other trousers hanging in your closet would feel a simpathetic tingle pop said.

Meaning not at all, and I said, Well O pop, then how is it that's exactly what Squidge Jones did in the Knit Up Komedy at the Little Grand last Saticday and you laughed like everything?

IS RUDENESS AMONG WOMEN INCREASING?

Love Rivalry Most Impelling Motivation of Women

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

We do not like to associate women with rudeness, even in our minds. A woman is more or less an ideal character. A married idolatry for women is engendered when we think of women. The mother concept is built around her children and every woman, as a possible mother, is viewed as possessing superior, if not divine, qualities.

Yet when we look about ang observe women in commercial fast some of them, and surely many more than should be—we are bound to be shocked at their rudeness and general impoliteness.

It is not unusual to see women pushing each other about, and seldom do they accord courtesy during the struggle. The mother concept is left behind.

Women are also quick to quarrel and squeezed and helplessly trying to keep their balance, is a picture of Santa Claus. And yet Christmas is the season of peace on earth and should be specially reserved for them!

I am reminded here of the experience of a young lad of fifteen who, in getting into a street car, insisted that the lady in front of him should precede him. Being a little polite little fellow he jumped forward and lifted her up, but as he handed the purse to the woman, instead of thanking him she snatched it from his hand and, exclaiming that he had had it in mind to run off with it.

With some women ordinary gossip is literate far from polite and they even border on the malicious. When a bit of gossip sets out to malign a fellow woman, they are unanimous to each other, even among the lower animals, while opposite sexes are frequently critical to each other.

Men are antagonistic to each other but these differences are the result of this antagonism in their business and professional life and are not bitter or vindictive, however, as women.

Women are always striving to outrival each other in clothes, possessions, beauty, charm, in attracting and holding the love of a man. Love is the greatest thing in women's motivation, and here their most primitive instincts come to the fore.

Yet we would like always to think of women as more refined and cultured than men, and in many cases they are. Women should try and hold in check their primitive instincts and, as a result, be more polite.

How far is increasing rudeness on the part of women responsible for decline in politeness on the part of men? Undoubtedly men are not living up to give their seats to women in cars and, generally, are not as polite or take off their hats when entering elevators. These are not good signs.

There is something so stridently cheerful and perky about a robin which is found in no other bird's absence a reader of this column. Who sends in some interesting facts about the "king of birds," as she calls him. "I wouldn't trade the robin for the best bird in the whole tribe. They are the cheeriest and most likeable of the lot, and with a little more care and attention they make the best pets one could imagine. For five years now I have had the same one coming back year after year to the same nest under the gables of my house. For three years he brought his mate home with him, but for the last two years she has been absent. This year there is another one. I know he made bird because he has a different song and one wing. Each year he comes back he gets tamer and tamer every day—breakfast, left at outside my window and since he got to know them when he thinks I have had sufficient time to weaken he'll hop into the room with them, but for the last the sill and then eye me with his head cocked first on one side to see if I'm getting up. If I don't get up he'll fly out and sing some more and then keep repeating the performance until I do. When I go downstairs he flies down and waits for me to open the kitchen door and then he helps himself to the ways gets. Now I am the earliest riser in the house, consequently there are some morning when I would like to ignore him and go to sleep again. When I think of how much I'll miss him and the rest of them when they go south, though, that cures me. He is so tame now that I can almost pick him up and sit on the table. Another curious thing about him is that he is piling me if there are any stray cats in the neighborhood. He will dive-bomb fly to the door and keep chirping until I let him in. When I chase the cat away he seems perfectly satisfied."

WRENS—

Several more residents report arrivals of the birds for the present year after year. One resident of the West Hill tells of the pair who have come back year after year to the same house that they come right in the house. A lady on Charles Street built and installed a new apartment for the birds, and twenty minutes after it was erected a pair of them had taken possession of it. Mr. H. G. Imports of Dundas Street reported late last Fall and put in the corner of the yard. Two starlings observed in the city on the 2nd this is the season to take advantage of the place they wanted. All save afternoon getting small sticks and grasses them around the entrance of the shelter so no other bird could enter it and claim the house. This spring they returned and tore the barriers down. Now they have taken to the lady the other three to oust them. A Dundas Street resident has had a pair of starlings for pets all winter. He claims they thrive on above bird bird company and ability to perform queer little tricks. In practice, he declares, the birds can be taught to sing and talk better than the average parrot. A Cannifton lad, finally have had a pet crow for several years. All are now keeping him out of mischief. He is said to be able to mimic any word any of them can utter. If any one should come around the house after the family have retired he screeches at the top of his shrill voice. Lastly the Cannifton lady dweller found a baby sparrow huddled on her door-step last fall. She reared it through the winter and it has just gone home with the rest. It will sit in the open window for hours.

Single $25 Pea Yields 200 on Pass Lake Farm

Port Arthur, May 4—Green peas, King Tutankhamen's own favorite food, are growing on Pass Lake, 25 miles north of Port Arthur, Mr. Pejstrup is the possessor of more than 200 of them, descendants of one stalk.

A year ago Pejstrup visited his home in Denmark and while there purchased a solitary pea for 25c. He tells that six peas were brought to the tomb of the boy King Tut Ankyre and sold for amounts varying from $20 to $30, and the one Pejstrup planted bare in the Danish rotunda last June.

The stock of the pea was about five feet tall, topped with a cluster of multi-colored flowers, the stem being about half an inch in diameter. From the solitary pea a yield of over 200 was obtained.

CANTRELL IS WHOLE SHOW

Scors Only Run Against Leaders and Hurls Well

Jersey City Terminal tail-enders in the International League, may do some tall climbing this season with the assistance of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Dodger management took out an option on the Skeeters last week and already has sent there pitchers Phil Gallivan and Karl Mattingly, and infielders Jackie Warner and Bobby Reis.

Mattingly, in his first start in a Jersey City Uniform, beat the champion Rochester Red Wings, 4 to 3 in 16 innings, longest game of the season. He was pounded for eight hits and five runs in the first six innings but blanked the Red Wings with five hits over the last 10 innings. Jersey City won the ball game in the 16th on a single by Hunnefield, Cauley's double and Clyde Barnhart's single for the game-winning hit of the game. George Puccinelli clouted his ninth homer of the year, a wallop over the centre field fence cleared only once before. A crowd of 15,000 saw the game.

Baltimore gave the Buffalo Bisons an even break in the first four games in the series by whitewashing Buffalo Bisons 7-2. The Orioles pounded Joe Bloomfield for three runs in the fourth and added three more off Slim Brewer in the ninth, when Frank Packard belted a homer with two on. A crowd of 19,836 looked on in glorious sun to see Baltimore's big slugging Nicora to six hits.

Nine thousand spectators saw Guy Cantrell outpitch Harry Holaday and George Blaeholder in the first game, a 1-0 decision over the league leading Newark Bears. Cantrell's single, a double by Moreland and Printz' line single produced the only run of the game in the fourth inning. Cantrell allowed only six hits.

An opening day crowd of 8,000 watched Montreal Royals trounce Reading Keys in a wild slugging affair 12-6. Wallace, with a home run, two doubles and a single, led a 1-hit Montreal assault on three Reading pitchers. Ernie Koy, first set was reached for only seven hits and two earned runs but his support left something to be desired.

WEDDING PLANS.

Dear Mrs. Breckman:—

1.—Do bridal attendants and the attendants of the groom Buy their own outfits?

2.—What would you suggest in the way of gifts to be given to the bridesmaids and the men in the bridal party? Should the girl attendants' gift be uniform, and men attendants' gift be uniform or should the best man and the maid of honor be given something more expensive than the others? Unless it is compulsory, I would prefer not to do this, as it might hurt the feelings of the others.

3.—When sending out wedding invitations where there are mother, father, and grown children, and also when there are only brothers and sisters, would it be permissible to send only one invitation and enclose only one invitation and the reception card on the breakfast card, as the case may be, for each one? Should two reception cards or breakfast cards be sent for husband and wife?

4.—Is it customary to send wedding invitations to the parents of the people to be in the bridal party, even though there is a slight acquaintance or possibly no acquaintance with them?

M.

1.—Yes. The bridal attendants and the grooms attendants pay for every article of their attire for the wedding except such details that may be provided by the bride or groom. For instance, usually the groom sends his best men and ushers their ties, and sometimes their collars and gloves, so that they may be strictly uniform. And the bride usually gives the bridesmaids the detail of their costumes, the hats, or the gloves, if they are to wear gloves, etc. And usually their bouquets are given to them by the groom or the bride's parents or by the bride. Also the boutonnieres of the best man and the ushers are usually given by the groom.

2.—Customarily the gifts are uniform. A very popular present for the bride is a piece of jewelry, such as a bracelet, or she may give a necklace, or the always-popular vanity case, a ring, an evening bag, a travelling bag, pendant.

The groom usually gives a wallet, a cigarette case or lighter, wrist watch or something of that sort.

3.—The best form is, if possible, to send one invitation addressed to Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Wood and to each other member of the household old enough to receive formal invitations of this kind If the budget is much too taxed, then send to Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Wood and to the daughters addressed to The Misses ..... and one to the sons addressed to The Misses ..... .

If that again isn't possible, address the invitation to:

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Wood

The Misses Wood

The Messrs. Wood

No matter how many people the invitation is addressed, enclose only two admissions to the reception or breakfast card. And don't whatever you do, address the envelope to Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Wood and family!

4.—It would be most impolite not to send an invitation to the family of one of the attendants, whether or not you know them well or at all.

DINNER NAPKINS

Dear Mrs. Breckman:

I purchased a table cloth with dinner size napkins from Ireland, and on them there is a small machine hem. Would it be appropriate to have these hem-stitched?

H.

Hemstitching will give an appearance of informality to this table-set. It would be much more beautiful if done by hand with a shine-made hem, and substitute for this the hemstitching. Put a fringe on the table cloth three-eighths of an inch to one-half an inch wide. The napkins should be French-hemmed also, with hems of from three-eighths to one-half an inch in diameter of an inch wide.

Mrs. Janet Breckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden

We are always looking for the perfect pale pink evening frock. A well night perfect model is done in pale pink angelskin lace with a border of matching tulle mounting in a point in back. There is a "pussy cat" bow scarf of the tulle and pink tulle roses mark the back of the waistline.

For comfort combined with beauty the prize must be awarded to a lovely nightgown. It is white satin and has a cross-cross scrap back just like an evening frock. The straps are narrow ruffles of accurate Alencon lace. Lace is also used for the moulded hip sections and for the bodice.

The rare moment of perfection is perfectly expressed in a glorious all-white costume. The evening frock has a high-waisted moulded pleated skirt of white georgette and a plain bodice of silver lame with a square décollete. It is worn with a straight-line crmine jacket of hip-length.

A slight line of demarkation marks the formal evening costume from the informal one. A smart informal costume is a frock of black satin with bishop sleeves pleatted in black jet. With it is worn a short-sleeved collarless ermine jacket and an evening hat of the satin.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Housecleaning Time is Hard on Hands

Many a poet has done a lot of souling on the subject of home. "Home sweet home," "Home—the nursery of the infinite." And Mistress Bill Shakespeare himself says: "The air of paradise did fan the house and angels officed it." Bridget Flanagan of Avon was out about his business when Ann Hathaway called in the decorators, tore up the rugs by their roots, fells the curtains, turned the pantry up side down and shook out its powder. "Air of paradise" indeed! With pails of ammonia willing to help and no place to hang your hat. Work to be done that nobody else can do. .

Neither moving nor house cleaning is a billing matter. One survives. In due time the kitchen table will be detached from the company of the grand piano, put back in its place. Eventually the painters and paper hangers will meander on to some other distressed, distraught family circle to shuffle household goods about. Let the housewife keep those blissful facts in mind. Time heals all wounds, though it won't do much for baited china or lamp-shades that somebody casually sat upon.

Gird on your armor and keep yourself together as neatly and nicely as you can so that when the fracas is finished, the fight is over, and home is home again, your beautifying bill won't knock you flat. For housecleaning is hard on hair, complexion, hands and finger nails as well as disposition.

Stick to the rubber gloves. Yes, I know, you hate 'em. There are bound to be dusty closet shelves, the best of families have them, dusting books is a grimy business. As for polishing furniture, if that comes in your line of duty, you fail to protect your hands. Oily cleaners have a way of tricking under finger nails, edging into knuckle grooves and playing the very mischief with our white buttertlies. Takes weeks to get them right again. If they have not been there a small machine item. Would it be appropriate to have these hem-stitched?

Keep the hair veiled. Wrap the locks with some light fabric, a bit of thin gauze, anything that will serve as a protection and still not produce moisture on the scalp.

No matter what the hubbub, if you can find your flesh brush and soap and towels, have the nails thoroughly scrubbing before you go to bed, with the special object of scouring and cleaning the tips and the elbows. They get the worst of the housecleaning racket.

With rugs up, floors bare, feet have a hard road to travel, so change shoes during the day. No run over slippers, but real regular shoes, with a low heel and the instep. Don't skip meals, or nibble crusts on the run. When the job is difficult and trying, there is more energy spent than in the usual daily routine of housework. At mid-afternoon have an egg-nog or a glass of milk. Food has a wonderful way of boosting one's spirits. And keep in mind the thrilling ecstatic moment when all is order again, the dumsdee diggings bright and shining!

Hard-Time Social

Merrimani reigned supreme last evening at the I.O.O.F. Temple, the occasion being a hard time social event sponsored by members of Quintena Rebekah Lodge No. 123. Members were requested to dress accordingly and some of the outfits worn certainly represented the depression or as "Andy" would say the "repression".

At the conclusion of the lodge business a programme was carried out. Mrs. J. Smith and Mrs. J. Neale were voted by the judges as winners for the ladies' prize, while Messrs. Charles Frost and Wm. Brooks were presented with the gentlemen's prizes which were in keeping with the occasion. Community singing and songs by a choir of Rebekahs, feeling the depression, were rendered and dancing was indulged in. During the evening refreshments were served. It was in every respect an evening of rare enjoyment.

WRITES PLAY IN SIX DAYS

Instantaneous Hit and Patrons Are Packing in

New York, May 4.—Hear about a woman with three children, who "out of pure exasperation" wrote a play in six days that is "laying 'em in the Aisles" along Broadway.

She is Mrs. Rose Franken, a careless carefree young mother who came out of Texas at the age of four, married Dr. Sigmund Franken oh her college matriculation, and now lives in a Central Park Apartment with a husband, three sons, two dogs, a cat and a restless typewriter.

From that typewriter, carried from room to room to evade the children, has come "Another Language", which the critics hail as a first-rate drama in any language. The author never had a lesson in playwriting, seldom sees a show.

"Things went wrong with another play I'd written," she explained, "and we had to give up producing it. I sat down on the bed. I didn't know whether to laugh or be mad about it.

"Then, I said, Well, I'll do something else," and I wrote 'Another Language' in six days."

Paul John and Peter—thirteen, seven and three—No Saints—"Laugh at Me" and play had only her writing," she said, and her friends, tell me I'm the most misinformed woman in the world. She doesn't deny it.

WOOLER Y.P.S. VISITS CLUB

Guests Present Interesting Programme and is Well Received

On Monday evening the Young People's Society of Wooler were the guests of the young people of Holloway Street United Church at a social and religious gathering in the church parlors. A large number of young people from the two societies took advantage of the inspiring and educational evening and an enjoyable evening was spent. The Holloway Street Church orchestra was in attendance and added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening.

The evening was opened with a hymn and prayer after which Miss Kate Anderson, president of the Holloway Street Young People's Society, welcomed the Wooler visitors to Belleville after which Miss Mildred McColl responded on behalf of the visitors.

"The meeting was then handed over to Mr. Harry Orvis, president of the Wooler Y.P.S., and they presented a very interesting and educational programme. After the devotional service Mr Howard Richards of Wooler gave a very fine address on the subject of, "What does it mean to be a Christian", which was heartily received.

The following programme was then presented, duet Misses Bragg and Coote; vocal solo, Miss Laura Wolkenden; reading, Miss Dewey; vocal solo, Miss Powell after which Mr. Howard Purchas of Holloway Street Church took charge of the programme. Many interesting and amusing games were indulged in with Miss Kate Anderson acting in character of ceremonies.

Dainty refreshments were served at the conclusion of the programme being under the supervision of the ladies of the church, the gathering ended with the Benediction after which many words of praise were spoken before the young people departed to their various home taking with them new ideas and hearty fellowship with their fellow association and spiritual learning.

FINANCIAL NEWS

NORANDA AND NICKEL DOWN

Higher Priced Stocks are Subjected to Heavy Selling Pressure

TORONTO, Ont., May 4.—Higher priced stocks were again subjected to heavy selling pressure on the Standard Mining Exchange today, with International Nickel bearing the brunt of liquidation. The general list gave a dull performance.

Noranda again displayed weakness, price dropping through $13 and standing at that level for a loss of nearly $1. International Nickel, off 15c to $5.80 set another new low for the bear market. Eldorado was steady around $1.60.

Golds were unusually soft in the first hour and despite a midday rally were practically all below last night's finals. Dome was accorded support after touching $8.30 and up 20 on the day at $8.38. Teck-Hughes showed a loss of a point at $3.37 to $3.45 off 01. Lake Shore was down 1 at 2 and Hollinger was another 1 at 84.30.

Among lower-priced stocks Venture, Bidgood and Kirkland Lake gold lost a cent apiece to 24, 39 and 31, respectively. Sladaper did very quiet, with Arno Gas fractionally lower at 11.

PRESSURE IS LITTLE EASIER

Financial Market Reflects Uncertainty and Doubt

New York, May 4.—A moderate quickening of selling early in today's session of the stock market was followed by some abatement of pressure after midday.

On the whole, however, the financial markets still reflected uncertainty and discouragement. Weakness of U. S. government bonds, and some further selling of the American dollar abroad, again reflected uneasiness over the Federal government's difficulties in balancing its budget.

Selling of stock was somewhat more general than in the previous session, but was again largely concentrated in a few issues, and appeared to reflect further special liquidation. Issues losing two to three points at the worst included American Tobacco, Allied Chemical, Coca Cola, Kennecott, American Can, Isaco R., Norfolk and Western, W. Grant, Coty, Int. Nickel and a number of preferred issues, but after midday, there were numerous reversals of from fractions to a point. U. S. Steel sold off 1¼ to 36¾, but recovered a major portion. Oils still held up well, as did a number of other miscellaneous issues, including General Motors, North American, Lehman Corp., and Standard Brands. Shoe, which has seemed to be pegged around 37 for some time.

LEADERS MADE RECORD LOWS

Losses Outnumber Gains on Toronto Stock Board

TORONTO, May 4.—Losses outnumbered gains on Toronto Stock Exchange again today and some of the leaders made new record lows on fractional declines. Industrials among this latter number were International Nickel and Ford of Canada, the former down to 5 1-2 and the latter to 7 1-2.

C.P.R. equalled its former low of 13 and Montreal Power, Consolidated Smelters, Western Canada Flour, Canada Malting, Mitchell Brantford Sugar, Steel Co. Pref. were down a point to 43.

Gills as a group continued to give the best display, with the active leaders such as B. A. Oil, Imperial Oil and International Petroleum unchanged at midday and Canadian Oil formed per bale.

Gypsum was firmer above three and there were also gains shown by Consumers' Gas and British Industries.

Produce Market

TORONTO, Ont., May 4.—The United Farmers Co-Operative Co., today supplied the Canadian Press with the following quotations on produce delivered in Toronto:

Eggs extras, dozen 13c.
Eggs firsts dozen 11c.
Cream Churning No. 1 lb 15-17c
Creamery Butter No. 1 Solids lb 17c.

Potatoes No. 1 (Carrots in bags) 30-35c.

TORONTO, May 4.— Wholesale prices on Canadian fruits and vegetables as reported to the Canadian Press by While and Co., are as follows:

Apples, 4 quart basket 30-25c.
Apples 11 quart basket 50-35c.
Beets, 11 quart basket 15c.
Carrots 11 quart basket 50c.
Hothouse tomatoes per lb 30- 35c.
New cabbages per crate $5.00 to $5.25.
Parsnips per bag 60c.
Turnips per bag 40c.

STERLING RATE FIRM.

London, May 4 (AP).—The feature of the Foreign Exchange Market today was a firmness in the Sterling dollar rate, which rose from 3.66¼ to 83.68.

The exchanges telegraph agency said this was due largely to "a policy of inflation" indicated in United States legislative measures, which resulted in a heavy selling of dollars on continental account.

The Evening News attributed the movement to disappointment with United States economic plans.

Nations and Men Need Intercession

At the Alliance Tabernacle, West Moira Street, Rev. Robert Moore, Evangelist and Bible Teacher, gave a helpful and inspiring Bible exposition last night. Mr. Moore emphasized the urgent and great need in the church today of real, earnest prayer and intercession on behalf of nations and individuals, calling the fact of a nation saved by fasting and prayer in the book of Esther when faced with distress and condemnation.

Mr. Moore gave a vivid picture of Peter's deliverance from prison in answer to prayer by the church, picturing Peter bound in chains and within iron gates in the answer to today ,but being gloriously delivered in answer to prayer. Mr. Moore emphatically declared the fact the Bible clearly states man's condition, spiritually dead and in darkness and blindness, and said man's need is rebirth spiritually.

Fun and Frolic Rampant as Minstrels Hold the Boards

Rotary Club's Efforts Unqualified Success in Entertainment and in Attendance — Sparkling Performance is Given

Fun and frolic for all, with more laughs per minute than one would care to count, made the 1932 third minstrel show presented last evening by the Rotary Minstrels in the Collegiate Auditorium one of the high lights of the entertainment season in Belleville. Few prominent citizens escaped the probing of the malevolent men, and what these entertainment revealed was supplied by the inimitable interlocutor, Charlie Dolan, as the chairman blandly attended at the show. Ringing choruses of fifty voices, splendid solos by the soloists, with dainty dance numbers provided varied entertainment that was enthusiastically received by the crowded house.

Three veterans of Minstrel shows George Dulmage, Ab. Wheeler and Chas. Dolan who appeared in Minstrel Shows forty years ago were there to delight the audience again with their fun.

Mr. Directorship

Under the direction of Reg. Hinchey the musical part of the programme was a splendid success. The chorus included the outstanding singers in the city and their ensemble work was remarkable under Mr. Hinchey's baton.

First Tenors—Chris. Holmes, Jack Andrews, Albert Hunt, Herb Hancock, Tom Barrett, Alfred Evans, Louis Renouf, Jack Fahey, Fred Minnick, Fred Mitchell.

Second Tenors—Cyril Waite, Bill Norris, Everett Morrow, Ernie Hidley, Teddy Orr, Herb Wrightmyer, Roy Strong, Fred Eagleton, Art Thompson, Les Belinger, Howard Clarke.

First Bass—Jack Thomson, Geo. Illsley, Harold Howard, Bill Hancock, Tom Barrett, Bert Houston, Joseph Lee, Jack Fahey, Fred Minnick, Tom Colclough, Charlie Dickens, Bill Sharpe.

Second Bass—Fred Sprague, Geo. Dulmage, Harry Norcross, Elwyn Wishart, Sid Hector, Bruce Martin, Harry Stanley, Morley Ivan, Frank Hitchon, Harry Hill, Fred Smith, Ross Rumber, Jim Gould.

Mr. Hinchey was also director of the orchestra that added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening.

Leo B. Riggs presided at the piano, while the members of the orchestra included:

Leo B. Riggs, pianist; Marcel Young, violin; Clare Dobbs, saxophone; Joe Wertheim, clarinet; Bert Hatfield, D. Brown, flute; Harry Greenleaf, flute; Thos. Wenamun, trumpet; Lochrey, trombone; Walter Asselstine, saxophone; Bill Grant, drums.

End Men Stand Out

With Charlie Dolan as interlocutor, Eddie George, Scottie Scott, Joe Shortt, Everett Smith, Sam Turner and the veteran minstrel, Ab Wheeler, were end men par excellence and kept the audience in chuckles all evening. The end men were heard in excellent solos which included: "Good Morning Carrie," by Eddie George; "Mississippi Mud" by Sam Turner, and "Swanee River" by Everett Smith; "By the Watermelon Vine," Sam Turner, and "Melody Time in Dixie Land" by Ab Wheeler.

A step dance by Everett Smith and Bill Gerard was a feature of this part of the programme.

The ballads brought to the fore light a group of Belleville's foremost singers. Harold Barrett was heard in "The Bells of St. Mary's," Ed. Brown in "Where the Silvery Colorado Winds its Way", Fred Burke contributed "Fools Rush In Where Angels Fear to Tread" and "The Sea"; Al Gillman "In the Village by the Sea," while Jimmie Bamber gave the favorite student song, "Alexander's Ragtime Band." He delighted the audience in his base solo "Sands of the Desert", and "Tim Tumaral Tears."

In the second act, the audience was treated to a "Double Scotch" in the opening number with Jimmie Clarke providing stirring music on the pipes and Harold Barrett singing "Loch Lomond" while the Highland dance was very gracefully done by Miss Clarke.

The dance in the second act were arranged by the pupils of Miss Esther Mack, in a series of solo and group numbers while the following pupils of the Conlon School for the Deaf danced faultlessly a selection: Ethel Thompson, Alma Sanders, Eleanor Morrison, Stella Gerow, Ruth Morton, Rose Bennett, Robert Thompson, Jack Morrison, Bance Aldcritch, Frank Dedhelter, Jean Matchett, Bess Robert Thompson, Bogdan Bogdanovich.

A xylophone solo by Bill Grant was warmly received and Harold Shaw as Al Ohan was one of the hits of the show in his number, "When Irish Eyes are Smiling." The minstrelsy came to a close with a selection by the entire company of favorite characters' favorite songs which the chairman, Jack Fahey cast was composed of: Uncle Tom, Fred Eagleton; Uncle Jack, Harold Howard; Uncle Sam, Bert Houston; Uncle Ben, Bert Hatfield; Uncle Josh, Bill Sharpe; Uncle Dick, Bill Sharpe; Uncle Tom Colclough, Charlie Dickens; Bill Sharpe.

Sparkling Performance

All in all, the evening was one of sparkling entertainment, and the Crippled Children's Fund for which the show was presented should be well augmented if last evening's attendance is a criterion of the numbers who will attend tonight. Between acts, the sale of home made candy provided by the wives of the minstrels was sold in large quantities.

The staff in charge of arrangements for the show are to be congratulated on the smooth running performance.

Some People Still Beat Rugs!

No wonder housecleaning time is dreaded. Some rug makers start in energetically, wear themselves out and are still not satisfied with their labours.

Modern's methods of special cleaning return lost beauty to rugs and other furnishings difficult of cleansing.

Let us, this year, cleanse your rugs, drapes and your upholstered furniture. You will be more than gratified with the results.

CAPONE SAYS HE'S THROUGH WITH RACKETS

Arrives at Atlanta Ga., Ists Today to Begin 11-Year Term

WELL GUARDED

Good Behavior Will Let Gang Chief Out in 7½ Years

BY VICTOR HACKLER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

On Board Capone Train, at Danville, Ill., en route to Atlanta, May 4.—Al Capone, disillusioned and deserted gang chief, approached the United States Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., today, his own description he was "through with the racket."

Tonight he will start serving an 11 year sentence for income tax evasion and Capone, giving up hope at last, said there was "nothing left to do" but make the best of it.

As his train cut down toward the southland, the gangster jested and kept up a rapid fire conversation with guards, but did not try to hide his disappointment.

"How would you feel if you had eleven years staring you in the face?" he asked when newspapermen questioned him.

Capone's wife long exile has been expected to rob him of his rule over Chicago's underworld, it was still Capone the big boss of gangland that was being taken to prison.

Provisions Made

At every stop from Chicago to Atlanta guards were made by local police or railroad detectives to watch his car. United States Marshal H. G. W. Leubenheimer took charge of the party himself, with the assertion his main object in life right now was to get Capone off his hands.

It was not a special car bearing Capone to prison, for it contained almost to that since it was occupied only by coons and other prisoner, the guards and newspapermen.

With time off for good behaviour Capone can cut down his sentence to about seven and one-half years. When he gets out, he said, he intends to "stay out of politics and all the other rackets." If he had any plans for the future he refused to reveal them.

A few minutes later, however, he indicated he had not lost all interest in the liquor gambling syndicate that is reported to have made him a fortune.

"Anybody that says I'm for prohibition is all wet," asserted the gangster, who has said that prohibition was out of the way and he could handle beer legitimately. There would be more profit, no hijacking, no loss of gunmen and a cheaper price for the stuff."

Franco-Italian Differences Draw Comment from Bennett

Ottawa, May 4—Differences between France and Italy entered at the moment any definite move toward disarmament at Geneva, according to Premier Bennett, who is here to a settlement made, yesterday in the House of Commons by Premier Bennett.

Mr. Bennett spoke of two great powers, one demanding "security" and the other "equality" which, he said, had differences which made definite agreement on disarmament practically impossible at the moment. It was generally agreed by observers here that France was aiming as the "security" country and Italy as the nation asking "equality."

The Prime Minister made this statement to Hon. Ernest Lapointe, former Liberal Minister of Justice, when the latter asked if Canada's disarmament delegate would report on the Geneva proceedings at this session. Mr. Lapointe and Mr. Bennett replied that the people

Wrong Name Was Published in Court Case

In yesterday's issue of this paper a regrettable error occurred in the report of a case heard in the police court at Belleville.

Albert Sidney, of Sidney, had appeared before Magistrate Millet on two charges, the first of stealing a chimney, a grate, a ring and other articles of wearing apparel, and the second of receiving. Albert Millet pleaded guilty on both charges. The clothes in question belonged to the family of James Jackson of Sidney, at whose home Miller resided and who lodged the complaint. Miller explained to the court that he was married and that he had separated from his wife and was willing to work if employment could be obtained. Miller was given two years' suspended sentence and bound over to keep the peace, being warned to find a job as soon as he could because of the health of his wife. Miller promised to go to work.

After a moment Jennie said, piteous and of struggle.

"Don't answer now," Dwight said quickly. "I'll wait. I'll not force you. It seems until you're ready. Shall we dance?"

Tom saw them rise, saw her go into Dwight's arms before he left. His duties for the evening were over. He went straight to Lynn's apartment house and was announced to Sarah. She opened the door herself.

"Why Tom!" she said, astonished.

It was late. She was ready to go to bed. To rest, not to sleep. She had not slept well recently.

"I had to see you. I've just come from a road house out Yonkers way. I saw Lynn there with Dwight. He was holding her hand across the table, looking as if he could eat her up. What does this mean, Sarah?" Tom demanded.

Sarah sat down in the nearest chair, "I don't know," she admitted.

"She belongs to me," said Tom. "She knows it. What is she doing with him?"

CHAPTER VI.

Sarah asked a question in her turn. "What has happened between you? You must tell me, Tom, if I am to help you."

He told her briefly. When he had finished he repeated, "I didn't do it. She just jumped at the conclusion. Didn't give me a chance. I could produce Rawlson, of-course."

"Rawlson here?"

"Sure; he suggested it in the first place."

Sarah was remembering Dwight's question; her answer, unhesitatingly given. She had seen Dwight and Bob Rawlson talking one day on the main banking floor of the concern apart. Dwight had done well lately. She had heard he was going abroad on a long vacation.

But how on earth had Dwight first stumbled across Rawlson's path?

She asked Tom suddenly, "Do you know where Bob Rawlson lives?"

"Why, yes," he answered; "it isn't far from here. Why?"

"Go there," ordered Sarah, "now, this minute. Make him tell you to whom he has talked recently. Force him to."

"But—Lynn?" he asked. "Sarah, I'm nearly crazy. If you could have seen them! Y—I nearly went in there and dragged her away from him. You know how I feel about her. I've been a fool, keeping away out of pride, stubbornness. If only I'd come back, made her listen to me, brought Bob to see her if necessary—"

She couldn't understand; it seemed an awfully small thing to come between us. Yet it had done it."

"It wouldn't be small to Lynn. But you didn't do it. I'll talk to Lynn. Go, now, and see if you can find Rawlson. Leave us to us," said Sarah, and rose.

Tom knew he could trust her. He left and went out to find Bob Rawlson.

Sarah went downstairs and spoke to the superintendent, who knew her intimacy with Lynn. She had, she told him, an urgent message to give the younger woman. She wanted to wait in Lynn's room until she came in. Incurious, the superintendent admitted her.

She waited there through the longest hours of her life; not the longest; she recalled those others—she had to.

Would Lynn come in alone?

As it happened, she did not. The car drew up at the door shortly after one o'clock. They had dined late, tired of dance and talk. Tom had been in the inn from eight-thirty until a quarter of one. He had come directly to Sarah's apartment.

"May I come in for a moment?" Dwight asked outside the door. "You don't—I've been the only visitor."

Lynn had her hand on the knob and said, "Why, it's open!" she exclaimed in astonishment. "No, of course you haven't come in."

"If it's open, I must," he answered. "Suppose the place has been broken into or something?"

"But that's ridiculous! Still, I'm sure I shut the door."

Sarah listened, waiting.

Dwight pushed the door; the door swung. He stepped into the room, saying over his shoulder, "Wait and there's a moment, darling. Then, Sarah—" he said, on the heels of that betraying endearment.

"I was waiting for Lynn," Sarah told him, quietly. "Lynn, you, too."

But inevitably she had.

Lynn, cold, on Dwight's heels, exclaimed relievedly, "Oh, it's you! When we found the door open we were afraid someone had broken in."

She was flushed, but her eyes were tired. Sarah said evenly:

"Shut the door, Lynn, and come inside. This is a curious hour for me to be calling. I had some thing to speak to you about, something important. McHiggin let me in."

"I'll go," Dwight offered hastily.

"I'll call you tomorrow, Lynn."

Easier to let him go; easier to say what she had to say to Lynn alone. But—

"I'd rather you stayed," Sarah said steadily, "for it concerns you, David."

He raised his eyebrows. "My dear Sarah, what can possibly concern me?"

Lynn dropping her evening wrap, flinging her bag on a table, came and perched on the arm of Sarah's chair.

"Sarah dear, what is it?" she asked. "You look so tragic."

Dwight stood leaning against the little bookcase, speculating, his eyes appraising the room, the incidentals....

It was to Dwight that Sarah addressed herself now. "Do you remember our conversation this summer at your house?"

"Perfectly," he admitted coolly.

"Then you must recall that you gave me your word, which you have broken."

"Dear Sarah, you embarrass me! Cannot we postpone this interesting chat until another more reasonable —or reasonable—hour?" he inquired.

"No, Lynn," Sarah said, turning to the girl beside her, "last summer when we were at David's I asked him—"

"If my intentions towards you were honorable, darling?" Dwight interrupted.

Lynn colored. "Oh, Sarah—" she began, remembering her acceptance of her own double.

Sarah ignored both interruptions. "I asked him what he meant by his attitude toward you. I reminded him that you were engaged to Tom Shepard. He promised me that as long as you remained so he would—"

"Pads from the picture," Dwight explained. "And I did. But Lynn's no longer engaged to young Shepard."

"How did you know?" Sarah asked.

"She told me so," he answered.

"But you knew before she told you. Or else you broke your promise first.

"Oh, I knew or guessed."

"How?"

"One hears these things," he admitted.

"From Robert Rawlson?"

Lynn was ignored. Sarah's steadfast eyes were on Dwight's. He shrugged.

"Rawlson " he added. "Rawlson?"

Blank amazement. Too well done. A picture flashed into Lynn's mind: Dwight's car at the curb; Bob Rawlson walking away from it into the bank.

The task of lowering the boy's "grandmother" over the ship's side to a waiting canoe was rather difficult. The lad insisted on being always at her side. When at last she was safely settled in the bottom of the craft bearing them shoreward her grandson dropped catlike after her. So interested was he in seeing her comfortably disposed he failed to notice the package that slipped from his pocket into the water.

It was quite dark when the boy and the old woman entered a rickety shack boasting the name "Hotel" and were given a back room on the second floor. Here a wave of homesickness overcame him, as he explained to his "grandmother". She could remain in Africa if she wished, As for him, his conscience demanded he return to the scene of his birth in England and his parents. To which "grandma" said nothing much, seeming to prefer sleep.

Having come to a decision, the lad felt a sense of relief from the worry that had haunted him for many sleepless nights, and when he closed his eyes it was but to dream of a happy reunion with those at home ,.....,and as he dreamed, Pate, cruel and inexorable, crept stealthily upon him from the dark corridor of the squalid "hotel." Pate in the form of the ren egade Dondo, who had shadowed the lad's every more since they left the ship!

Cautiously the man approached the door; listened until the regular breathing inside assured him the inmates were sleepy. Deftly he inserted a skeleton key, entered and bolted the door quietly behind him. The room dimly lit the interior as he groped his way toward the bed. In the far corner of the room something moved—moved with such silent stealthiness that even the trained ears of the bur-

N.B. MAN STARTS "ENDLESS CHAIN" OF MALLARDS

Gives Pair to Anyone Agreeing to Give, in Turn, at Least Pair

Saint John, N.B. — A brawny Irishman who breed his home out of virgin timber a few miles from Saint John, and who, with his family, lives the life of a pioneer almost in the shadow of the city, is showing the world how a duck can be a help to man.

He is W. B. Devine, of West Branch, whose "endless chain" of wild mallards has attracted attention not only in other parts of Canada but in the United States.

Mr. Devine gives a pair of mallards which he has raised himself to any person agreeing to give away, in turn, at least one pair of the progeny under the same agreement. He visited Saint John recently to send a pair of ducks to S. N Olmsteed, of Greenhurst, N. Y.

It is his hope that his "endless chain" will start a widespread fad of duck-raising — ventures as the years go by. His scheme has already won the endorsation of the American Game Association.

Mr. Devine, who is a farm and sporting camps on the shore of the Bay of Fundy, just 14 miles from the city, has three step-children, two girls and a boy, who with his wife, help to look after the ducks. But that is not all they do.

The children's father is their school teacher. In the evening, around the fire, he teaches them the "three R's". He teaches them also the lore of the wild. The Devine youngsters are true pioneers. They can make their own bread, their own butter, their own clothes. They hook their own mats. They can sole their own shoes. They can even make roads. For that matter, and do.

The Devines live in their own little self-contained world, perfectly contented.

Mr. Devine is proud of his family. He is also proud of his ducks. "Ducks," says he, "can tell you a thing or two. Humans can get a lot of lessons from them."

"A few years ago," he said, "Mr. Allan O. McAvity, of Saint John, gave me a pair of mallards. These ducks flew away almost the moment they were released from their cage. Mr. McAvity then gave me some mallard duck eggs — we put them under a hen, but had bad luck with them and raised only two birds of the eight hatched. The two survived and turned out to be both drakes. We then got two mallard ducks from a gentleman who was returning to England.

"So, from these birds, we raised 20 young mallards last spring and all of them—with the exception of three pairs—have been given to people, some in Canada, some in the States, who have promised me to give at least one pair of their progeny to people who will in turn do likewise.

"In this way an 'endless' chain of mallard duck raisers will be formed. It will also create a desire to help increase the dwindling supply of mallard ducks. People who wish to could clip one wing on a drake and one on a duck that they wish to keep; for propagation and let the rest of the birds go free.

"It costs very little to keep a flock of mallards. They forage nearly all their food except when the snow is deep and the ground frozen. Any kind of an old shelter will do for them, even in the worst weather.

"It is surprising what little care these birds require. And do you know, they are most intelligent. I really think they could be trained to perform little stunts and obey those who feed them and care for them. Last winter, when everywhere water was frozen, our girls put out a pan of water and placed it on a board for the ducks. "One would naturally expect to see the pan of water upset. No sir, these 30 little ducks just circled around that dish. As daintily as could be imagined they drank that water and went back to the shelter of that house. Not once did they spill their drinking water all winter.

"Had they been the domesticated ducks they'd have sailed in with their wings thrashing and then none of them would have got a full drink. The mallards drank their water to the last drop in the dish and waited until it was filled again."

Moira Friends Arrange Parties to Honor Recent Bride

Moira — The home of Mr. and Mrs. T. Elliott was once more the scene of one of the most popular gatherings of the season, when at the request of a host of friends, they desired to do honor to one who while practically an orphan, had more paternal and neighborly esteem extended to her than any other young lady of Moira. This is amply evidenced by such as the following:

Moira, April 28, 1932.

Dear Mary and Harriet:

Having learned that you, Mary, are about to leave our neighborhood, we your friends have gathered here tonight to spend another social hour with you and to extend our best wishes.

Your pleasant, genial disposition has won for you many friends to which this gathering bears ample testimony.

We trust that you will not forget us and that you may often return to spend a few happy hours with us again. As you enter the new life ahead of you, we are sure that you will manifest the same capability that has always characterized your former life.

Life is not all sunshine for anyone, but if we take the following motto as our guide, life for any of us cannot help but become richer and richer:

"The inner side or every cloud is always bright and shining I therefore, turn my clouds about And always turn them inside out For show the silver lining. We ask you to accept these gifts as a token of our esteem and hope that in days to come they will bring many happy memories.

Signed on behalf of your friends,
Annie Morton.
Berha Emerson.
Ruth Emerson.

Moira, April 26, 1932

Dear Mary:

It is with great joy we, as a C. G.I.T. group meet here tonight to do honor to whom honor is due. Joy, however, with mingled feelings we thus come to you. We wish to express our best wishes for your future days, in your own home, at the same time we regret that your new undertaking calls you away from our circle and vicinity.

We all feel, Mary, that you have scattered sunshine wherever you were. You have lived so unselfishly, in the church, the home, and the community, which to us all has been "a thing of beauty and a joy forever." As you are the first girl to leave our group to tread the matrimonial road, we ask you to accept our autograph quilt with our best wishes and if in the future lonely feelings creep over you, may you get consolation while reading the names on this quilt. As for your partner in life may we add

Whether skies are dark or blue,
May they always smile on you.

Signed
BEE RUTH and ANNIE.

The gifts at the shower and those from relatives and friends were numerous and useful, and the young couple drove away after the shower a large car was loaded to capacity, and few brides have ever left Moira more richly endowed than Mrs. Harriet Johnson (nee Mary Vandewater).

ARCTIC OFFICER IS LAID TO REST

Ottawa, May 2 (CP).—An impressive military funeral, with the cortege moving slowly along streets lined with civilians who doffed hats in tribute, was accorded Inspector Alfred H. Joy, famed Arctic officer of the famous Royal Canadian Mounted Police, here today.

Inspector Joy who had braved many years service as an officer of the law in the barren Arctic, died here Friday. He was to have been married on Saturday to Miss Carmel Murphy, of Ottawa.

MAFEKING VETERANS MARK ANNIVERSARY

London, England (by the Canadian Press)—Twenty-five veterans of the siege of Mafeking will meet at Pax Hill, Lord Baden Powell's country house at Bentley, Hampshire, May 17, the 32nd. anniversary of the relief of the town. Brigadier General C. "Forgotten" Gold in U. S. Treasury

Chicago, May 2—Economists, amateur and professional, demanded that Congress put to use one hundred million gold dollars "forgotten" by the United States Treasury Department.

The "forgotten" gold is deep in the vaults of the Treasury, say the demanders, to back up paper currency long since destroyed. Paper money vanished during the civil war, the great Chicago fire, the Galveston, New Orleans and Florida hurricanes, the Dayton flood and during other major disasters, they continue.

They say that millions more disappeared in train, automobile and airplane wrecks; that millions were hidden by those who have died without revealing it, were buried by thieves now serving prison sentences, or were submerged in ships lost at sea during the last 75 years.

Washington, May 2.—Encouraged by a sweep of Massachusetts giving Alfred E. RED HAIR STAR TO QUIT FILM GO ON STAGE

Hollywood, Calif, May 2—James Cagney, red-haired star of the Warner Brothers-First National Studios says he has definitely decided to quit films, take another turn at vaudeville in Europe and then study medicine.

Cagney recently "walked out" of the studio because of his failure to get $4,000 weekly. More than double the amount his contract stipulated.

He said he had been promised the raise if his pictures were big box office attractions and Cagney said, they were. The studio suspended him.

SENATE CENSURES McDOUGALD AND HAYDON

Startling Climax to Power Scandal Enacted as McDougald Resigns

Storm Centre of Beauharnois Affair Withdraws After House Votes

PARTLY LINE VOTE

Aylesworth's Masterly Defense Denies Power to Expel

Ottawa, May 4—Wilfred Laurier McDougald, storm centre of the Beauharnois campaign fund scandal, is no longer a member of the Canadian Senate. His resignation from the Red Chamber was announced shortly after midnight this (Wednesday) morning by Senator Raoul Dandurand, the Liberal Leader in the upper House. The news came like a bolt from the blue.

Senator Dandurand got the floor immediately the Senate had been given approval to the Beauharnois Committee's report censuring Senators McDougald, Haydon and Raymond by a straight party vote, as follows: Contents, 34; non-contents, 27. There was 23 absentees, including all those Senators who have been under fire. Senator Hance J. Logan and Dr. W. Roberts, Conservatives, did not vote, being paired with Senators Willoughby and Blanchard.

Say It's Resignation

In his letter to Senator Dandurand, accompanied by his resignation addressed to Sir Zebedee Kingsford, Governor-General, Senator McDougald said: "I have no desire to continue longer as a member of the Senate." He claimed political partisanship was responsible for the report finding him guilty of conduct unbefitting a member of the Senate, and added that, "in the light of the partisan character of both the Committee and Senate investigations of the Beauharnois scandal it would be idle for me to expect more in the way of vindication. The Liberal members of the Senate, all of whom are experienced public men and legislators, have vindicated me and I desire to express my profound gratitude to them."

"I have no desire to have any further association with those Conservatives who have tried to destroy me personally and politically," wrote Dr. McDougald in the bitterest passage of his communication. He concludes with the hope that with his resignation will "appease the passions and recriminations which already have sufficiently injured the Dominion's prosperity, and will restore peace and harmony in the Senate Chamber."

Yet to Be Heard From

Dr. McDougald's letter of resignation is in accord with the action which Liberal Senators advised him to take. It is believed, moreover, that the Conservative Party now will not pursue the plan to expel Senator Haydon at least until next session, as in the event of a fatal termination of the latter's illness they do not wish to be held responsible for persecuting him.

As Senator Dandurand concluded reading the McDougald letter he crossed the floor and handed to Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, Government Leader, the Minister of Justice's letter of resignation for transmission to his Excellency.

"Right Course" Says Meighen.

"I have no comment to make at the moment, not to the extent of a single sentence on the letter of Minister McDougald to the leader of his party," declared Senator Meighen. "The time to do anything else I may wish to say, however, that I think he has found the right course in tendering his resignation to his Excellency," (conservative applause).

During the day a notable address in the Senate discussion was that of Sir Allen Aylesworth.

"No Power to Expel."

Discussing the power of the Senate to expel members, Sir Allen quoted Section 18 of the B.N.A. Act, and privileges shall be such as Canadian legislation from time to time enacts, but no Canadian legislation so far has enacted or thought of enacting any such thing as that this Senate has the power to expel a member."

Sir Allen said the powers, privileges and immunities of Senators and members of the House of Commons in Canada could not exceed those of the House of Commons in England unless there was an amendment to the British North America Act.

"The privileges, immunities and powers to be exercised by Senators and members of the Canadian House of Commons," he continued of the act, "shall be such as are from time to time defined by act of the Parliament of Canada, but no act of the Parliament of Canada defining such privileges confer any privileges, immunities or powers exceeding those held by the House of Commons in England."

"That," said Sir Allen, "gives this Parliament power to confer upon this House powers, immunities and privileges so long as they do not exceed the present powers of the House of Commons in England.

"But until the Parliament of Canada does confer upon this Senate power to exclude a member or declare his seat vacant, there is no such power in existence. —

Parliament Act

"The power to legislate under Section 18 of the B.N.A. Act with regard to the powers, immunities and privileges of the House of Commons and the Senate was promptly exercised at the very first session of the first Parliament of this Dominion in 1868 by the passing of an act respecting the Senate and the House of Commons which act, in precisely the same way has been placed on our statute books from that day to this. It is commonly referred to now was the House of Parliament Act."

Sir Allen said than any motion to expel a Senator or declare his place vacant would be in the most direct way inconsistent with and repugnant to the provisions of the Canadian House of Parliament Act.

He himself had the honor to be a court of last resort, but contended any court was bound to judge whether or the Senate had the right to the power and whether it had legal authority for what it did. If the Senate assumed to exclude a member, he argued, that illegality means would readily be found to inquire in the courts as to the Senate's authority for doing so.

Discussing the Senate's power to expel an obnoxious member, Sir Allen said it would be a fatal blow against the independence of the Senate if any such expulsion were attempted. "A seat in this House would not be worth having if the majority could exercise the power, if it had the power, and say of a man is no longer worthy to sit among us."

Sir Allen said it was regrettable that the words of a man (Senator Haydon), charged on his death-bed, should be stricken from the record, and he (Sir Allen) pointed out the country by Senator Tanner, Chairman of the Committee. Senator Haydon had told the committee counsel not to be a "damned fool." He was in good company, however, because General McRae had told the Senate only last February that two weeks before the last election Mr. Bennett had used the phrase "not a damned cent". He was now that Right Honorable gentleman, and had used the words on the Sabbath Day. (Laughter.)

Supreme "Sacred Name"

Senator Lynch-Staunton had told the Senate he would not be afraid of Senator Haydon because the latter had actually changed his name by registration "the sacred name of the High Commissioner to the United Kingdom (Hon. G. Howard Ferguson) and former First Minister of Ontario," Sir Allen pointed out that Senator Haydon did not pretend to say that Mr. Ferguson had ever said he would not let the Ontario Hydro contract with the Beauharnois Company be signed until he got $300,000 but simply that that was what Mr. Sweezey, former President of the Beauharnois Company, thought was Ferguson state of mind. (Liberal applause).

"I think, as everybody thinks, it is utterly irrelevant to the Senate inquiry; but as to the question of fact, as between Haydon and Sweezey, all the probabilities are in favor of Sweezey having told the truth very words, and we must remember that Sweezey did hand over the $700,000 instead of other $120,000, which he thought was going to the party led by the Hon. G. Howard Ferguson for Provincial purposes."

Sir Allen argued that under the franchise and concessions which the Beauharnois Power Corporation got from the Province of the Quebec Legislature, and that what they got from the Province might count as their legal right once they established what the Navigable Waters Protection Act required them to establish.

Raymond's Case

Sir Allen said the committee should have been generous enough to give Senator Raymond the fullest kind of acquittal, and went on to argue that Senators McDougald and Haydon were not guilty of violating any existing Canadian law.

"I am willing to support in every possible way distranchised every Senator of Canada and saying from the moment he is sworn in as a Senator he loses his right to vote. Judges are in that position, and we ought to be as nearly as possible in a like position."

He contended that party politics ought not to have a place in the Senate. He had formerly sat in the House of Commons, to which Chamber he had been elected on a footing of political partisanship, "but from the moment that his Excellency summoned me to the Senate I have tried to suppress political prejudices and partisanship."

The question before the House tonight, however, was in the shape of a party question, and Sir Allen cited the late Howard Smith's interview with, General McRae, collector of Conservative campaign funds, two weeks before the election, in which the General had said there was bound to be an investigation of Beauharnois. Thus, it had been planned for months before the inquiry began that an inquiry was to be a matter of party politics.

Express Party Opinion

"In those circumstances, it is quite useless for any one to hope or think that the matter before us now can result in any other way than a division of this House upon old-fashioned party lines of division. I cannot support the resolution concurring in this report, by reason of the language which is used in the report now before the House for our decision. The House of Commons Committee had no business to say the things it did say about the members of the Senate. Let me say any one of you. If the language used in the House of Commons report about the Senator whose conduct was under investigation was the language of an impartial judge or whether it was not much more the language a political partisan would use in a stump speech. It is impossible to treat the question in this House on anything else except as a matter of Canadian party politics. The Senate Committee simply re-echoes the Commons Committee report in so many places that it has narrowly escaped, if it has escaped the charge of adopting tactics of political partisanship," said Sir Allen.

STOLEN RIDE NOT SO HOT

Dangerous Practice But No Injuries Are Sustained

Hanging on for dear life to the spare tire on the rear of a machine, which he managed to steal for almost a mile over rough roads before his precipitous ride was terminated, a threatened momentarily with the danger of being thrown off from the speeding car as each successive bump shook loose the tiny hands which clamped the wheel, a frightened little boy late last night found himself in serious trouble when he overpowered with the fact that a free ride is not to be had for the asking in a slowly passing machine. Shortly after 11 o'clock Constable Harold Gorman and then took West Moira Street to the corner of Dundas, slowing down for a stop at a house where the car owner had left it. Briefly jumped off, cramped, frightened, the youngster found himself in supports had hammered his body with every bump. The driver of the car was unaware of the fact that he had a passenger until he saw the boy jump off.

Playmates of the boy who saw him jump on the spare tire when the car passed, informed his anxious parents, who lived nearby, of the escapade. The car was reported about to be put in the boy was seen standing on Dundas Street, breathing and a bit dusty, but otherwise unharmed. The rash act which nearly have had a more serious ending than it has been evident. A longer journey to some nearby town on the speeding machine could also be class ed as a probability.

500 WANT JOBS IN ROAD CAMPS

Most Are Repeaters — Must Pay Own Fare

North Bay, May 4.—From present indications there are about 500 men willing to accept the government's offer of $3 a month and board to work on the highway camps this year. The majority of these were working on the highway before the new schedule came into force.

Harry DesJardine, manager of the Provincial employment service of agency stated, "I have already had enquiries from all the old timers in the camps. Every day about 15 or 20 men come into the office making inquiries about the highway work and stating their willingness to go out on the highway camps forms. Most of them are local men."

Any wishing to work on the highways have to pay their own fare to the respective camps. Two men who left the camp at Bonfield and went to Toronto have already returned, paying their fares, they are the only jones in the camp. At present they are engaged in putting up fences. They are their own bosses, their own cooks and chore boys.

Plane Hooks Onto Blimp and Drawn Into Hull Safely

Lakehurst, N.J., May 4. — The Goodyear-Zeppelin naval dirigible Akron, in a full-power test run with a new set of light propellers, developed a speed of 80 land miles an hour yesterday. While the Akron was in flight a plane took off from Lakehurst and successfully hooked on to the airship in midair. It was drawn up into the hull and housed there. This was the first time in the history of aeronautics that such a feat had been accomplished.

MONOXIDE GAS HAS NEW USE

Dog Injured By Car is Painlessly Put Out of Misery

Farmers of the district have for some time taken advantage of the fact, that carbon monoxide obtained from the combustion of their running automobile engines is a gas instantly fatal to all things, which may happen to breathe air, which has been charged by it. Many a barn has been rid of rats and other vermin, which infested it simply by running a lead from the muffler to their holes in the floor and accelerating the motor for a moment or two. Groundhogs and other field pests have also been smothered in their holes by the same method.

Now a new system of painlessly killing household pets has been discovered by the same method. Yesterday afternoon a dog belonging to a resident of Charles street was run over by a speeding car and suffered a broken back. The dog was in intense pain and no quick method of destroying it was deemed available. On a tip from a neighbor, that the car owner was in the garage could be used to advantage the man, who owned the injured dog, backed the machine case, bored a hole in it for the entrance of a piece of hose, into the car out and attached the hose to the muffler. The dog was placed in the box and started the motor of the car. The box remained flooded with gas and in less than three minutes the dog had passed painlessly on

HEAVY LOSS IS AVERTED

Eight Buildings Gutted Before Perth Fire is Under Control

Perth, May 4—Fire mysteriously breaking out in a shed at the rear of the Drummond Street home of Mrs. Farthwell this afternoon spread to eight neighboring houses, the Perth Collegiate Institute and the Parish House.

The spectacular two-hour fight by the volunteer fire brigade saved threatened property valued at approximately $175,000.

Fire frame sheds and summer kitchens at the rear of each stable at the corner of Drummond and Harvard streets, were burned to the ground. The residence of George Williams at 21 Harvey Street, owned by Miss Walker, was gutted, and damage to St. James Church was extensive.

The blazing shingles on the church roof caused dense clouds of smoke inside the building, and the pouring of large volumes of water into the nave of the church damaged the organ.

Slighter damage was caused to the roofs of eight other buildings.

The selection was preached by the retiring moderator, Rev. R. S. Scott of Carrington.

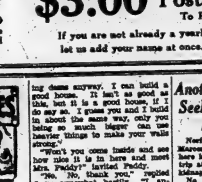
By Thornton W. Burgess

Who wisely plans must look ahead;
Who fain would lead is never led.
—Paddy the Beaver.

"I didn't know you made canals," said Jerry Muskrat to Paddy the Beaver.

"Of course I make canals," replied Paddy. "They are as important as the dam or my house. Some of them are in the bottom of my pond. These are to give me deep water all the way across pond in winter when where it is shallow the water freezes clear to the bottom. You will find that over most of this pond the water is not very deep and in winter ice forms clear to the bottom over a large part of it. But part way around my house over yonder is a deep canal from which the entrance to my house opens."



Jerry nodded. "I know," said he. "I've been a canal from my house to deep water."

"Over there where you see those sticks in the water is my food pile," continued Paddy.

"Excuse me," interrupted Jerry, "but what is your food pile made of?"

"Logs and sticks of fresh-cut poplar and willow and sometimes alder," replied Paddy. "You see, I cut down the trees that grow close on through the winter and I would starve to death or else be caught by Old Man the Bobcat or Old Man Coyote or Puma the Panther if I had to go ashore to get it. So in the fall Mrs. Paddy and I cut a lot of trees and then cut them up into logs and then tow them out and sink them in the deepest part of the pond until we have a great pile, enough to supply us with food all winter. Around that pile we dig a canal so as to always have open water there. Then we dig a canal from our house over to the food pile and another over to this dam and clear along the length of the dam so that we can come over here any time under the ice and make sure that the dam is all right. Dive down after me and you will see how much deeper the water is here by the dam than it is out a little way.

So Jerry followed Paddy, for you know he is about as good a swimmer under water as Paddy is when he wants to be, and he was as Paddy had said. Then Paddy led the way over to his house and climbed out on it. Jerry climbed out beside him. The roof was very thick and strong and Jerry admired it greatly.

"I have other canals that are not in my pond," explained Paddy. "Some of them lead to deep from where they are cut back from the pond down to the pond. I will show them to you later if you would like to see them."

"I would indeed," replied Jerry "What a fine house you have here. I had a good home, but it is under water now. If it hasn't been swept away by the flood."

"Too bad," said Paddy. "Too bad. I fear you didn't plan properly. Now, that couldn't happen to me. I've never yet had a worry about having my house flooded or carried away by swift water. That's where my dams are useful. The water spreads out without making a swift current, and it isn't very deep enough. It flows over the whole length of my dam and when such a lot can go over at once it doesn't have to go very deep. Then because it is carried away as fast as it comes into the pond, my pond doesn't get any higher. You should have protected your house with a dam."

"Perhaps you are right," replied Jerry doubtfully. "Only it is very different down where I live and I don't know anything about building dams anyway. I can build a good house. It isn't so good if I do say so myself, but I do say so. I guess you and I build in about the same way, only you have to make your dam, as you have to make your house strong."

"Won't you come inside and see how like it is in here and most Mrs. Paddy?" invited Paddy.

"No, No, thank you," replied Jerry somewhat hastily. "I appreciate the invitation, but I will remain outside."

Just then a brown head appeared in the door of the house and Jerry guessed that it was Mrs. Paddy.

"TARZAN THE APE MAN"
COMING TO BELLE FRIDAY

"Tarzan, the Ape Man," Edgar Rice Burroughs' widely read African adventure novel, has been brought to the screen under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke of "Trader Horn" fame, and will be shown at the Belle Friday, Saturday and Monday, three days, matinee daily.

GERRY MCGRATH

Because the hero of this story is a white man who has been brought up in the jungle and lives like the apes in the tree-tops, making his way by swinging through 125 a to from limb to limb. difficulty was encountered in finding someone of perfect athletic prowess to fill the exacting role.

Has Perfect Physique.

The problem was solved when Johnny Weissmuller, world's champion swimmer and one of the finest examples of masculine physiques, was cast as Tarzan. Neil Hamilton and C. Aubrey Smith, as leaders of an English safari seeking ivory wealth, Maureen O'Sullivan as Smith's daughter, Doris Lloyd, Forrester Harvey and Ivory Wrena fill the remaining principal roles.

Jungle Thrills out-do even those of the sensational "Trader-Horn" as promised in the daring trek of the safari through the wilds of Africa in search of the curious "Elephants Burial Ground". In the course of which the adventurers meet with terrifying obstacles. The wiles of the white man are matched against those of beast and native pygmies with the primitive winning out in the end, while screen romance of a new order is entailed in the curious love affair of the Ape Man and English girl.

What he reported to be some of the film's most lush realistic episodes include an attack of lions by night upon the safari camp, the crossing of a river filled with hippopotami, a fight between Tarzan and a lion cage, the rescue of a trapped elephant and the subsequent efforts of the grateful beast to aid his rescuers.

Captured by Pygmies.

There is also an amazing episode in which the heroine is carried through the trees by a herd of apes, the capture of the safari pit and the spectacular charge of a huge herd of elephants through the pygmy village leaving devastation and terror in its wake.

Settings of tremendous magnitude were required in giving the picture the authentic background of the original locales laid in the African region around Lake Alberton and the Mountains of the Moon, where herds of giant apes are found. Hundreds of savage jungle beasts were used in the production for the filming of scenes of the most unusual animal scenes ever photographed.

At The Capitol

"GREEKS" BRINGS DEFT COMEDY TO SCREEN

"Meet my Sister," says Ina Claire, "and that we're engaged or anything like that!" That sets the tone and the pace of "The Greeks Had a Word for Them" now at the Capitol Theatre, and sends its first audience away weak from laughter from contemplating the antics of its three blonde sirens as they revert through life from millionaire to millionaire, quarreling among themselves, but all for one and everyone for herself when it comes to making the best profit out of any situation.

They're classy, are Ina Claire and Joan Blondell and Madge Evans in the roles of the three charmers, but they're also the best fun seen on the screen these many months.

They are ably aided and abetted in their wild scrambles through penthouse apartments and ocean liners by Lowell Sherman and David Manners and Phillips Smalley, the veteran old-timer. It is one of those pictures you can't miss if you still like a good laugh to start things off right.

What it was the Greeks had a word for is best figured out by each person privately. Certainly the "them" of the title are the three ladies lavished and their generosities but hilarious manner of life. Ina Claire is the only one of them who has an undressing complex, but all of them are perfect for the role of neither toiling nor spinning.

Women will flock to "The Greeks Had a Word for Them" to see the fine gowns, some thirty of them, ranging from tailored suits to negligees, which Mlle. Babrielle Chanel, the famous Parisian dress-designer made specially to be worn in this production. They are the last word in smartness, and when the picture was set off to perfection by the chic charms of the three ladies who wear them.

It would be a pity to tell the story of "The Greeks Had a Word for Them" when all that is left for us to say that, at the beginning of the picture, Joan Blondell has caught a wealthy old man, Madge Evans has caught a still wealthier young man, and Ina Claire, just back from Europe and stony broke, hasn't any kind of a man at all. She immediately sets about remedying this situation and the hilarity commences, to last down to the final flash of film.

Silverware Gift.

On Thursday night each lady patron of the Capitol Theatre will be presented with a beautiful set of silver dessert spoon. This is the last concert spoon in the series and so ladies are advised not to miss it.

DAIL REJECTS PLANS FOR A CHANGED OATH

Two Amendments to De Valera Bill Thrown Out

ARE INFERIORS

Not Discussing Validity But Removing Dead Timber

Dublin, Irish Free State, May 4—The Republican Government of the Irish Free State last night effectively put down two Opposition amendments which would have modified its bill to abolish the oath of allegiance to the British Crown as a prerequisite to tenure of public office.

The first proposed by Deputy Aodh Dermot, which would merely have altered the wording of the oath, was disallowed by the Speaker on the ground that it introduced "extraneous matter outside the scope of the bill." The bill here required of every member of the Dail Eireann, "true faith and allegiance to the Free State, and during the continuation of the Free State in the British Commonwealth, sincerely to promise to be loyal to the people's obligation thereby incurred, and to the Crown, as a symbol of that partnership."

President Eamonn DeValera turned aside a proposed amendment of Ernest Blythe, Finance Minister in the late Government of William T. Cosgrave, which would have retained the oath but made it optional. Mr. Blythe urged that the Anglo-Irish Treaty, under which the Free State was constituted, should not be set aside by unilateral action.

President De Valera, however, retorted that his government was not "tearing up the treaty" and that the treaty may have." The House, he said, was not discussing the subject of the treaty, but a bill to remove "dead timber" from the Constitution.

"When we pass this bill," he added, "let the British talk about it! Let them make their protest then. We are going to have whatever dealings we have with them as equals. At the moment we are in fetters because they are depriving us of equality of status."

Outside the Dail it was said the Free State would contain a recommendation for a 5 per cent tax on the gross turnover of the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes, based on the running of the most famous of British horse races. On the basis of present subscriptions to three sweeps a year, it was estimated the Treasury would stand to gain $500,000 annually.

Ottawa—The provision in the Budget of a tax on long distance telephoning, which comes into force on Monday is likely to be modified. A decision will probably be reached today, the Minister of Finance being back to his office after a week of indisposition. MEASURING GRAIN IN BINS

Ottawa May 3—This is the time of the year when it becomes important to the farmer to know fairly accurately the quantities of grain he has available for seed or other use. A rule of thumb for determining the quantity of grain in a bin, which proves very reliable, is supplied by the Division of Field Husbandry of the Dominion Experimental Farms. To estimate the amount of grain in a bin multiply the length by the width, by the height of grain in the bin to determine the capacity in cubic feet and then divide this sum by 1-4, which will give the contents in bushels.

"ANALYSIS"

You must not analyze love,
Nor slay the poet's dilemist.
If diffed my love in a crucible,
And it parred in a candle-while mist.

It added up in a candle-white mist,
Leaving naught on the bowl's again sist.
It was a wise man said long ago:
"Not wi, but the spirit doeth grow."

I have set the empty bowl in a high shelf,
And the dust-moles dance in the sun's ray.
I should have known that love was too single
For the mind to measure or weigh.

NO COMPLAINT ON NEW TAXES

All is Harmony Though "Nuisance Taxes" Go Into Force

There were no kicks registered, nobody complained, no one tried to beat the new law. Any method they had secretly worked out themselves, and the public seemed to accept the new tax as it stood, according to those interviewed on the question of the new tax system which went into effect yesterday morning. Very little comment on any phase of the system was heard, according to those who were approached.

"This new tax—it seems a just way of raising revenue" a reporter asked one of the bankers.

"It is a just way," replied the banker. "The new system may affect large companies who do a great deal of trading and paying by cheques, but the ordinary man in the street, who cashes the occasional cheque hardly notices it. That seems an ideal condition."

"Are you escape paying this tax on cheques, has any one yet been found drawing out five or four small ones to pay a larger account?" "That's something they haven't been seen doing—at least we haven't noticed them." "No one seems to have," "Yes, I don't believe we've had a single complaint all day."

Six Extra Clerks

Postmaster J. V. C. Truslach reported the exceptional rush of postage stamps this morning when asked. "Possibly at the end of the month we will notice some increase in sales, but so far no extraordinary increase has been marked."

The office of the Bell Telephone Co. was looked on "Is that the manager's office ..... can you tell us if you have any further calls to demolish the booth when some irate long distance telephone speaker was told that an extra nickle or so was being added to the customary 25 ct. "Just ask the chief operator and she'll be able to tell you." The question was repeated when the chief operator was located. "Not a single complaint so far that we've heard," happily agreed the office of that department. "We have been charging the extra tax on the toll, but so far we haven't heard a single complaint."

Telegraph and cable companies report like harmony with their customers. "They are accepting the tax without protest" was their answer. With this branch of taxation, however there is one loophole which the public can use to beat the tax. If anyone wishes to evade the tax on telegraphs all he has to do is to send a collect message to one of the 26 outside Canada. The government cannot collect a tax on such a message according to those who have studied the situation.

They later returned to her home, where a delicious lunch was served. The guests wished their young hostess many happy returns of the day and later returned to their homes having spent a delightful afternoon.

Miss Hilda Lloyd, president of Pleasant View Y.P.S. then took charge of the program. The song service was conducted by Mrs. Magor; worship period by Mrs. Dedor. The topic "What Does It Mean to be a Christian" was discussed. A solo, "Tell Me About Jesus" by Miss Madeline Lloyd was greatly enjoyed. Readers were a mandolin solo by Mr. Tom Jury; a reading "King Robert of Sicily" by Mrs. Henry Jones which was very much appreciated; a solo, "This is My Father's World" by Mrs. Magor; a splendid reading by Miss Bristol, "The Charm of Courtesy and Education"; a violin duet by Miss Lloyd and Mr. George Reid concluded the program.

No Advantage In Gas Price

OTTAWA, May 3.—Auditors' investigation the prices of gasoline in Canada on instructions from the banking and commerce committee of the House of Commons, submitted their report to the committee today. Their conclusions were based on an examination of records of the Imperial Oil Company. The auditors found that the company took windfall advantage of either special or dumping duties in fixing the price of gasoline to the public during the period under review being the years 1930, 1930 and 1931.

The report was submitted George A. Touche and Company, chartered accountants, Toronto. The records of the Imperial Oil Company showed no evidence of "cost loading" and no advantage had been taken of either specific or dumping duties in fixing its prices of gasoline, the House of Commons Committee investigating the price of gasoline in Canada was told today.

Fire started in the chimney and had gained considerable headway before the latter were seeing dinner unaware of the fire, until notified by neighbors. Only the contents of the kitchen were saved. ANIMALS RAISED BY TORONTO UNIV.

Toronto, May 3—Another profession has fallen on evil days, that of raising animals for sale to the University of Toronto for experimental purposes. The university is now raising most of its own.

R. Robinson, in charge of the animals in the department of physiology, decided that when Dr. Harvie Ave. had lost his position raising animals for the university because he had sold them a dog stolen from Oshawa.

"We had a lot of trouble about that dog," said Mr. Robinson, "but Mr. Curtis didn't steal the dog and didn't know it was stolen, and we didn't know it was. Anyway we are raising most of our own animals at the university now."

Until recently Mr. Curtis, a cripple has supplied thousands of rats, mice, guinea pigs and rabbits every year, selling them to the university. "But we never had a contract with him," Mr. Robinson said, "and we are buying fewer only because we are raising our own."

"ASHES TO ASHES" IS THOUGHT CRUEL

Atlantic City, May 3—Possibility that the 31st quadrennial session of the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church will eliminate the phrases "ashes to ashes and dust to dust" in the burial service and substitute wholly goods I the ender" from the marriage ceremony, was given when the conference opened in the municipal auditorium.

The "ashes to ashes and dust to dust" phrase is considered by many to be "too cruel" to be included in the burial ceremony. The phrase "with all my worldly goods I thee endow" is opposed because it is considered meaningless in some parts of the country, especially when a penniless bridegroom is married to a wealthy bride.

Musical Comedy Winner Annual Pulitzer Award

NEW YORK, May 3—(UP)—Pearl S. Buck's novel, "The Good Earth" was awarded the Pulitzer prize for 1931 yesterday as "the best novel published during the year by an American author," and "Of Thee I Sing", the satirical musical play dealing with American public life, by George S. Kaufman and Morrie Ryskind, was given the Pulitzer dramatic prize.

"The Good Earth" was cited for "its epic sweep, its clearness and movie characterization, its sustained story-interest, its simple and yet richly colored style."

Answering the expected comments of surprise at selection of the play "Of Thee I Sing", the trustees of Columbia University, who made the awards said, "This award may seem unusual, but the play is unusual enough to call it a play, but it is a biting and true satire on American politics and the public attitude toward them. Its effect on the stage is considerable—by any considerable—the play is genuine, and has a fresh humor and vitality that is decidedly unusual and admirable."

This is the first time the annual award has been given to a musical play.

First in Public Service

To the Indianapolis (Ind.) News went the medal for public service, as a reward for that newspaper's successful campaign to eliminate waste in city management and to reduce the tax levy. The trustees recorded the work of the News which, by co-ordinated effort, "has recently brought about budget reduction in 86 Indiana counties."

Walter Pritchard of the New York Times, won the award for foreign correspondent, for a series of articles from Moscow, dealing with the five year plan. The prize also was awarded to Lewis Gannett of the St. Louis (Mo.) Post-Dispatch, for his article entitled "This Country's Fight—What Can Be done About It?"

Other awards were made for the best editorial of the year, and that for best reportorial work was deferred.

John T. McCutcheon's cartoon on the Chicago Tribune, entitled "A War Economics Aids a Question," was awarded the prize of excellence in the field of illustrative art. "This cartoon touches upon the gravest issue of human," the trustees said.

Pershing's War Experiences Praised

In History General John J. Pershing's "My Experience in the World War" was accorded the laurel.

"General Pershing has not only written the most authentic history of the war, but has presented it in a fine spirit in narration than any of the others, more objectivity, more fullness and more balance. The book is epic....."

Henry L. Stimpson "Theodore Roosevelt" received the award for the best biography, as the "best portrait of an outstanding American".

The award for literature, "The Flowering Stone" described as "exceedingly beautiful," was given the award.

Travelling scholarships in journalism were awarded to Frank R. Kelley, Brooklyn, N.Y.; Sepma Hasiuk, Port Chester, N.Y.; with Michael J. Caplan of New York, Betty Ballantine of Berkely, Cal., and William Harrison of New York as alternates.

Ralph Bacon, of San Francisco won the traveling scholarship in music, and Frances Bogert of New York, the scholarship in art.

Congregationalist To Turn Catholic?

London—The Catholic Times today said it was probable Dr. W. E. Orchard, prominent minister of King's Weigh House Congregational Church in the West End, London would join the Catholic Church.

The Catholic Times said Dr. Orchard has resigned his pastorate several weeks ago on account of his decision on the way to Rome where he will face the issue of his decision to the Roman Catholic faith.

Dr. Orchard had been minister at King's Weigh House Church since 1911. His avowed aims, particularly among other congregationalists in Great Britain by introducing into his church high mass, voluntary confession, the reserved sacrament and other features associated with the Catholic Church.

VETERAN AT 104 TO FIGHT NO MORE

Winnipeg—George Shaw, aged 104 years, veteran of three wars, is in hospital for the first time in his life and he wants to get out. He is convinced he could "fit up" injuries sustained when knocked cold with a truck last Saturday with some Indians he has met.

Doctors and nurses are nice people, he says, but he doesn't hold with the "X-ray business" and "they don't know how to rub in good strong liniment."

Incidentally, the old soldier told a visitor today he had reached the conclusion there was nothing in warfare. "I am telling you, I am not going to fight any more," he declared.

Mr. Shaw was returning from a brick walk of one mile when he collided with a truck.

PLANE IS "SOME" BIRD TO BORNEANS

New York, May 3—The "bird"-hunting Dayaks of Borneo were so intrigued at the sight of their fresh aeroplane that they wanted to know whether it laid eggs, Richard Hillbrotton of Newcastle, who is on a leisurely flight around the world, said in a cable from Singapore.

"The Tasmanian flier's message said he had arrived at Manila at the end of a 40,000 mile flight and had spent three weeks in Borneo with his "Flying Canoe."

"Took the chief flying in native dress, except for helmet," the cable message said. "Apparently big event in Dayaks' history. War boats were lined up, and thousands of the 100 miles to see the chief fly. Dayaks asked if aeroplanes laid eggs."

FINANCIAL CENTRE STILL IN LONDON

London, May 3 — "Attempts by Americans to remove the financial centre from London to New York have failed," Walter Runciman, president of the Board of Trade, asserted recently.

Addressing a meeting in support of the British Government at Newcastle-on-Tyne, he said confidence in the government would be continued because they were a national government with a great majority in the House of Commons behind it.

"As far as we can, see we have succeeded in balancing our payments," he said. "I have no hesitation in saying we shall be far better off at the end of 1932 than we were at the end of 1931."

CRUSHED IN COAL

New York, May 3—Three men were smothered and crushed to death Monday when a coal bin, containing 100 tons of coal, in which they were working, collapsed in the yards of Henry Hentjes, Inc., in Brooklyn. Half an hour after the accident police and firemen had dug out only one of the bodies.

HEWITT PENSION BEING APPEALED

Oshawa Widow and Family Face Loss of Income

Oshawa, May 3—Gassed and shell-shocked seven times while on military service in France, Lieut. Clarence W. Hewitt died on Thursday, April 14, the night before his right to a pension was granted by the pension tribunal. The pension was awarded too late to be of use to the soldier, but it was thought that his wife and children, who were sorely in need of the income would receive it. Now, however, the Board of Pension Commissioners has advised the widow that the decision granting him a pension for a condition of bronchial asthma is being appealed.

It is not known when the case will be heard by the appeal court but it is thought that many months will elapse before a decision is reached due to the fact that there are over 1,300 cases waiting for decision by the court.

Gunner Hewitt went overseas with the First Canadian Contingent. On his return he was suffering from bronchial asthma, but for years he carried on and never bothered to apply for a pension, finally his ill health made him an invalid.

Through the Legion 1f months ago application for Pension Dr. Springer, claim was refused by the Board of Pension Commissioners and was referred to the pension tribunal, who awarded a pension.

At that time the commission counsel representing the board at the hearing said that there would be no appeal.

Nancy Carroll Latest To Join Insurgents ranks of insurgent motion picture artists today included the red-haired Nancy Carroll.

The nature of Miss Carroll's difference with Paramount studios was not disclosed, although she has been off salary from the studio for several weeks as a result of disagreements.

Miss Carroll is the latest of four film artists at odds with their employers. Marlene Dietrich, James Cagney and Joseph Von Sternberg previously announced severance of relations with their studios.

Von Sternberg, returning to Hollywood from New York last night, said: "I am quite positive I will not direct again for Paramount, and that Miss Dietrich will not appear in another picture for the company."

CELEBRATE CENTENARY

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., May 2 —(By the Canadian Press)—Anglican Diocese of Algoma this year is celebrating its centenary. In 1832 Chief Shangwauk of the Ojibway Indians walked to Toronto on snow shoes to petition the lieutenant-governor for a missionary to minister to his people. In October of that year William Macarray, then a layman, arrived at Sault Ste. Marie to begin a fruitful ministry. In 1842 Macarray was ordained priest by Bishop Stewart of Quebec and continued his work until 1858. He baptized 160 Indians, of whom 40 became communicants. Long after Macarray was gone, the Indians moved to a reserve at Garden River where their descendants live.

Canada's carry over of wheat when the present crop year ends on July 31 is estimated in advance at 101 million bushels, the smallest since 1926.

DEATH HOUSE FOR CANINES

Dog Custodian Will Boss Cost of Lethal Chamber

Ballsville is soon to have a lethal chamber for the painless execution of stray, unclaimed and unwanted dogs, according to Mr. T. Thorne, official custodian of the local pound, who has been working out some means for its erection. This will obviate the necessity of either shooting or shooting the dogs who have spent their allotted time in the pound and still are unclaimed. Formerly, with the quiet dogs, it has been the custom to administer poison to them, but in some cases it becomes necessary to take them to a corner of the fence which is shielded off with corrugated iron, and put was and to them with a well placed shot, with some of the larger dogs some trouble, has been experienced with both methods, and the installation of a lethal chamber which can be flooded with gas after the dog is placed in but for seven times the first necessary. According to Mr. Thorne the cost of the complete installation of the chamber will be borne by him. The practice of gassing the dogs has been tried with success in all the larger centres.

TORONTO MAYOR BIDS WELCOME

Toronto is Looking Forward to Seeing Belleville Visitors on Excursion

TORONTO, May 3.— William J. Stewart, Mayor of Toronto, issued the following message today to the citizens of Belleville relative to the bargain excursion which the Canadian Pacific Railway company is running to Toronto on Saturday, May 7: "I have much pleasure in extending the heartiest of welcome to all those taking the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's special excursion to Toronto on May 7th. Toronto indeed is looking forward to seeing you, and I hope, that as a result of this visit, you will become more closely acquainted with us if possible, and I trust that you will find pleasure in visiting the chief points of interest in our City during your stay. Once more in the name of the City of Toronto, I bid you welcome." (Signed) W. J. Stewart.

Gentlemen, Be Seated And The Show is On

"Laughter, loud and long, will resound from the auditorium of the Collegiate Institute tonight when the Rotary Minstrels present their 1932 version of "Why Take Life Seriously," with each only ten cents a dozen, and all that sort of thing. Yumanee, Ki!"

The show and the boys have put much time and hard work in rehearsals during the past few weeks. The glorious chorus of fifty men's voices fill a large new and old it also works twice the price of admiedin, and it is doubtful if another community of equal size in all Canada could bring together so many good voices which harmonize so well. Then there are the six funny end men who will cast a burnt cork glamor on current events and provokingly citizens, also a lot of local color and songs of this and other seasons, including next season.

The olio contains very entertaining solos, real surprise packages of talent, local and imported, and the entire program sings along with pep and precision.

The stage has been fitted up with scenery which will give a fine setting to the show and the acoustic effects have been looked after by the pastores of the entertainment will enjoy every minute.

Proceeds will go to the Crippled Children's fun of Belleville Rotary Club.

MONKEY KILLS BULL

Burlington, N. J.—A pet monkey and a thoroughbred bull engaged a bitter fight yesterday in the barn on the farm of Charles Lewis, a dairyman, near here. The monkey killed the bull.

All winter long the monkey, the pet of Lewis' children, has lived in the barn, tormenting the cattle. Yesterday, enraged by the constant teasing the bull tried to gore it. The monkey scampered up to a shelf on which a bag of pasts green, an insecticide, was kept, ripped it open and sprinkled it over the bay. The bull was gored to death and veterinaries were trying to save it. The bull was worth $500.

Montreal, May 3—There were happy smiles in the business office of the Montreal baseball club here today in anticipation of the first game of the league season and the stadium's gala opening this afternoon. Home from the training Royals make their first Montreal appearance of the International League 1932 schedule, facing the Reading Keystones, who are at present the cellar club of the league.

Gowell "Lefty" Claset, who bowers 6 feet 4 inches and tips the turn beam gives the call to pitch against the Keys today. His opponent will be Clayton Van Atta, who is pitching with the Royals at Hot Springs for the season.

Mayor Fernand Rinfret will formally open the league by throwing a new baseball out on the diamond.

Pennants were fluttering bravely from the grandstand all day and a warm spring sunshine made promise of a pleasant afternoon for the fans.

JAIL DAYS FOR 'AL' ARE OVER

Capone Will Be Taken to Prison to Serve 11-Year Term

Chicago, May 3—Jail days for Al Capone appear to be about over, with prison looming ahead, and Capone's not very happy, about the prospect.

Government officials were preparing today to transfer him to a Federal penitentiary to start him on his 11 year sentence for failing to pay the government income tax on the enormous profits he is reputed to have made on his gangland activities in Chicago.

United States Marshal H. W. C. Leabenhammer said last night following news that the United States Supreme Court had refused to intervene in Capone's conviction, that he was practically certain the gang chief would be taken by Leavenworth and not to Atlanta and that it was probable the trip would be started early tonight.

FIRE GAINS HEADWAY

Port Alfred Que., May 3 (CP)— The stubborn fire eating its way through $1,000,000 worth of pulpwood piled at the edge of Port Alfred continued to grip beyond today despite the efforts of over 1,000 firefighters from Quebec city.

Police Outnumbered 4 to 1 Battle Vicious Doukhobors

Nudists Use Water and Vile Smelling Liquid Before Subduing

Nelson, B.C., May 3.—(CP)—Details of the fighting incident to the arrest of 117 Doukhobors for parading in the nude near here on Sunday reveal that the forces of the law had some real opposition.

The police started by sprinkling kich powder on the naked bodies of men and women. This led to a general disrobing by others and a wave of resistance which found officers sometimes beating back three and four nude Doukhobors. The women were particularly vicious. As the kich powder was not very effective in the high wind that prevailed the Doukhobors started an offensive by using water from a garden hose. Several officers were drenched before the pipe line was disconnected. As fast as officers grabbed a nudist he was set upon by one, two or three more. One nudist, without clothing, stepped backwards and fell into a glass hothouse. Another received a severe gash on the forehead and is at present in the hospital. She frightened the police "for they know not what they did."

Police uniforms were torn and Doukhobors used a vile-smelling liquid on Staff-Sergeant Stephenson who while entering a new uniform.

Ringleaders were arrested first and then into cars by force. Thirty men were crowded into a passing passenger train and rushed to jail. After the first loads were taken to town the balance milled about, many refusing to don their clothing and defying the officers to take them to jail. The women entered their trucks without fuss. They hurled their clothes aboard and climbed on failing to don any clothing on the way to town.

These left behind chanted Doukhobor songs and one woman, despite the chilly atmosphere, refused to put on clothing all day.

ROSA FONSELLE III

New York—Miss Rosa Fonselle of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who was to have sailed on the Columbian liner Saturnia, has been ill with the grippe for several days and was forced to cancel her passage, it was learned last night.

Complications arose in her illness Thursday night and three physicians were called to her bedside, but last night it was said that her condition was improved and she probably will be able to sail on Monday or Tuesday.

CHESTER VASE TO BULANDSHAR

Aga Khan's Three-Year-Old Wins Feature at Chester Meet

Chester, Eng., May 3 (C. P.)—Bulandshar, by Blandford out of Donalfrey, this afternoon won the Chester Vase by four lengths from Lord Astor's four-year-old Crewe Bulse, with Sir L. Phillipps' three-year-old Wyrern Third, another two lengths back.

Five ran over the mile and a half course. Bulandshar started at odds of 8 to 2, Crewe Bulse at 3 to 1 and Wyrern at 9 to 4. Bulandshar and Wyrern are candidates for the Derby to be run June 1.

The Chester Vase was worth about $10,000 and featured the opening day of the Chester meeting. The Chester Cup will be run tomorrow. Sandwich, who won the classic St. Leger last autumn, was winner of the Chester Vase a year ago.

Robert Louis Stevenson will go down to posterity as the greatest travel-writer of modern times.

HEROIC STORY OF ESKIMO LAD

Travelled 160 Miles To Bring Sick Mother To Safety

(By The Canadian Press)

OTTAWA—A story of youth, devotion which prompted a 12-year-old Eskimo lad to harness himself to a sled with two dogs, pull his sick mother and three-year-old brother to their over 160 miles of tortuous Arctic trails, is told in the annual report of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police just made public.

Coupled with it is a sad tale of his widowed parent who spends her life in drudgery and fear, but keeps the promise to her husband that she would not re-marry.

Travelling without fuel in the worst period of the year, the youngster brought his charges from their camp near Back River to Wager Inlet and dragged them into the R.C.M.P. post there after being without food for three days.

The pathetic saga is told by Constable J. W. MacKenzie, of the Chesterfield Inlet post. "Kadlak," father of the unnamed hero, died early in the winter of 1931 and soon after his wife, "Kadlik," became ill. The 12-year-old boy hitched up his family and often spent two or three days on the trail alone. Finally she was bad and, attacked with distemper, their dogs died off until only five remained. When the lad had all but given up hope, the boy spot his father and found the almost himself.

Corporal McCormack takes up the story:

"A few days later when he saw his mother getting no better, he put her and his little brother on the sled and started off for the nearest white man's distance of about 160 miles—himself pulling in the harness with the two dogs. They had no fuel to provide heat for the sick woman, and for a kid of his age to be able to build an igloo, work as he did and find his way back to the post through a mass of mountains and lakes such as Indians travel always presents, is a great compliment to the young native and a credit to his race when it comes to a hard pinch. They took a long time making that 160 miles for he was only a little man of the year."

"Kadlak" got well but, as she would not marry, became the drudge of the camp. Having taken a spouse who offered them space in the igloo, Kadlak and her boys ate what they left when the others had finished and to every way took a "back seat."

"Kadlak" did all the heavy work of the camp, frequently toiling until midnight and then arising first in order to make breakfast. After this she was required to bring fuel ahead of the dogs and carried her three-year-old on her back all day long.

On one trip, Corporal McCormack reported, the Eskimos had such a heavy trail from seven in the morning until midnight and the mother went ahead of the dogs all the day. "She showed a cheerful disposition," he says, "and was pleasant with me, too."

And through it all she was helped by her devoted young son who aided his mother in all her way.

BEAVER RESERVE CREATED IN QUE.

Steps Taken by Gov't. to Prevent the Extinction of Animals

(By The Canadian Press)

QUEBEC, March 30.—The beaver, that aquatic little busybody, whose name is linked with the maple leaf as Canada's national emblem, in danger of becoming extinct, but it is a question which has oft been repeated of late, and a recent proclamation by the provincial government would tend to show that fear is felt for the little furry beast's existence in this province, at least. For some years efforts have been made on the life of the beaver by nomadic hunters and trappers to make the animal list its rapid decline in numbers, particularly in the region of Mistassini and the James Bay district, has moved the provincial government to institute measures whereby the industrious little dam builder would be saved from complete extermination. According to an order-in-council issued by the provincial minister of colonization and fisheries a hunting season of 1,200 miles are will be created in the Mistassini and James Bay district where the hunting of beaver will be prohibited during a period of fifteen years to the except of trapping, enabling that particular section of country to rest while a living by that type of hunting. The restricted area is bounded on the west by James Bay, on the north by the Eastmain River on the south by the Rupert River and easterly by the 76th meridian of latitude. The colonization department has announced that a number of beaver be caught and taken from other districts to be used as a nucleus in the re-stocking of the reserve.

READING IN 16 LANGUAGES.

MONTREAL.—The McGill Memorial Library now supplies reading matter in sixteen languages to patients at the Royal Victoria Hospital here it was reported at the annual meeting of the Hospital Libraries Book Club recently. During the last year books in Swedish and Hungarian were added and as another feature the library was opened one night a week to doctors and nurses.

Advocate League Within Br. Empire

(By The Canadian Press)

QUEBEC.—Frank Duval, member of the legislative council of Quebec, left recently on a tour through Western Canada where his speaks before Canadian Rotary Clubs on his scheme for the establishment of a League of Nations within the British Empire. Before leaving Mr. Carrel cabled Right Hon. Stanley Baldwin, the British statesman, endorsing his stand taken in a speech that nationalistic sentiments must not be allowed to intervene at the forthcoming Imperial Conference at Ottawa.

Mr. Carrel's cable follows: "Supporters of out three year campaign through platform, press and air for the establishment of a non-partisan organization similar to the League of Nations, to emanate from the forthcoming economic conference at Ottawa as a first practical step in Empire consolidation, heartily in accord with you. Nationalistic tendencies must not intervene."

All Have Norman Blood Says Speaker

(By The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL.—The majority of Canadians, French and English-speaking, have Norman blood, Emile Vaillancourt told members of La Ligue de la Jeunesse Feminine at a recent luncheon meeting here. "This common ancestry should be the strongest link between the two principal races of Canada and serve to inspire an atmosphere of cordiality and sincere regard, he declared.

It was because of their Norman blood that the English have shown their ability to govern other races, he added. Referring to the present Governor-General of Canada as a descendant of one of the companions of William the Conqueror, Mr. Vaillancourt said, "We may consider him one of the most distinguished conquerors of Canada."

DECREASE IN EXPORT TRADE

United Kingdom Island's Best Customer Last Year

(By The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL.—Trade through St. Vincent bought roughly twenty per cent. of her imports from Canada last year, Canada purchased her eleven per cent. of her exports, according to a report on the 1931 trade of St. Vincent, one of the Windward Islands, issued here by Lester S. Glass, Trade Commissioner for the British West Indies (eastern group).

The total trade of St. Vincent which has a population of 47,861 decreased £56,455 in 1931 being £341,- 824 in 1930 and £398,279 last year, the report states. In 1930 the total value of the commodities imported into St. Vincent was £200,850, as against £177,492 in 1931. Of these, Canada shipped 21.7% in 1930, valued at £43,593, and in 1931, £34,- 345, a decrease in percentage of 19.3% and monetary value £9,411. The United Kingdom enjoyed the greatest portion of the trade, having 37.8% in 1930 and 36.1% the value of £72,803 and in 1931 £73,256 percentage values in the two years being 36.7% and 41.2%. United States moved from third to second place in 1931, shipping 11.2% in part good to the value of £34,850, as against £39,001 in 1930, or 19.6% and 19.6% of the total imports.

A decrease of £33,117 was suffered by St. Vincent exports last year, the report declares, the total value being £46,794 in 1930 dropping to £111,- 587 in 1931. Last year England purchased 45%, the United States 23.8%, and Canada 11% of St. Vincent exports. Canadian imports in 1930 were valued at £15,806, which decreased in 1931 to £11,234. England also registered a decrease of £17,494 from the total in 1931 of £61,736; United States, on the other hand, showing an increase of £2,783 to attain a total in 1931 of £20,072 or over double by Canadian imports.

LOW APPRAISEMENTS.

NEW YORK.—Appraisers appointed by courts to set the sale price on vessels seized as rum runners may have been making excessively low appraisements and thus permitting the former owners, many of whom are Canadians, to repossess the craft at bargain prices and return them to the liquor trade, according to announcement of the department of justice. The department's attention was called to the possibility when appraisements made by court appraisers fell from $10,000 to $50,000 short of customs officials' estimates.

PASSENGERS GIVEN THRILL.

HALIFAX.—Passengers on the ferry steamer Dartmouth were treated to a thrill recently when, owing to a mishap to one of the ship's paddle wheels a hole was pierced through sheathing separating the men's cabin. Water poured through the opening into the cabin where it swished along into the scuppers and overboard. The mishap occurred after the ship left her Halifax dock at 11.30 o'clock in the morning and did not result in any interruption in the service.

LARGE NUMBER SUICIDES.

MONTREAL, Que. — Verdicts of suicide have been rendered in Montreal Coroner's Court in no fewer than twenty-one cases during the first three months of the year, it was announced here today by Coroner Prince. This is vastly in excess of the usual number recorded. In addition, five verdicts of probable accident were given, these being cases in which doubt arises as to the intentions of the victim. In January there were eight suicides, in February seven and in March six.

It is better to laugh at a joke you don't understand than to weep over the efforts of tyour friend to explain it.

VETERAN SEALERS RETURN TO PORT

Catch is Small and Seal-ers Get Fast in Ice

(By The Canadian Press)

ST. JOHN'S Nfld. — Newfoundland's annual visit to the northern ice fields is over for another year. The sealers are back. First to arrive in port after more than a month among the floes was the Bellahlat, well known to Arctic waters through her voyages to the Canadian government outposts in the north. She slipped into St. John's harbor on April 12, with 5,000 seals, to slow their gear and follow.

But for heavy winds and thick fog with unusually heavy ice conditions, this year's fishery would have been a good one, insofar as the average take was concerned. But the elements conspired against the "swilers". Captain W. C. Winsor of the Bellahlat reported the worst storms for many years."

The fleet, small at the outset, was further depleted a week after sailing, when the Eagle and both the Nephtun and Ranger were caught in the ice and lost their propellers, necessitating towage back to St. John's. That left the Beothic, Eagle, Terra Nova and Imogene, all steamers well known in the annals of the sealfishery, to carry on.

The weather being what it was, the Beothic bore up for home on April 9, dropping the crew off at coastal villages in Bonavista and Conception Bays, until only a skeleton roster remained on her arrival here.

While this year's catch of the four vessels engaged was small in comparison with the ordinary year's take of 200,000 or so, the season was without any major disasters such as the loss of the Viking off Horse Island last March, when a score of men were killed in the explosion which wrecked the ship. The men's health generally was good.

Minor misfortunes, however, were plentiful and kept the catch low. Just after sailing the Beothic spent several days stuck in an ice-jam. On March 11 she was again imprisoned in the ice north of Cape St. John. Ice conditions were unprecedented. On March 17, while the disabled Ranger and Neptune awaited assistance sixty miles to the southward, the four sealers were forced to tuck themselves in close under the lee of icebergs and wait for calmer weather.

Next year, however, past hardships will be forgotten and more than enough to make all the Dominion's sealers will be jostling for places on the fore-deck. This year there is less than four weeks' hunting bew girls. had to be put ashore after the steamers had actually got under way, so great is the New-foundland's urge to sail north and kill seals.

STATE RIVER ANGLER FREE

Plans Extensive Development of Public Fishing Grounds

BOSTON — Massachusetts fishermen are digging bait and winding flies. In order to implement the extensive plans which have provided that hunting and fishing should be free to all the inhabitants of the Commonwealth, and at the same time to adjust an apparent conflict between property rights of land owners and fishing rights of sportsmen, the state has embarked on a new departure. When the fishing season opens April 15, the state of Walton, for the first time in history, will have a fully stocked lake along one of its best known rivers, the State River in the sole purpose of fishing.

The stream is the Westfield River, an unusual stretch of trout water. Strips of land extending ten feet back from the water along the east branch, and totalling more than 32 miles, are already under lease by the state, with the prospect of more than 50 miles eventually being leased into public fishing grounds, according to R. J. Kenney, director of the Commonwealth's fisheries and game division.

Two years ago a balance of funds in one of the division's branches enabled the commonwealth to lease the Westfield was selected and a few leases obtained. Stretches of land on both sides of the river and covering some of the most desirable trout pools in the stream have since obtained in the towns of Huntington, Westfield, Chesterfield, Worthington, Chester and Middlefield. It is eventually hoped to secure leases along the rivers three branches, at $20.00 a mile per year for the ten foot strips, and to purchase the strips at the end of a long term of years. The leases are considerable area of land for fishing will remain the private property, to be maintained for the sportsman's benefit.

All the leased stretches have been plainly marked by signs to avoid trespass on private property, and rights of way have been clearly indicated.

To insure that both the owners of the leased lands and adjoining property holders will be amply protected, special game-wardens have been assigned.

PUBLICITY IN BEHALF DEAF

Stage-stricken Fetterly Carries Campaign Forward Year

"Our superintendent, H. B. Fetterly, M.A., is very persistently and effectively carrying on his publicity work on behalf of the deaf children of the province," says the Canadian, in the official publication of the School for the Deaf. "On March 11th he addressed the Men's Club in Concord on the 11th he had the privilege and pleasure of addressing the students of the Peterborough Normal School, and on the 18th he was the guest-speaker at the luncheon-meeting of the Smith's Falls Rotary Club. Mr. Fetterly hopes to give an address at each of the Normal Schools of the Province, at which there are seven. As these students will be the teachers of the future, valuable publicity work will only follow if they are made acquainted with the work carried on by the School for the Deaf, and impressed with the importance of looking upon them to keep the superintendent informed relative to any children in the unsupported homes who are too deaf to be satisfactorily educated in the hearing schools.

"While in Toronto during Easter week, subscriber the session of the Ontario Educational Association, Mr. Fetterly gave a much appreciated address on the educational work carried on for the deaf in general and at this school in particular, to the Business and Professional Men's Club of Bloor St. West.

"Deaf Pupils Entertain.

"At the regular meeting of the Y's Men's Club of Belleville, held in the local Y.M.C.A. building on Monday evening, April 18th, the program was given over to entertainment, part of which was put on by pupils and members of the staff of the Ontario School for the Deaf. The occasion was one on which the Y's Men entertained the members of the club, which put on the play, "Merton of the Movies" in the Belleville Collegiate Institute during the past week. President M. S. Hanchard occupied the chair, and after a delightful banquet, three couples of deaf pupils danced the popular, modern jig to the music of records.

"Delightful Musical Evening.

"In Belleville there is a very popular and praiseworthy organization known as The Presto Club, which includes in its membership a number of the leading musical artists in the city. The president of the club is Mrs. Alex Worden, a member of the O.S.D. staff, and himself one of the most talented musicians in Belleville. This society meets every third week, each evening being devoted to the study and exemplification of the works of some noted composer. On Tuesday evening, April 12th, the club held its meeting in the O.S.D. assembly room as the guests of the Association of Teachers and Instructors, and gave a most delightful program of vocal and instrumental numbers, comprising a varied selection of musical gems every one of which was interpreted in a sympathetic and effective manner that greatly delighted the audience. At the close of the program a very pleasant hour was spent in social entertainment, after which light refreshments were served by members of the school staff, thus bringing to a happy conclusion one of the most enjoyable functions ever held here."

CAST OFF SLAG IS CONVERTED

Chemicals Used in Paper Making Obtained in This Way

(By The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL, Que., Oct. 3.—Under the watchful eye of efficiency experts and industrial chemists there is very little going to waste in Canadian industrial plants today. The latest trend of the canny chemical men is that they can take 40,000 tons of chemicals valuable to the paper industry from the cast off slag of the International Nickel Company smelters at Copper Cliff, Ont.

The ore sent to the Copper Cliff plant to be refined contains copper and nickel sulphides. The Orford process in use at the plant separates the two minerals and leaves a clinking slag rich in soda and alumina.

Sodium and aluminum sulphates, two substances much in use in the manufacture of paper, can be produced from the slag by the action of sulphuric acid. Chemists figure an appreciable to gather sulphuric acid from the acrid fumes given off by the smelters. The sulphuric acid is allowed to work on the slag—and the result provides sodium and aluminum sulphates. These products can be readily purified and there is even a percentage of copper and nickel values to be returned to the smelters.

Some 15,000 tons of sodium sulphate and 25,000 tons of aluminum sulphate can be produced annually from the cast off slag the chemists have estimated.

NEW MACHINE IS INVENTED

Potato Diggers Will Not Injure Vegetables is Claim

(By The Canadian Press)

OTTAWA, Ont.—The completion of a potato digging machine of his own invention has recently been announced by Joseph Moreau of Ville St. Pierre near Montreal. He claims that it has been approved by the federal and provincial authorities and pronounced to be the only machine in existence today that will dig potatoes without injuring the vegetable. It weighs 300 lbs., is made up of twenty odd moving parts and can be hauled by a team of horses or by a motor truck.

Mr. Moreau was born in St. Germain de Granthan, Drummond County, Quebec, where he farmed for several years. While still on the farm he invented the Moreau Barley cutting machine which has been in use for nearly 20 years. He has also a wood for over 18 years. At the same time he worked on his new invention which has taken him 31 years to complete. Mr. Moreau has encouraged Canadian workmen by having his potato digging machine built in a Quebec foundry and so far he claims it has cost him $8,000.

CRICKET SEASON OPENED APR. 23

Team From India To Tour England and Other Tours Mooted

(By The Canadian Press)

LONDON—Another of England's cricket children has now reached its majority—India. During the coming season a team composed of Hindus will tour England and play a series of games with the counties and minor clubs. Cricket in India has created a great deal of interest as it includes the game has reached the same high level in India that it has in Australia, South Africa, New Zealand and the West Indies, all of whom now send teams to England and receive visits from English sides at regular intervals. One of Kipling's cricket stories, "The Amateur Team — will also make a tour in which they will meet strong second-class elevens this summer.

The cricket season formally opened on April 23rd when All India met T. C. Rook XI at Feldham Rye. Most of the counties will begin action on the 24th and began their challenge for the championship, now held by Yorkshire.

The coming season will be more than ordinarily interesting as the team which will tour Australia next winter will be those of England. Jardine rather dismally in 1932 when the Australians made their last tour and reacquired the "Ashes", mythical emblem of the cricket championship of the world. Further England's efforts were made to look rather worse than they really were by the brilliance at the wicket of young Don Bradman and the bowling of Clarence Grimmett. New blood must be recruited in England if these two redoubtable players are not to dominate in test matches. The selection committee will not have an easy task though they still have much good material. Second players like Herbert Sutcliffe, Wally Hammond, Harold Larwood, E. R. Dexter, outstanding all-rounder and I. A. R. Peebles to build on. The choice of a captain will be a knotty point and for this position A. P. F. Chapman, who led England to victory in Australia in 1928-30, is still available.

While England is seeking for a winning test match team most of the Australian international players will be getting a lot of good practice from certain Canadian teams during their tour of the Dominion this summer.

50 YEAR FLAG GIVEN MUSEUM

Make Presentation at Chateau de Ramezay Montreal

(By The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL, Que.—The regiment, 50 years ago for the Societe des Artistes Canadien-Francais was formally presented to the Antiquarian and Numismatic Society of Montreal and placed in the Chateau de Ramezay. It is of cream silk, now browned with age, and carries by a cost of arms with the motto: Possidet Quem Nutrit Ilex. The full style of the society is worked above and below the crest.

In making the presentation Col. Sedard, president of the Societe des Artistes Canadien-Francais, told how the flag came into existence six years after the founding of the society in 1876. At an assembly of members called to discuss participation in St. Jean Baptiste parade to be held on June 24, 1882, it was felt that greater dignity would be added to the society if these taking part could march behind a flag. Articles of the constitution did not provide for such expenditures so the matter was left to public subscription. Of the $32.10 collected $25.00 went to the making of the flag, 30 cents covered the cost of two yards of white silk for the bearers and the remainder, $2.80, was used to supply a baldolier for the president. It was a proud moment for members that kept step behind the standard bearer of the society that June day.

SENT TO REFORMATORY

CAMPBELLFORD, May 2 — This is a serious offense and warrants a long term of imprisonment, said Magistrate Hayne, when he committed Earl Rodgers, 21-year-old farm hand, to eighteen months in Guelph Reformatory. Rodgers was arrested by Chief of Police Bromley, April 26, on a warrant charging him with breach of Section 304 of the Criminal Code, to which he pleaded guilty. The 16-year-old girl in connection with the case, whose parents stated was incorrigible, is now in the Training Institute for Industrial School for an indefinite term.

It has been found by the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection that there are 1,000,000 school children on the United States with weak or impaired hearing.

BUILDINGS MUST SUIT DISTRICT

Plan Movement to Safeguard Beauties of English Countryside

Manchester, England May —(By The Canadian Press)—A movement is under way to ensure that the beautiful Lake District shall not be spoiled by unsuitable buildings being erected in that part of England, the movement being sponsored by the Royal Institute of British Architects and the Society for the Preservation of Rural England, with the approval of the Ministry of Health.

Every authority of the Lake District recently received a copy of a pamphlet which announced the formation of architectural panels which offer voluntary help in the scrutiny of plans and designs submitted to local authorities for their approval. These panels were originated by the Royal Institute of British Architects and the Society for the Preservation of Rural England.

In introducing its appeal the Lake District Safeguarding Society remarks the district is most fortunate in the persistent use of local stone and local slates. The fells and lakes could not be spoiled, but the beauty of roads might easily be marred in the present day, when old styles of building seem expensive. Therefore it is necessary to encourage builders and owners as much as possible to put up buildings in harmony with their surroundings.

"New buildings," it says, "can be quite as attractive as old ones, thereby adding to the beauty of their surroundings, and in such districts as this it is felt that more consideration should be given to their appearance than is the case at present. Everyone will agree that local materials are the most appropriate and that the introduction of the characteristic features of our old buildings should be encouraged."

Popular Demand For Student Orchestra

OXFORD, N.S., May 3.—The old-time fiddles from nearby farms, lumbermills and lumber camps are facing keen competition. Members of the Grade Eight class of the Oxford school have caught their rustic art of the musical and there is much ado around town about "the orchestra". The orchestra proper, made up of Grade Eight pupils, consists of four pieces; mouth organ, Clara Leslie; two guitars, Alda Seaman and Florence Turple; ukelele, Mary McFarland. Occasionally students from Grade Seven and High School swell the harmony of the well conducted and well played numbers.

Their musical hobby is greatly encouraged by Miss Augusta Hunter, teacher of Grades seven and eight, who has arranged half-hour every Friday afternoon for their presentation of old melodies and new. The Women's Institute, play directors and entertainment committees of church functions and clubs call upon them for "the spice of the program."

SUMMER OPERAS DISPENSED WITH

Covent Garden's Decision Censured By London Music Editor

London—There is or to be no summer opera at Covent Garden this year and the announcement to this effect has been keen regret on the part of many musical Londoners. "On grounds of economy and in view of the need for not exporting capital, "the Covent Garden Opera Syndicate announces "it has been decided to dispense this year with the usual summer season of international opera, which would have involved the engaging of foreign artists, and the Syndicate will devote its resources to the production of opera in English in the autumn."

Sir Landon Ronald, Principal of the Guildhall School of Music; conductor of the New Symphony Orchestra (formerly the Royal Albert Hall Orchestra), writes at follows about the Covent Garden matter in the News-Chronicle, of which he is Music Editor:

"I think it most regrettable that we are to be without an international season of grand opera at Covent Garden this summer. Not since the war has such a thing occurred, and I cannot remember a time before the war when we were ever without a very brilliant and splendid season of grand opera.

"Of course, the syndicate know their own business best, and with the strong feeling that exists against importing artists from abroad, I can quite understand their having arrived at a decision which they probably regret as much as other music lovers in this country. If one dares suggest such a thing, it seems a pity that they did not endeavor to give a British opera season instead of an international one, notwithstanding their somewhat bitter experience of that of support last autumn.

"Of course, regarding the international opera season, I think one of the chief reasons that it is to be disbanded is that the syndicate have to be very careful how they spend the grant given to them by the Government. If a lot of money had been lost over the importation of foreign artists this way, it might have placed the syndicate in an extremely awkward position."

SOVIETS MENACE WORLD WORKERS

Duchess of Atholl Says Russian Products Will Lower Wage Scale

Duchess of Atholl Says Russian Products Will Lower Wage Scale

New York, N.Y., May 3—International action in refusing credits and restricting trade with Russia would reduce the peril of Soviet labor competition and improve living conditions for the masses in Russia itself, declares the Duchess of Atholl, in a report issued by the Columbia University Press. The Duchess analyzes the legislative measure by which the Five-Year Plan is being developed.

"The conscription of labor of a nation of 160 millions, inhabiting a country of unbound natural resources, and the direction of that labor by twentieth-century science and business capacity, operating twentieth century machinery, is a menace of an unprecedented nature to the standards of living of workers in every country to which the products of such labor are admitted," she asserts.

"More especially will this be realized when it is remembered that in addition to the wholesale utilization of forced labor, Soviet currency, as we have seen, is very seriously depreciated, that the Soviet Government is making use of confiscated buildings and plants for which no compensation has been paid, and that it has repudiated the debts of Tsarist Russia.

"It is obvious, therefore, that Soviet rulers can export at prices which bear no relation to true value, and under conditions wholly without precedent."

Besides waging a ceaseless war on religion, the Soviet Union has undermined marriage and is rapidly breaking up the family life, she says. Such glimpses as are permitted by strict government control of speech, press, and intercourse with foreign countries show that Russia, carrying through collection on a vast scale, is still as ruthless as in the early days, she observes.

The pressure and tempo are increasing, according to the report. Men, women and children are conscripted for the mines, mills, sawing, fishing and heavy industries. The number of prisoners, usually political, sent out to hard labor on a commercial basis and on insufficient rations in the timber camps is rapidly mounting.

Great Britain is urged to follow the example of the New York Chamber of Commerce and leaders of American trade unions, in an effort to insure complete prohibition of Soviet imports.

Replying to the argument that the conditions of life in Russia concern only the people of that country, and that it is unjust and not to be free they must win freedom for themselves, the Duchess calls attention to Article 23 of the Covenant of the League of Nations. This pact, she points out, binds members of the League to endeavor to secure and maintain fair and humane conditions of labor for men, women and children both in their own countries and in all countries to which their commercial and industrial relations extend.

"On the other hand, because the execution of the Five Year's Plan depends largely on foreign credits and foreign purchases, other countries hold the key of the position, not only for themselves but for the Russian people," she concludes.

NOTED CONDUCTOR SOON TO RETIRE

London—After 40 years of service with the Bournemouth Corporation and its orchestra, Sir Dan Godfrey, noted conductor, is nearing the superannuation age, as he will be 65 on June 20, 1932. Sir Dan, who is well known in the British Dominions, has conducted military bands and conducted orchestras on the Continent with distinction, and has written a book, "Memories and Music" (1924), besides many arrangements for military bands, also some dance music, marches and songs. "I cannot say whether the Bournemouth Corporation will decide to retain my services as Director of Music for a longer period," he said recently to a newspaper reporter with reference to his reaching the superannuation age in June next year "as it is the case with some officials of the Corporation."

The Yellowstone National Park is a tract more remarkable for its natural curiosities than any equal area on the Globe.

Miners Believe Dogs Are Thing of Past For Travelling

MODERN METHODS

Planes Take Them in Quicker and Without Discomfort

(By The Canadian Press)

EDMONTON, Alta. — Drontes or a dozen or more propellers flashing across the evening horizon in spring daylight sounds the prologue for developments on the shores of Great Bear Lake. And back in the cities and towns and villages scores of hoary veterans of the Trail of '98 are wearing out their pants.

It is not because the Yukon veterans are pessimistic. It is because they recall the mushing with dog teams in 50 and 60 below zero weather as compared with the modern prospectors who in summer or in winter, spring or autumn, step into cabin 'planes and look down from four or five thousand feet on the rugged ground below; then land in a train to the end of steel and a warm cabin awaits them for the need of prospecting carry the wealth hunters in a few hours over the same distance that took toll of hundreds of lives and hundred hundreds of others in the search for the yellow metal of the northland.

Gold is only the fancy fancy of the prospectors heading for the Great Bear Lake area, for beside, but the path is not so rosy as the Yukon veterans believe. The modern prospector has his troubles and the 'plane pilots face some dangers the Yukon never knew or heard about. Radium-bearing pitchblende is the lure of the latest rush, pay with silver, copper and chances of gold. Up to this last autumn 500 claims had been staked along the eastern shores of the lake, and the prospectors who staked their lives during the winter months and those who challenged rigors of early spring have filed another 300 claims this year to date. They are not finding fault in staking their claims, and today they are on route back to dig what wealth of the earth they can find.

Points of concentration during the coming short summer season under an Arctic sun—June, July and August, with parts of late May and most of September thrown in — will be Fort Norman, Echo Bay, Labine Point, Conjurer Bay, Hunter Bay and unnamed territory along the whole eastern shore of the lake. Within the boundaries of Alberta, Fort Vermilion and the territory around McMurray and Waterways prospecting is likely but it will be without the glamor of the more northerly section within the shadow of the Arctic circle.

Discovery of the radium-laden pitchblende, silver and copper ores running between $18 and $30 to the ton have been found, but the gold staking is in stages even less developed than the pitchblende, silver and copper.

Fort Norman is chiefly noted for oil discoveries made by early prospectors in 1851, when crude oil was discovered at a depth between 900 and 1,000 feet. The field has lain undeveloped since, but this spring crews were sent into the territory by the Imperial Oil Company and the prospects for the wells supplying prospectors with fuel oil this summer run high. Fort Norman also boasts deposits of lignite, but developments in lignite mining are not anticipated for some time because of the high costs of transportation facilities, which warrant the removal of only the riches of ores because of the high costs of bringing out pay loads.

Copper and what else could be found lured Gilbert Labine to Great Bear Lake in May, 1930, and there he found Cobalt bloom on rock outcrops on the extreme northwesterly point of the bounding Echo Bay. At Hunter Bay, 30 miles north of Echo Bay, men under Labine Point mine's direction located copper deposits a year earlier. Both explorations underwent the rigors of the north, and McAlpine and his party fought storms of great severity before they made their way back to civilization.

Along with the Cobalt bloom, Labine discovered an extensive vein system of highly mineralized material carrying cobalt, bismuth, copper lead, manganese, silver, and, most intriguing of all, a dark, pitchy looking heavy mineral—pitchblende.

The rumor broke through from the Arctic. The report proved true. But it was a long time before public attention was generally directed to the Arctic's fringe. Twelve months after Labine found the pitchblende the race was on for the radium.

Besides Gilbert Labine and his Mining Company, numerous other early associates of the Eldorado mining companies have sent prospectors into the field—Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company, Dominion Explorers, Ventures and numerous others are still joining the trail. Some have gone far beyond Great Bear Lake, among them the planes of Consolidated Smelting which have nosed into the north to make surveys deep in the Arctic Circle.

UNSETTLED SUIT OF 1914 REVIVED

Argument on this phase of the case was heard and the action taken under advisement.

Swedish Nobles Yet Keep Old Tradition

(By The Canadian Press)

STOCKHOLM — The Swedish House of Nobles, the ancient national body of Swedish noblemen, recently held their solemn assembly in the "House of Knights," known as the finest specimen of old Stockholm architecture. The heads of the noble families gathered in the beautiful memorial hall, the walls of which are covered with the coats of arms of the noble families, and opened their meeting by paying reverence to the oldest and most aristocratic of Sweden's families, the Brahes, recently extinct by the death of the last Count Brahe, which has played such a prominent part in the history of Sweden.

Before the reforms of 1866, the House of Nobles under Magnus Gabriel Brahe of Lords. It is quite a wealthy institution, for its total assets now amount to more than 13,000,000 kronor ($5,277,720).

The House also has so fewer than 210 benevolent funds with a combined capital of about 1.5 million kronor ($356,100), enabling the directors of the House to pay out annual subventions and scholarships to children in need of financial report for their education as well as pensions to widows and orphans.

MEASURING GRAIN IN BINS.

OTTAWA—This is the time of the year when it becomes important to the farmer to know fairly accurately the quantities of grain he has available for seed or other use. A rule of thumb for determining the quantity of grain in a bin, which proves very reliable, is supplied by the Division of Field Husbandry of the Dominion Experimental Farms. To estimate the amount of grain in a bin multiply the length by the width, by the height of grain in the bin to determine the capacity in cubic feet and then divide this sum by 1 , which will give the contents in bushels. Care must be taken to see that the grain is levelled off to ensure accurate measurement.

YOUTH OF TODAY GROWING UP IN BAFFLING WORLD

Can't Find Jobs Let Alone Think of Supporting Family

STRESSES POINT

Miss Jennie Lee, Member of British House, Makes Statements

(By The Canadian Press)

SAINT JOHN—"The older generation must remember their terrific responsibility in moulding the minds and directing the energies of the youngee generations," a combined meeting of local service clubs was told by Miss Jennie Lee, a former member of the British House of Commons, at the conclusion of her United States and Canadian tour. "The old wars, and political systems have outlived their usefulness. What shall I tell the younger generation travel?" asked the youthful speaker.

"In relatively prosperous times," she said, "young men and women have a terrific chance of getting along in the world. They do not take a very great interest in public or economic affairs. These days, however, with so little work offering and little money available for sports or hobbies — and young men unable even to think of supporting a wife and family — they are forced even against their inclinations to look for some explanation and seek some way out of the dilemma they find themselves in.

"The older generation is controlling the political and industrial machine of the world and is itself basing its seeking an explanation that will placate the electorate in the respective countries who want to know why unemployment is so abundant.

Political Phrases Slashed

"One may go from country to country but all over the world political practice is pretty similar," Miss Lee continued. "If the leaders can prove their domestic troubles originate in a foreign source they get soft, and cannot be held responsible. So they create a fine bogie outside their territory and by so doing dull the minds and passions of youth into the same direction of seeking an explanation of personal and national difficulties. Young Germany, following the lead of their elders, blames reparations and war debts; Young India, also following their elders, blames predatory imperialism; the creditor nations, namely the British Empire, America and France, taught until recently that if Germany and Austria paid their debts all would go well."

This attitude was simply leading the world deeper into its present chaos, the speaker affirmed.

Unemployment was no respecter of persons or class, the Scottish Laborite speaker continued. The boy leaving school at 14 to become a "butcher, baker or candlestick maker" was confronted with grave difficulties of securing employment; but not more so than the highly qualified university or technical school graduate. The common problem facing millions of young people the world over is how to get out of the baffling and absurd situation the world is now in.

The speaker remarked on the "silly talk of the daring and originality of youth." This might be true of physical things, such as flying the Atlantic and in sports, she said, but in the world of ideas the young people were timid and fettered and dislikes being conspicuous among those around him.

She pictured a world casting the fault of their ills at the doors of others, raising tariffs, and all the while cutting wages and preaching economy, "which is contracting the wage markets and lessening the standards of living, which is all leading possibly to war."

"The youth of individual nations will go out and fight for their homes, and prosperity and all that; but there is no solution for their distress. The real need is for national control of industry and resources. The old systems have outlived their usefulness and a new is clamoring to be born," she said.

"With the younger generation follow the lead of their elders in intensifying competition and harboring hatred in their hearts for others, or will they turn back in time and take a new road out," the speaker asked. "No one can tell. The question is written on the wall. The older generation must remember their terrific responsibility in moulding the minds of the younger generation and directing them along sane lines."

Couple's Gain is Hotelman's Loss

(By The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL—Hotel keepers usually approve of weddings but things are reversed recently when a local hotel manager found that he had lost out financially as a result of one couple gaining bliss.

Some time ago he received two reservations from Australia from a lady and a gentleman who were going on a conducted world tour. They apparently had not met at that time but Dan Cupid must have worked overtime for in the six weeks interval between their departure from home and arrival in Montreal they had given up their single blessedness and become one. The original reservations for two single rooms were cancelled and a new one made for one double room—poor business for the hotel.

Scientists at the California Institute of Technology have discovered a process of electroplating objects with an even coating of platinum.

Treated with chemicals, cotton can be made fire-resisting and moisture-proof.

JOBLESS BECOME ARTIST'S MODELS

Thus He Does His Bit To Help The Unemployed

(By The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL, Que.—A local artist has hit upon a curious, a novel, and at the same time quite effective way of helping the unemployed. He is the sort of fellow who interests himself in rendering character and expression in oils and in charcoal. Wandering in the down town area among the unemployed he sees often enough faces of men that are pinched and haggard, men who are destitute and tired—a world of suffering portrayed in their features.

He stops them on the street, invites them to come with him and to pose for him. Few are only too glad to accept. In his warm studio they find comfort and rest, and by sitting quietly an hour or so, while the artist works, they earn more than enough to buy themselves a meal.

The artists collection constitutes not only a group of studies of considerable interest, but definite documents in their living reproduction of these faces of men who are feeling more than most people the full effect of the present depression.

FINEST OPERA HOUSE DOOMED

Heavy Slump in Receipts Gives Partisans a Great Jolt

PARIS, France, May 3—(By the Canadian Press)—Is the Paris Opera House doomed to dance, doomed to fall? Many said that the question is a serious one, for the Parisians and one additional tourist very largely, POpera being one of the big attractions for foreigners. The sensational announcement that the closing of the theatre was imminent came after the resignation recently of M. Jacques Rouche, permier magnate of pre-war days, who for the past 16 years has directed the French National Academy of Music (the Opera's official title.) He stated in a letter to the Minister of Fine Art, M. Mario Roustan, that for some time there had been a monthly loss of $8,000.

"The artists of the French Opera," M. Jacques Rouche said in his letter "are the world's worst paid. Since 1875 (the year the Opera was opened) no improvements whatever have been made. The Opera has no lift, no heating, no drinking water, no proper toilet room, no warehouse for scenery. Moreover, no hall for rehearsal. About $480,-000 is urgently needed to carry out indispensable renovations in the machinery and the redecoration of the stage and auditorium. The scenery is 30 years old.

"As regards the Opera, which is the principal French State theatre, receives a yearly grant of $200,000 from the State and $84,000 from the City of Paris. The State grant would have to be increased by $220,-000 and the arrangement whereby the City of Paris received $48,000 yearly in entertainment and other taxes from the Opera would have to be modified."

The news has given France a severe jolt. It is declared that the future of French music is jeopardized and that the closing of the Opera would deal a heavy blow to an already sorely-stricken tourist traffic. Appeals are made to the Government to step in and prevent this calamity. The Ministry of Fine Arts states that an appeal will be made to Parliament to grant an immediate subsidy.

Probably no building in the world is better known than the Opera House in Paris. It stands magnificently in the centre of the city, where main streams of traffic converge, and dominates the wide open place, which adds to its dignity and impressiveness. Its famous foyer—which has ceiling representing the union of Melody, and Harmony, Poetry and Glory—is 154 ft. long and on a gala night presents a scene of brilliant magnificence in the

The Opera House, durine the siege of Paris, became a great military store, and a semaphore was set up on the roof for communications with the different sections of the defence. During the Reign of the Commune which followed, much damage was done to the unfinished structure, and large sums had to be spent in repairs. In the Great War the famous building was used as a coal depot, from which the population was supplied.

PRINCE ADVISES HOTEL MANAGERS

Advertising is Life of Trade, Says Prince of Wales

LONDON, May 3.—(By the Canadian Press)—The Prince of Wales gave some advice to hotel proprietors when he spoke at the annual dinner of the London Cornish Association of which he is Vice-Patron.

"We have never really understood the hotel industry as it is understood abroad," he said. "There is no reason why we should not, and if this Association does have a model hotel in some Cornish resort which does not pretend to get along, let them get an expert from abroad to train the personnel of the hotel. We need not be ashamed to do that. They have done that to us, and why should we not do it? I am certain it would make a great deal of difference to the tourist trade in Cornwall."

Speaking of lessons that could be learned from abroad, the Prince said there was one very good example of how one could borrow help from abroad. "I am thinking of the moving picture industry in this country," he said. "They have had the help of American people who understand the job, and I believe there is a very great future in store for the film industry in this country. There is also the important point of advertisement. Command does not advertise, but we must all advertise, and I have said that quite often."

APPEALS FOR AID

LONDON, May 3 — (By the Canadian Press)—Lord Lloyd, appealing for $135,000 to wipe off the building debt and current deficit on Sadler's Wells Theatre, recently said "that without it we should have no permanent home for Shakespeare except the ephemeral one at Stratford. The movement started by the only school, as such, for British acting, music, and ballet. If this were suddenly struck out it would be a calamity. Miss Lilian Baylis, manager, says "If anyone can make a penny go as far as shilling, I can. I am terribly careful."

Rudder of Liner Taken on Lorry

London, Eng., May 3 (CP) —One of the quearest travellers that has ever taken the road from Southampton to Darlington was the 55 ton rudder of the Empress. This last of the mighty liner had to go North for repairs. It was the only and unwieldy for British railway system, so "Kathleen Mavourneen," the world's largest lorry, took the 55 tons of rudder upon her 10 wheels and made a gallant progress from the great Hampshire port to the grimy iron district of the North.

Police and road scouts were busy the whole 300 miles of road warning motorists what they must expect if they should meet the mighty traveller on narrow stretches. The great lorry was greeted with cheers in many a village as she passed through doing a stold eight miles an hour. The only check on the journey was encountered just outside the village of Wendbridge on the Great North Road, where there was a breakdown through engine trouble, and something like 12 hours was lost. The journey altogether occupied six days and 16 hours, and the lorry consumed nearly 300 gallons of gasoline.

Tiny Relic of Secret Society Unearthed

London, Eng., May 3 (CP)— A tiny relic of a secret society which existed in the years just after Christ was born has been unearthed in the excavation of the Roman city of Verulamium, near St. Albans. It is a small silver token of a society which was devoted to the worship of the God Mithras, which flourished in the Second Century when Verulamium was a Christian city.

The token has been brought to light by Dr. Mortimer Wheeler, who for several years past has been directing the excavation of the old Roman city, the site of which is a mile or more from the present city of St. Albans. Some remarkable discoveries have been made in the course of these excavations. These lailed pavements, for instance, have been recovered practically intact. The tower of St. Alban's Cathedral as seen at the present day consists largely of Roman bricks taken from the ancient city by the earliest Christian builders.

MEDIEVALISM IS REVEALED

Kingston's Towers Are Pre-eminently Medieval

Kingston—"Kingston is pre-eminently and above all things medieval," said Prof. A. R. Prince of the Department of History at Queen's University in an address to the Rotary Club this week. The city, he said, was medieval in the sense that practically all the institutions which gave Kingston its character had either developed or undergone some radical change during the Middle Ages.

He spoke of each of the institutions on the Kingston skyline, and told how each had its background in the 13th and 14th centuries. Kingston General Hospital had been the seat of the first parliament of United Canada.

Military institutions had not begun in the Middle Ages, Prof. Prince continued, but had develop ed during that time as they have since. The military and the bright uniform of the cadets of the Royal Military College is a throwback, he thought that it was in the Middle Ages soldiers were first dressed in uniforms and paid a wage for their services. The barracks of the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery could be traced back into medieval times when the use of artillery was just beginning.

The University brought up the fact these institutions of higher learning began in medieval times: the courthouse recalled the point that English common law came into being in the 13th and 14th centuries. The cathedrals and residence of the bishops in Kingston reminded one of the power and influence of the church in the Middle Ages, Prof. Prince concluded.

ALL INCREASED

Vancouver—Flour, grain, canned salmon, lead, logs, lumber and newsprint comprising the basic industries of the West, all increased in export volume through the port of Vancouver during the first three months of the current year, F. C. Brown, chairman, said in presenting his annual report to the British Columbia division on the Canadian Manufacturers' Association last night.

HORSE NOW 21 YEARS OLD

Carried Major-Gen. J. E. B. Seeley, Commander of Canadian Cavalry

London, May 3 (CP) —Warrior, the horse tarried Major-General J. E. B. Seeley, former commander of the Canadian Cavalry Brigade, all through the Great War, will celebrate his 21st birthday with a party on April 21. His two companions in the Seeley stables will be invited, while Major-General Seeley and his family will drink to the health of the charger.

Warrior went into the war as a three-year-old, was never off the Western Front (for the duration) and was never seriously hurt. "Even when a shell burst within a few feet of him" says General Seeley, "I have seen him stand without a tremor, just turn his head and look at the smoke.

"He took to accompanying me on my visits to the Front Line without saddle or bride when I was riding one of my other horses. During March 1918 I found myself on Warrior directing rear-guard actions. I stabled him in the drawing-room on a little French villa with a parquet floor, and remember very well giving him his corn on a little ormolu table.

"There was a year or two over on heads and a shell hit the villa right in the middle. I said, 'I am afraid poor old Warrior is done at last,' and ran forward to the smoking pile. But I heard a whinny, and finding the head end of the bricks was Warrior, crouching down with a hole just resting on the middle of his back."

Carlton Club in Existence 100 Yrs.

London, May 3 (CP) — In a sedate fashion befitting its dignity the Carlton Club has just celebrated its centenary exactly 100 years ago leading lights of the Tory party met at the Thatched House tavern under the chairmanship of the Marquis of Salisbury, and resolved upon the formation of the club. Amongst the first committee then was the Earl of Clanwilliam, grandfather of the present Chairman. The Great Duke of Wellington and Sir Robert Peel were among the Trustees. Considering his aftercareer it is curious to find that Gladstone was an early member, and remained on the roll for 16 years.

For many years the Conservative party was practically ruled from the Carlton Club. Politically and socially it was one of the most exclusive institutions, the membership being confined to members of Parliament and sons of Peers. Its pre-eminent influence in the Conservative party began to fade when the Central Conservative office was instituted at the instigation of Disraeli but the historic meeting of 1922 which broke up the coalition was held at the club.

Russia imported more than 2,700 tons of matches last year.

'MAD HATTER' MAD? MILLIKAN IS DOUBTFUL

Science Upholds His Idea of Time as Changeable, Not Fixed

CONCEPT'S GROWTH

Recent Discoveries of Einstein Have Broken Down Old Laws

Development of the concept of time throughout the ages, from the Egyptians, through Galileo and Newton, down to Einstein, Planck and Heisenberg, has produced revolutions in scientific thought and the development of new concepts of reality, it was declared by Dr. Robert A. Millikan, who delivered the first annual James Arthur lecture on "Time and Its Mysteries," in the Gould Memorial Library, New York University.

As a result of the new concept of time, developed through the theory of relativity and the quantum theory, Dr. Millikan said quoting from F. A. Lindemann, Oxford physicist, "the harsh sequence of cause and effect has lost its power, the implacable rule of determination its rigor. The narrow cruel in which our predecessors fashioned our mental processes has been breached, and we are entitled henceforward, if we will, to order of our physical concepts, to question the grim pre-eminence accorded by age-long consent to time."

Dr. Millikan took as his text the dialogue on time between the Mad Hatter and Alice in "Alice in Wonderland."

The Mad Hatter said to Alice, Dr. Millikan quoted: "If you know Time as well as I do you wouldn't talk about wasting it. It's him." " " I dare say you never even spoke to Time."

"Perhaps not," Alice replied, "but I know I have to beat Time when I learn music."

"Ah! That accounts for it," said the Hatter. "He won't stand beating. Now if you only kept on good terms with him, he'd do almost anything you liked with the clock. For instance, suppose it were 9 o'clock in the morning, just time to whisper a hint to Time and round goes the clock in a twinkling! Half-past 1, time for dinner!"

"That would be grand, certainly," said Alice thoughtfully, "but then I shouldn't be hungry for it, you know."

"Not at first perhaps," said the Hatter, "but you could keep it to half-past one as long as you liked."

"How Mad Was He?"

"The question I am raising," said Dr. Millikan, "is how mad was the Hatter when he gave up Time as changeable, undependable, capricious qualities which we ascribe to personality? Who is the nearer right—the Mad Hatter or the common-sense citizen? Modern science does not regard the Hatter as being so mad after all."

After tracing how the Egyptians, Greeks and Romans devised means for measuring time Dr. Millikan continued:

"The clock, the barometer, the thermometer, the telescope, the microscope—all these first came into use in the 16th and 17th centuries, A.D. Why? Because a new conception that made practically every physical constant dependent upon a time measurement with a clock or its equivalent.

"Out of this came a whole new world concept or better, two new world concepts: namely, first, the concept of the uniformity of nature or the concept of the continuity of nature, or more specifically the concept of the necessary continuity of motion and of change of motion.

"The first concept, that of the uniformity of nature transformed the world from one which is at bottom unlimited and capricious, as were in fact both the ancient world and the medieval one, into a world which is dependable, and, in part at least, knowable and controllable—by man—supposing always he can look."

The second concept that of the continuity of nature, resulted in a concept of reality in which constant forces like gravitation, produced a constant and continuous rate of change in velocity. Newton and Liebnits invented the calculus, by which time was completely independent of anything that happens to the observer as far as the three dimensions of space were concerned.

Up to 1887 no facts were observed to contradict that concept of time. Dr. Millikan continued. Then came the famous Michelson-Morley experiment which somehow did not fit the concept of the independence of time from space. Einstein in 1905, using the Michelson-Morley result as the jumping off point, linked space and time together as a composite space-time concept denying their existence as absolute realities.

It was the twentieth century development of the facts and the theory of the quanta, Dr. Millikan said, that "has given time the world beating." The experimental discoveries of this century," he continued, "have practically forced us to describe the physical world in terms of particles . . . particles as parts of electrical charges which we call positive and negative electrons, particles or units of mass which we call protons and electrons, particles or units of radiant energy which we call photons, and particles or units of action (or momentum) which we call Planck's 'h' units." While the mechanical laws of Newton and Galileo worked well when applied to the infinitesimally small particles or units of the physical world.

"The final result to date of all these studies of microscopic phenomena is summed up in the Heisenberg Principle of Uncertainty which says that it is impossible to increase the accuracy of measurement of the velocity of a particle without by this very observational act introducing an uncertainty into the determination of the position of the particle.

"Perhaps the Mad Hatter had a reason for calling time Him."

YOUNG PREFER FICTION BOOK

Fairy Story Popular With Twelve Year Old Child

Fiction and biography form the most popular reading for boys and girls in the seventh, eighth and ninth grades, according to a study completed at the University of Chicago. Girls in those grades do 11 per cent more reading than boys. The Chicago Daily News reports.

The study was based on reports of their voluntary reading during the school year by 469 children in the Roosevelt Junior High School at Rockford, Ill. and was made by Vira E. Clark as a master's thesis in the university's school of education.

Of the 2,816 books read by the children during the school year, 47.8 per cent were fiction, 31.2 per cent biography, 10.8 per cent general science, 4.03 per cent social science, 6.45 per cent poetry, 2.3 per cent fairy stories and 2.1 per cent travel.

Fairy tales have their greatest popularity with children 12 years of age; biography is most popular with those of 13 and 14, and fiction with those of 15 and 16, Miss Clark found.

"Boys seem to enjoy their reading more than do girls," the report states. "Their likes and dislikes are more pronounced and their individuality of choice is greater. Girls read many books which are popular with boys, but there is a long list of books which are very popular with girls which boys do not read at all. Girls seem more prone to like 'easy' books."

Witches in England Still Make Trouble

London, Eng., May 3 (CP)—Witches in England continue to make trouble, or at least there are many people in this country who believe they do. The belief in magic and witchcraft is widespread in many parts of the British Isles even in these days according to William H. Paynter, of Callington, Cornwall, an authority on witchcraft, and upon whom the Cornish Gorsedd or College of Bards, has conferred the Bardic name of "Whyler Pentry," Searcher-out of Witchcraft.

In an interview with the Newspaper Chronicle, Mr. Paynter said there are still in this country many who believe in the existence of persons gifted with the power of "witching," "overlooking" and the "evil eye." By almost every week he receives letters, alleging that the writers are victims of witchcraft and imploring his aid for the reversal of the spells, etc.

A 30-page letter from a Kentish woman sought his guidance in the dispersal of an evil spell cast upon her family which had led to loss of much property as well as other misfortune. A Cornishwoman, afflicted bodily for seven years, declared that she had been "bewitched" and desired information as to how the evil influence could be removed.

One of the hottest spots in the world is in Azizia, Tripoli, where the temperture reaches 136 degrees.

Postmaster Serves Cove For 69 Years

PEGGYS COVE, N.S., May 3.—Wesley Crooks, 81, received congratulations from Postmaster General Murve and Hon. W. A. Black following the anniversary of his appointment as postmaster sixty-nine years ago. At the time of his appointment, there was only a weekly mail service to the "cove," and Mr. Crooks received $10 per year. Mail delivery became more frequent as his salary gradually increased and today he receives $100 per year for handling a daily service.

Mrs. Crooks, who is her husband's senior by one year, is still vigorous, doing her own housework and helping in the duties of assorting and delivering the mail every day. Both Mr. and Mrs. Crooks enjoy good eyesight and are as much interested in the daily paper as they were thirty years ago.

BRITISH FLAG TO COME BACK TO SAULT, ONT.

Governor Roosevelt Directs Return of Souvenir of War.

TAKEN IN 1812

U. S. Troops Took Flag at Time and Since Had in Possession

(By The Canadian Press)

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont.—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, has directed the return of the British flag taken from Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, by American troops in July, 1814, when the town was captured and burned by them. Major General Wetzel, of the State Museum at Albany, however, has not yet seen fit to lower the flag, which according to the Soo's information was "in a glass case" in the state museum at Albany" as is its present home. Mr. Roosevelt's action is in response to a request from the Soo.

The flag was taken from a building at the corner of Queen and Private streets, part of which is yet standing. It was stated about 1790 by G. G. Armstrong, the Soo's first trader, and was used by him as a trading post and for a warehouse. It was never used for military purposes.

It is interesting to recall that it was the burning of the Soo, which caused the British to invade the state from later in the year. At that time, the Soo was one of the most important points on the Great Lakes. The year before York, (now Toronto) had been burned by American troops and in retaliation British troops had burned Washington. The Soo's turn came in July, 1814, and Washington's later the following month.

The boiling of the old flag is scheduled as the big event of the Soo's "Wolf Week" with a full pack of timber wolves, which are left in the last week of July. If it can be recovered, Governor Roosevelt will be asked to come over and redeem it, in appreciation of his courtesy, or if he finds that impossible to designate some one to act for him. The chief feature of "Wolf Week" will be the presentation on the river bank of a stage version of Longfellow's Hiawatha by the Ojibway Indians, who inspired it, in the town immediately opposite the Canadian Sault. The poem is a glorification of the Sault as well as Lake Superior. Another northern Canadian feature will be a Hudson's Bay Company barbecue with an Indian program.

Blindness Conquered By Late L. W. Mulloy

Written for The Canadian Press
By G. H. Williamson

KINGSTON, Ont. — It is more than thirty years since Lorne William Mulloy, who died suddenly at Prospect, Ont., recently, fought as a Canadian trooper against the Boers in South Africa. He was then in the flush of the result of a Boer bullet hitting him across the bridge of his nose. In the twenty years after he had taken university courses at Queen's, Kingston, and Oxford; occupied the post of professor of military history in the Royal Military College of Canada, helped organize the Canadian Officers Training Entente, and finally studied law and became a practising Ontario barrister.

Mulloy of humor and Irish stock. The loss of his eyesight did not hold him back. Years ago he told the writer he just decided to go ahead and adjust himself to new conditions. He did this so well that he became an active national figure. He was sturdy and strong and natural in all his movements. "I saw (as and as) Mulloy," he would say. He was outspoken and constructive in his conversation, too.

L. W. Mulloy might have had a seat in the Irish House of Commons twenty years ago, for his Orford course brought him in touch with leaders like the late Lord Birkenhead, and he appeared on the hustings during a general election as a speaker on tariff reform for the Unionist party; but he decided to settle in his native land. In 1913 he became professor of military history in the Royal Military College of Canada. His war recruiting and Home Entente work were outstanding. Finally he took to law, and was articled to John Godfrey, K.C., the eminent Toronto barrister, with whom he had worked in the Quebec-Ontario Bonne Entente movement. He read his law course and became a full-fledged barrister in 1918. He was engaged in a murder case at the outset of his legal career, with Mr. Godfrey as chief counsel. But his finest work was in helping unfortunates, whom he steered out of grave legal difficulties without receiving a fee.

One of Mulloy's close friends in his earlier days was Frank McGee of Ottawa, one of the greatest hockey players Canada has produced, and a member of the famous McGee family of the capital. They were pals in the South African War and the writer recalls the two bidding each other goodbye on Kingston's McGee left for the 21st Battalion, O.K.F., for England to serve in the Great War first. They never met again, as McGee was killed in France. In memory of his comrade, Mulloy—although a Methodist—had a High Mass sung in St. Mary's Cathedral, Kingston, for the repose of his soul and personally attended.

Thirty thousand nine hundred and twelve aviation suits were filed in Havana in the first six months of 1931.

Analogies of Present Depression in '93 Break

By ALEXANDER D. NOYES
In New York Times

All periods of severe financial depression present a series of successive phases, differing in outward semblance from one another yet perfectly logical in their sequence. The characteristic circumstance in the aftermath of 1893 was the desperate struggle of the Treasury to maintain its credit, pay its bills and prevent default on the national currency. In the two or three years after, both 1893 and 1873 it was the virtual insurrection of labor. Neither complication has been witnessed in the present episode of economic reaction, but it has had its own complicating circumstances. Of these the European difficulties, with the resultant entanglement of international finance and commerce, are beyond question the most impressive.

There are no doubt primarily the legacy of the most costly, wasteful and destructive war in history, involving both an accumulation of indebtedness quite without precedent and an equally excessive derangement of costs and prices, the inevitable post-war readjustment, from which was painful and in certain quarters disastrous. What the character of the depression period would have been in this respect and in many others if, as was widely expected five years ago, the world's post-war expansion had been abruptly terminated in 1927, is a matter of conjecture. The shock would at least have come when American capital was still supplying Europe's needs and not, as it did in 1929, after two years in which the creditor nation of the world had already, because of its own rash speculation, been pulling out the props from the debtor States. There would have been a chance for gradual and orderly readjustment of staple prices, instead of the precipitous decline that followed the undermining of Europe's position and the excessively violent shrinkage in American purchasing power after 1929.

But these things have happened as they have happened, and the phase of depression like which the community has now entered is the chapter of sloth discouragement, of obstinate hopelessness that comes no longer future, which is familiar at about this time in all great economic reactions. On every such past occasion, Congressmen with extravagant proposals and flat-money nostrums have occupied the centre of the legislative stage and the first page of the newspapers, but have eventually got nowhere because the conservative and silent legislators had the votes. The pending measure which is to set everything right by printing two thousand millions of paper money and giving it away to scattered individuals would have been considered the product of bedlam a very few years ago. But it is like in line with the facts discussed sure-cures proposed for our troubles in 1893 and 1873, and undoubtedly most the same fate as they did.

But this does not show what is to be the real way out of our present difficulties. In the present mood, a good part of the community might seem to have reached the conclusion that there is no way out. That state of mind also is an entirely familiar incident, at the corresponding stage of every great depression. At each recurrence in the past of this cheerful view of things, it was admitted that a similar state of mind had been reached in other dimly-remembered setbacks and that recovery had come in spite of it. But existing conditions were always different, and this time there could be no recovery.

How did the country emerge from the hard times of the nineties and the seventies, when exactly the same phenomena prevailed of accumulated debt, diminished income, falling prices and, as a New York financial weekly described the situation at the beginning of 1878, with "rigid economy of consumers, minimum profits to manufacturers, merchants and transportation companies," while "capital could not be obtained for any new enterprises and railroad loans were scarcely attempted"?

The answer is that there was certainly a way out, because prosperity returned, and the way out was as certainly not through printing greenbacks. A few years afterward it was quietly explained that debt had been liquidated, that economy had permitted rebuilding of capital, that necessarily had stimulated development of low-cost processes, and that, quite beyond all the other considerations, the readjustment of country's real resources had returned, with reasoned belief in the country's future.

Three Factors All Determine Diet

(By The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL — Magazine and newspaper advertisements which have the effect of making food products are indispensable to the human diet, came in for brief criticism from Dr. I. M. Rabinowitch, assistant professor of medicine at McGill University and director of the department of metabolism at the General Hospital, in an address to members of the Canadian Club recently. Three factors alone determined the diet of man and these, he said, were the food available, his ability to secure that food and the food's taste, digestability and richness of nutrition.

According to orange growers, he said, half the world had soldiers and the other half were about to have it and for these they urged the use of orange juice in the diet.

"Life insurance firms who examine applicants for policies do not ask these people if they drink coffee," he said after reading an advertisement predicting the alleged horrible fate of coffee-drinkers by the manufacturers of a non-caffeine beverage.

"If we are urged to consume huge quantities of milk if we wish to be healthy," he continued, "but with all mammals the young receive milk from the female parent for a definite period and no longer. In some parts of the world," he pointed out, "milk is a rarity, yet people who live there do not die off like flies."

HALIFAX TRADE BOARD FIRST IN AMERICA, CLAIM

13 Merchants Banded Together as Association

FORMED IN 1750

Conceived for Benefit to Trade in Eastern Canada

(By The Canadian Press)

HALIFAX—Halifax, capital of a province well known as the cradle of "first things", now lays claim to the first Board of Trade in British North America.

Thirteen merchants of the newly formed city, then a cluster of crude houses guarded by log palisades from Indians who were wont to lurk in its scalps, banded themselves together in 1750, just four years after Edward Cornwallis had sailed his Sphynx into Chebucto Bay to lay down the city founded by royal prerogative.

The circumstances was recalled recently by C. A. Saunders, secretary of the present Halifax Board, in an outline of the Chamber of Commerce movement. The British Board of Trade had been founded in 1600 but that body was primarily interested in matters of state. As early as the fourteenth century, a local chamber of commerce had been organized in Marseilles, and while Canada was the last unit of the British Empire to have a national chamber, the Halifax association was the first board of Trade in the modern sense of which he had record.

There are records to show, however, that Halifax had its trouble with the British Board before a local organization was formed. Dr. James Akins, whose history of the city was published in 1867, notes that "Mr. Cornwallis was continually embarrassed by letters from the Board of Trade, finding fault with the expenses incurred in planting the settlement. "It appears that 40,000 pounds had been voted by parliament for the city's founding, and a further vote of 30,000 pounds was found necessary.

Cornwallis' reply to the Lords of Trade is almost reminiscent of the present day efforts to give an account of the expenditure of public works. "Not a pound shall be expended by me unnecessarily," he wrote, "but without money you could have no town, no settlement, and indeed no colony. It is very certain that the public money cleared the ground, built the town, supported it, kept soldiers and settlers from starving with cold, and has brought down above 1,000 settlers from the other colonies. Lots in Halifax are now worth 60 guineas. If there was no public money circulating, lots would be given for a gallon of rum."

Laying Off Nothing New.

Further evidence that the laying off of departmental help is no new thing in stringent times, appears in the same letter:

"According to your Lordships' directions, I have discharged the two government Apothecaries and shall discharge some one of the Surgeons' Mates that may be spared. As for the sawmill, we never had one board from it — not so much as a scantling plague from the beginning. Thirty men have been kept to no purpose in the affair of the Indians. Gilman has behaved well in that affair, and a detachment of rangers was sent after the Indians. We have not overtaken them, cut off the heads of two Indians and scalped one."

It was in this exciting atmosphere that the first Halifax Board of Trade was founded, but it was hardly to come into existence before it was rendering aid to the government. Dr. Akins, in his only reference to this important body, says that "in the month of August, 1750, three hundred and fifty Germans were received in the ship Alderney; and in September following, 300 German protestants, under the same bounty, in the ship Ann. The Governor in Council were embarrassed in providing for their support, and found it necessary to make into pecuniary arrangements with the merchants of the town, who at this early period had formed themselves into an association, for the benefit of trade".

Halifax has had many new number eighty. That first organization of thirteen merchants has grown to a unit which represents this city in a national chamber of commerce with 300,000 members.

STRAWBERRY WEEVIL CONTROL

The Dominion Entomologist provides a timely topic in calling attention to the Strawberry Root Weevil, which is a native Canadian insect abundant everywhere. Its larvae lie on the roots of grasses, clovers, and other plants; the strawberry being a favorite food plant. Two methods of control are effective; the first is the use of a system of rotation suitable to cleaning a field of weevil infestation; and the second includes the application of poisoned bait twice during the year, the middle of April for the destruction of overwintering weevils, and then the middle to the end of June for the second application, to destroy the summer generation which appears about that time. Pamphlet No. 8., N.S., supplied without charge through the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, deals with the control of this insect pest.

MINING FIELD AT GREAT BEAR LAKE IS MECCA

May Find Radium, Gold, Silver and Other Metals

SHORT SPRINGTIME

Traffic Problem to Get Prospectors Into Camp

(By The Canadian Press)

EDMONTON, Alta. — Onslaught of prospectors, with all the aid of science, has started in the Great Bear Lake district of the Northwest Territories to gather from the bosom of the north a wealth of radium, silver, copper and possibly gold. Radium is the big objective of the mining parties, but silver, reported to be found in the mountains, is taking high place in the prize list.

Spread out like the fringe of the Arctic Circle, where long winter nights are longer to behold than summer days, Great Bear Lake is the mecca of the 1932 prospectors in Canada and from points south of the international boundary. It is slightly over 1,000 miles northwest of Edmonton, and's good 800 miles beyond the end of steel at Waterways, Alta.—as the crow flies.

The short springtime of the north is dawning to wipe away the desolate fringe of the northland's winter. With the coming of the merry month of May the real dawn of the prospectors' short period of opportunity breaks. It swings into fun stride in June and terminates abruptly about the end of September when once again the howling blizzards of the Arctic will sweep out of the North Pole region.

Before the gales of 1932 find birth, prospectors, singly and in large parties, will have traversed most of the seven or eight hundred miles around Harbor Bay, Echo Bay, Labine Point, Conjurer Bay and Hunter Bay. They will have pitted their wits against bears, the rock and much of the hidden wealth as possible in the brief period around Fort Norman and along the shores of the three great wide arms of the northern lake.

Prospectors' Means.

This means of prospectors lies in the tree north. Echo Bay is situated in latitude 66, point 12 north and longitude 117 point 30 west, or within fifty miles of the great Arctic Circle.

Because of the distance there is a traffic problem. With the railhead over 250 miles north of Edmonton, the air line gap between Waterways and the mineral field stretches 800-odd miles. During the winter and early spring months the only way in is by sprocketed, 9ft in manner the long water route of the Mackenzie river over 1,500 miles in length, back to the field. The air line route follows this river system as far as Great Slave Lake but then strikes due north across the lake and follows a long chain of lakes and rivers between Fort Rae, on the north arm of Great Slave Lake, and Great Bear Lake.

These two routes—the long river line with its portages and the plane route—will have to handle all the traffic, freight, express and passenger, in and out of Great Bear Lake for some time to come as railway construction seems remote.

Whether by the rail-river route or via air, the route to Great Bear Lake will be keen. McMurray, three miles beyond the end of steel, and Waterways will vie for hopping-off honors, and so far the more north-erly settlement has the edge.

To reach Echo Bay via Fort Rae from Edmonton the distance is 1,248 miles; Quitting the Alberta capital the prospector travel to McMurray; thence they head north to Fort Smith, at the edge of the North-West Territories and 305 miles away. From Fort Smith the line reads 325 miles to Fort Rae, and Echo Bay lies another 290 miles away, always travelling to the north and swinging to the west.

To the shores of Great Bear Lake via Fort Norman, where crude oil was discovered several years ago by mineral-seeking trappers travel from Edmonton to Waterways or McMurray. From Edmonton they travel 1,100 miles northwest to Fort Norman. The trip from Fort Norman to Echo Bay extends 300 miles, making a total distance of 1,700 miles.

Likely to Carry Freight.

Prof. Alan E. Cameron, secretary of the Research Council of Alberta, believes the long water route is likely to carry the freight—supplies and ore as well as mining equipment—and that the plane will handle most of the express and passenger traffic. He predicts that, probably, Prof. Cameron finds, that the freight will be moved in and out on a combination river and air transport system. That is, it will travel by barge and scow on the long route between Waterways and Rae and there be transferred to planes for the remainder to Echo Bay and other points on Great Bear Lake.

Due to the geographical position, Rae is bound to play an important part in the mineral development about the lake," says Prof. Cameron in dealing with northern trade and territory. "Free dispatches from Ottawa, state that the Canadian government is prepared to aid in development of the area. Such aid could take no better form than improving facilities at Rae. And considerable improvement is necessary. Adequate harborage is lacking, both for barges and boats. Lake Marjolaine, on which Rae is situated, is exceedingly shallow and many large uncharted rocks form a real danger. A hydrographic survey is urgently needed, accompanied by a blasting of all uncharted rocks and shallows. My personal belief is that the present site of the post is entirely inadequate and a new site should be found from an accurate hydrographic survey of the east shore of the north arm. A proper choice of this site could only be made after careful survey had been conducted."

Prof. Cameron also believes Rae should be commercial gateway with the permanent northern service.

Outposts Along Route.

A dozen outposts and settlements lie along the route from Waterways and McMurray into the new mining field. The rail terminus, Waterways, boasts a summer population of 150 and, linked with McMurray, is gaining in importance. Planes take off from both points on the final stages of flights to Great Bear Lake. McMurray is a thriving village on the Clearwater and Athabaska Rivers and is the centre of the fur and mining industry and salt industry.

Located on the northwest arm of Great Slave Lake lies the outpost of Fort Rae. Fort Norman is at the junction of the Mackenzie and Bear Rivers, and supplies are transferred at this point to shallow craft capable of navigating up stream on the route to Great Bear Lake. Bear River itself is 90 miles long and shallow as well as full of rapids.

Fort Smith is at the north end of the Smith portage where boats have for the lower river points, and Fort Fitzgerald, at the south end of the Smith portage, which is 16 miles long. The Smith portage is reached because of the rapids in the Slave River, and has a good motor road.

Fort Resolution is on the south side of Great Slave Lake, where the traffic diverts to Fort Rae, 150 miles across the lake.

ELECTION IN U. S. WILL BE HARD FOUGHT

Commentator Does Not Believe There Will be Third Party

MANY QUESTIONS

Tariff, Prohibition, Water Ways and War Debts Will be to Fore

By KEN CLARK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

WASHINGTON.—To prophet in Washington has the hardihood to forecast whether the Democrats or the Republicans will win in the general elections in November when one-third of the Senate, an entire House of Representatives, and a President will be elected. It is accepted only that either party will win a decisive victory, with unprecedented economic distress throughout United States has brought no serious threat of a third party.

It is agreed the next President will be either Herbert Hoover, Republican nominee, or a Democrat, perhaps one whose name has not yet appeared among the score of candidates for the nomination. But it is possible to predict, whatever the result of the election, there will be no drastic change in the policy of Washington toward the rest of the world in general or Canada in particular.

Tariff, prohibition, the St. Lawrence Waterways, the League of Nations, war debts and other matters of world interest will be greater or lesser issues in the campaign, but none questions will be of so definite line of demarcation between the Republican and Democratic parties. The 30-year foreign debt moratorium plan of Democrat "Al" Smith has not assumed anything like the position of a party policy.

Tariff Their Fire.

The tariff—the Smoot-Hawley Act passed by the Republicans in 1929—will be bitterly criticised by the Democrats. The Democratic platform may contain a plank calling for revision of these provisions. If the party wins an all-round victory Canadians may look forward to some readjustment of rates affecting the Canadian export trade formerly worth $400,000,000 a year. On the other hand, Democrats both in the House and the Senate, have been far from guiltless in the matter of laying bricks to the wall along the international boundary and the Democratic party as a whole, once leading from the rear, may prove be said to be protectionist if not nationalist.

If the Democrats should seat majorities in the House and Senate and President Hoover should be re-elected, a possibility seen at the moment as verging on the impossible, a result would be much the same. In the campaign of 1928 Hoover declared for a limited revision of the Fordney-McCumber Tariff Act and it seems clear only the political exigency of the following year caused his signature of the Smoot-Hawley Act.

Results of the elections of 1930 and recent developments in Congress are accepted by unbiased observers in Washington as indicating a growth of sentiment against prohibition. The accidently increased activity of the dry lobby is sufficient to suggest that the next Congress will be smaller than the present where dry opinion was two to one. Much less than tariff is prohibition a party matter and insofar as Canada is concerned, the issue is dormant. It makes little difference whether the Democrats or Republicans triumph.

St. Lawrence May Help.

In the matter of the problem immediately confronting Canadian and American governments—unemployment—the St. Lawrence waterway—there is small choice for Canadians, favoring or opposing the project, whether in the parties. However, the plan is a particular pet of the Democrats and an advance toward an agreement within the next few months would materially improve his prospects in the mid-western states.

With regard to foreign affairs in general the temper of the United States at present, both in Congress, the tone of the press and the conversation in the clubs and on the street, is strongly nationalistic.

Isolation has been perhaps more of Republican than of Democratic doctrine. The Democrat Woodrow Wilson conceived the idea of the League of Nations. However, President Hoover made an international gesture of great significance by declaring for the establishment of a year's moratorium on inter-governmental debts.

The immediate result of this was a storm of nationalism and the pigging up of John Nance Garner, the no-cancellation-of-war debts Democratic candidate of William Randolph Hearst, published. Incidentally chances of Newton D. Baker, Wilson's Secretary of War, as a Democratic possibility are diminished by the fact that he came out in a speech advocating revision of war debts. And Al Smith's plan is far more drastic.

It therefore appears, that barring a war or some economic catastrophe of magnitude in the United States or Europe, Canadians need not anticipate as a result of the elections a change in the government at Washington which would fundamentally readjust the international situation.

Greater Value at Lower Prices Than Ever Before

A recent interview with Mr. Gibbons, manager of the local Beatty Washer Store, situated at number 352 Front Street, reveals the fact that never in the history of the Electrical Appliance Industry has it been possible to obtain such outstanding quality and value in electrical household appliances as can be secured to-day.

This is particularly true, says Mr. Gibbons of the lines made by Beatty Bros. Limited of Fergus, Canada who own and operate some of the Beatty Washer store branches, and are the largest manufacturers of high class washers in the British Empire.

Beatty Bros. Limited have been making high quality products for nearly 60 years, and not once during this period has there been a time when such high quality merchandise was offered at so low a price.

Electric Washers serve as a good example. A few years ago washers were selling anywhere up from $150.00. Those were not what we would consider today to be efficient washers. Right now one obtains a Beatty washer—the best model made—for $145. This washer is the very finest on the market, and combines so many outstanding features with its famous basket system of washing that it is unanimously conded first place by washer connoisseurs.

Other Beatty washers can be purchased for as low as $98. This $98 model is the very finest all standard washer being sold in Canada. Its quality and appearance value, and is comparable to many other makes selling at $125 to $135.

At these low prices there is no reason why women should shave at the rub board. Washday drudgery can be banished forever. In fact household tasks no longer require all of woman's time, for electrical appliances have come to her aid. Automatic Ironers, Vacuum Cleaners, and Floor Waxers and Polishers can all be secured at the Beatty Washer store at comparatively low prices to bring hours of leisure and ropes.

Every lady pleasing to hear of these great price reductions, and to know that quality and value have been maintained. At present savings of as high as $60 and $80 can be made on selected models we are told. In confirmation of his statements Mr. Gibbons referred to a resident of Belleville to call at the Beatty Washer store and inspect the many appliances that are on display there. He assures us that such outstanding value and such low prices can only be fully appreciated when seen.

Electrically heated uniforms and shoes for traffic policemen have been demonstrated.

BOSTON—Bostonians who believe of nudist devotees were obliged to journey to Klingbert, Germany, for their Picktitutur recently learned that a nudist colony exists within 40 miles of Boston.

There is no new against nudism in Massachusetts, however. The appearance of a person does not take place in the public place, the authorities said. The nudist colony is said to be a restricted group and the public is not admitted.

ELECTION IN MANITOBA IS EXPECTED

Prospects Are For it to Be Held Last Week of June

BATTLE ON TAP

Conservatives Are Ready For an Intensive Campaign

(By The Canadian Press)

WINNIPEG—With the end of the present Legislature session in sight, Manitoba's election date may be announced for the province's first fraternal battle at the polls in five years. Prospects are that the session will be prorogued by the end of April and that the election date is expected to be within the last week of June or the first in July.

Conservatives, intent on adding Manitoba to the list of provinces under governments of that party, have been prepared for the call for election since last summer. Under leadership of Fawcett Q. Wright, Conservative floor member in the House, have addressed scores of meetings, district conventions and nominating conventions. The party is ready to step into an intensive campaign at a moment's notice.

Premier John Bracken, head of the Manitoba Progressive government since 1922, will seek return of his administration for the fifth time, that a form of union government will exist in the province by the time re-election. The Manitoba Liberal Association has pledged its support to the premier; in return Mr. Bracken has promised that his next Cabinet, should he have the chance of it, shall include at least two Liberals, leader Tupper.

Alliance of Liberal and Government parties took place three months ago after a proposal by the Premier for a four-party union government had been turned down by the Conservatives and Laborites. A considerable number of members of both parties in the election will have the support of both Liberal and Progressive Associations, running as Liberal-Progressives.

But in the majority of cases government candidates will be designated simply as Progressives, with the Liberal party refraining from placing an opposing candidate in the small Liberal faction, strongly opposed to the coalition, may enter several candidates under an independent banner.

Charges Extravagance.

In addresses last fall and this year, Col. Taylor, Conservative leader, has charged the Bracken government with extravagance in its present administration and announced a platform based on economy measures designed to relieve Manitoba of some of the weight of its financial burden. As for the Liberal-Progressive alliance, he said: "The rank and file of the Liberal party will tumble to the affiliate with Bracken or any other party."

A large percentage of Liberals will vote Conservative this year, he forecast. At present the Liberal party has five members in the Legislature against fifteen Conservatives and twenty-nine Progressives. There are three Liberals, two Progressives and one vacant seat completing the total membership of fifty-five.

Expenditures have been "unconscionably" during the nine years of the Bracken regime, Taylor has declared in support of his charges against the government of "reckless extravagance." He favors reduced expenditures in order that the burden may be lifted on particular land taxes.

The Conservative chieftain would shift the burden of unemployment relief costs from municipalities to the province and the Dominion. Municipalities, he says, are practically bankrupt in order to provide relief. He has advocated a non-partisan committee to handle relief in Manitoba.

Defensive Given.

Staunch defence of his government's policies has been made by Premier Bracken. "Our record has not been excelled by any government in Canada," he asserted. "In the last year we have cut our expenditures nearly $2,000,000."

In the nine years he has headed the farmer government, Bracken says, has borrowed less than $30,000,000, said Mr. Bracken. The only adjoining province, he remarked, had borrowed $200,000,000 in the same time. His cabinet had sought every means of economizing and deriving revenue from legitimate channels.

His proposal for a union government was made for the sake of economy in government, Mr. Bracken declared. Had the Conservative and Labor Parties accepted his offer, the legislative session would have been shortened appreciably and saved Manitoba considerable money.

Labor has obtained added strength on its forces for the election by acquiring support of a farmer group called "left wingers" of the United Farmers of Manitoba, non-political agrarian organization. The U. F. M. has announced its view with disfavor activities of the faction of its membership which has allied with the Independent Labor party.

Candidates designated as Farmer-Labor standard-bearers are to be nominated, according to plans of the alliance leaders. Labor has already completed plans for placing candidates in the Winnipeg field, where ten members of the next Legislature will be elected.

Conservatives have nominated 37 candidates to date; Progressives 10; Liberal-Progressives 6; Labor 5; and Liberals 3. Those competing with opposed both Government and Liberal parties are: Dr. F. V. Bird in Turtle Mountain; F. W. Malhotah in Selkirk; H. Cockworth in Minnedosa; Hugh McKenzie in Dauphin; Norris Dennis in Morris; Tim Fax, and Robert Mooney in Virden.

BOYS AND GIRLS TO PILOT YACHTS

Fifteen Clubs Expected to Send Crews to Race

(By The Canadian Press)

HALIFAX—Boys and girls to see an international yachting contest again, this summer when fifteen from Canadian and United States clubs compete for the Lipton trophy of Mills Lakes, Yarmouth, for the Prince of Wales trophy.

Three Nova Scotian and six American crews battled for the trophy last summer, the first year of the racing, the Pleon Yacht Club of Marblehead, Mass., represented by Stanton Deland and James P. Hunnewell, skippers, the winners. They been contest in the final round with the Royal Nova Scotia Yacht Squadron, Halifax, represented by Evatt Marchant and Paul Rowlings.

This year it is expected that at least fifteen crews will participate. Invitations are being issued by the Lakeside Yacht Club, Yarmouth, to the leading yacht clubs of Canada, Newfoundland and the United States. The racing dates are July 30 to July 9 inclusive, and the series will be conducted by the Lakeside Yacht Club, according to the racing rules of the Royal Nova Scotia Yacht Syndicate.

The races are restricted to junior sportsmen, either boys or girls between the ages of 12 and 18 years. A replica of the trophy is awarded for the winning crew each year and the large cup, a handsome silver bowl, is to become the permanent possession of any yacht club which may be represented by three winning crews, not necessarily on one occasion.

Yachts of the Acadian class, dinky little 17 footers, fast and seaworthy, with Marconi mainsail and jib and plenty of outside ballast, will be used in the series of races, which will be on a handicap basis. The boat, the winning crew of each series will proceed to the next round the losing crew to be eliminated from competition. Four yachts of the Acadian class are now available for the races.

So far as is known, this is the only international contest of its kind in North American yachting and many senior yachtsmen regard it as of exceptional value to the sport. The initial competition last year was conducted throughout with the best of feeling and the spirit of good sportsmanship that then obtained will be retained this year. The young sailors, both boys and girls, have been lieutenants and sailtrimmers, well-posted in the rules and eager to know almost as much about the game as their seniors. The Royal Nova Scotian crew that contested last year was at a disadvantage in that they had little previous experience in match-racing, but their cousins from across the border laughed them into line for the series and indications are that this year, at pretty Mills Lakes, the racing for the trophy donated by His Royal Highness, will be rare sport.

Make Animals From His Beach Combings

(By The Canadian Press)

PROVINCETOWN, Mass. — The unique toy animals and birds that spring into being under the skill of George Payne, Jr., here are fashioned of gooseflish bones, shark vertebrae, corks and wood. Payne from fishermen's nets, scallop shells and beach combings harvest. With a penknife and a bit of paint he has utilized the crude materials to make images of all sorts of birds—peacocks, storks, flamingos, penguins, pelicans and gulls, besides many strange, "whatisnit" birds of grotesque lines.

"Each tide brings in something new," said the beach-combing artist. "But there are times when I have to do a bit of searching to obtain what I want. Occasionally I have found a curiously shaped piece of gnarled wood and converted it into a cockatoo or monkey. A scallop shell makes a dandy peacock's tail; goosefish bones make excellent gull wings. A pine cone touched with white paint is a first-rate ostrich's bushy tail. And now I am finishing a four-foot high stork whose body is an egg-shaped lobster buoy and whose wings are two shark fins."

Anglican Church in 50 Years Service

(By The Canadian Press)

HALIFAX—The Church of England immigration chaplaincy service at the Atlantic ports, now part of the work of the Council for Social Service of the Church of England in Canada, has entered on its fiftieth year of service. Rev. T. W. Fyson commenced work at Quebec in 1882, where he served for 34 years the only port chaplain, and other ports, also starting chaplaincy work at the ports till 1907. This work was begun by the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, the Missionary Church in England (at the suggestion of W. E. Gladstone) and was taken over by the Council for Social Service of the Church of England in Canada in 1926.

During the last twenty-one years more than 415,000 names of incoming Anglicans have been reported to the clergy throughout Canada.

To commemorate the jubilee the council has just issued a bulletin, "The Church at the Gates" by the Rev. M. La Touche Thompson, port chaplain.

KEEN RACE IN AIR CLASSIC

Wide Variety of Machines and Many Noted Pilots in King's Cup

(By The Canadian Press)

LONDON—The Duke of Wales and Prince George have both entered machines for the King's Cup Air Race around Britain on July 8 and 9. The Prince of Wales will be piloted a Comper-Swift, one of the smallest aeroplanes made, and it will be piloted by Flight Lieut. R. H. Fleming. Prince George has entered a Puss Moth, and the pilot will be Flight Lieut. J. G. D. Armour.

Though the number of entries for the King's Cup received at the Royal Aero Club up to the present is less than in some earlier years here regulations have succeeded in attracting a competition that promises to be exceptionally interesting. The fastest machine ever entered for the race—a high speed mailplane capable of 180 miles an hour—and service type training aeroplanes, twin-engined craft built for the private owner, a fast and powerful air transport monoplane and several new three-seat machines are included in the first list.

Two conditions have operated to reduce the number of entries. In 1930 no fewer than 110 entrants were obtained, and this year again, though the contest was restricted to amateur pilots, the number of competitors was far too unwieldy for efficient and safe handling round the course. This time every competing pilot must have flown not less than 100 hours solo and every machine will be handicapped on the assumption that it can average at least 110 miles an hour over the course of 1,250 miles. The first will be handicaps the novices, the second almost automatically disqualifies many of the older light aeroplanes in the country whose owners have entered them in previous years in the hope that the handicapper would give them a chance.

Relaxation of the rule against professional pilots has brought in the larger machines, which will be flown by experienced test pilots. Scratch machine will certainly be J. D. Siddeley's Avro "Mailplane", a single-seater designed to carry 800 pounds of mail at a cruising speed of 150 miles per hour over long distances. The Vickers "Vastra" monoplane entered by Sir Robert McLean is an air-liner of the kind operating with great success on the West Australian Airways between Perth and Adelaide.

Six women, all of them well-known pilots, have entered machines. Miss Winifred Spooner, perhaps the best woman pilot in the world, will fly a "Moth" light aeroplane. Miss Winifred Brown, Kings Cup winner in 1930, will steer a Sports "Avian". Lady Bailey flies Alan Butler have entered "Puss Moths"; Miss Pitcella Crossley, the only woman competitor to finish the course in the terrible weather of last year's race-day, will fly a "Swift" and Mrs. L. B. Rhodes-Moorhouse, whose name recalls the exploits of a famous air V.C. of the war, has entered a "Moth".

CHAIRS BRING PRICE.

LONDON—A set of four Chippendale mahogany arm chairs of the French type the their original Beauvais tapestry which had been in use until recently at Chesterfield House, Mayfair, by the Princess Royal and the Earl of Harewood went at $12,500 at a sale. This was the highest price paid at the sale and it came near the end.

For a dockyard model of a 60-gun ship of the 17th century which had been found in an attic $400 was realized at the sale. Prices, generally, however, were low. Patrols of footguards sold for a few shillings—$50.00 would have established a library. A portrait of the 2nd Earl of Harewood and a picture of Samuel Johnson, the great English lexicographer, waiting at the Earl Chesterfield, had to be sold together to bring $8.00.

The sale realized a total of $28,-720.

OTTAWA STAR HAS RECORD

Leo McCaffery, Basketballer Restores Popularity of Game

(By The Canadian Press)

OTTAWA—Basketballers, take a track at this record!

In ten years competition in league and playoff games Leo McCaffery's 32-year-old Ottawa star, has scored an average of 11.5 points for 132 games, a length of play and scoring punch record probably unequalled in the Dominion.

When Montreal Pustillers eliminated Ottawa Britannias in a recent Dominion senior playdown series, McCaffery saw his ambition of playing on a Dominion championship team again fade, but it was through no fault of his. Having himself the best forward in the series, he scored 50 points in two games, a record for Ottawa-Montreal series games.

McCaffery now holds the record for Montreal-Ottawa playoffs for thirteen years in all classes with 53 points scored in an ten-match playoff game in 1926. For the past two years he has led the senior city league in scoring and while an intermediate led the local circuit for three years—another record.

Volunteering to save the Ottawa Britannia franchise league two years ago when it was on its last legs, McCaffery has been mainly responsible for restoring the popularity of the game in the capital and has proved himself as able an executive as he is a player. The past season he was president of the league and manager and coach of the Britannia team as well as its star forward.

Two years ago McCaffery coached Ottawa Britannia juniors to a Dominion championship and, improving with age, may yet realize his ambition to play on a national championship outfit.

SMART CINEMA.

LONDON—London's latest cinema is the Gaumont-Palace at Hammersmith Broadway. It seats 4,000 people and cost £1,500,000. For the small sum of 1S cents up to 60 cents a three-hour program of pictures and stage shows may be enjoyed. The theatre's circle alone seats 2,000 people. While its total capacity of 4,000 is smaller than that of the Roxy theatre at the Rockefeller Center, the new cinema claims a number of records, including the size of the stage arch, said to be the largest in the country. The safety curtain weighs eighteen tons.

So quickly sometimes has the wheel turned round, that many a man has lived to enjoy the benefit of that charity which hos own piety

Quebec Plans For Zoological Garden

(By The Canadian Press)

QUEBEC—The announcement that Quebec is to have a zoological garden has recently been made by the Department of Colonization. It will be an adjunct to the experimental farm for the breeding of furbearing animals now situated at St. Pierre de Charlesburg, seven miles from the city of Quebec, in the district of Quebec.

It is planned that the gardens, which will provide a sanctuary for every species of wild animal life on the North American continent, will be constructed to represent a Canadian village of the eighteenth century. Later on there will be added collected series of Canadian bird habitat groups and an aquarium, the proposed site of the latter being at one of the falls on the Berger River.

The useful discovery of a process for making rubber stick to metal was an accidental "by product," when chemists who were trying to make a new thermoplastic material for hard molded articles were repeatedly handicapped by that material's way of sticking when hot.

READY TO WEAR BRANCH IMPORTANT

Dresses From Original Models of Noted Paris Couturiers

One of the very new and popular features of the C.D.S. ready-to-wear department, which has been recently introduced in the offering of Mayfair frocks once a month. These dresses are all copied from original Paris models, designed by famous couturiers such as Lanvin, Patou, Maggy Rouff, Goupy, Jenny, Vionnet, Claire Callet. Each branch of the Canadian Department Stores is supplied with a limited number every month, but only one of each model is included in the group. Thus it is quite apparent why the Mayfair tag is so approved by women who seek the exclusive.

Suit Leads Parade.

And talking about style, right now the ladies' ready-to-wear department is carrying a complete stock of smart suitings that even the most exacting customer will find hard to complain about. We all know however, the plain and military coat stands this season and the C.D.S. has an excellent selection of these jaunty, mannish garments with their swagger high-buttoned models and pert breast pockets. At the same time, the more feminine type is still seen Dame Fashion's stamp of approval and you'll find these in the newest cloths with luxurious trimmings of coon, wolf, fox and other furs. Those which are suitable for warmer wear all this season, comes in smart new tweeds, in both novelty stripes and many of the models reflect the military influence.

Baby-Bodice Jumpers.

Both girls, and young matrons are important part of all the skirt and sweater. If you want to be considered smart you simply cannot be without one of the new high-waisted skirts, and amusing baby bodice sweaters. Yes! you know those darling little short waisted sweaters with wide-ribbed waist band and quaint puffed sleeves. They come in open lacy, and comfortable weave and the colors are the most delectable hues of the season.

High Blown Feathers.

The millinery display provides a bright corner in the department. As you already know, coarse, rough shiny straws are the thing, and generally speaking the new materials have some contrasting shade. Bakus, lyons, and Canadian straws are also the preferred list, with black, navy and brown leading the color brigade. And incidentally, you can wear a large loop of ribbon, or chaplet of flowers on the back of the chapeau this season.

Juvenile Section.

The young miss of from seven to fourteen years of age becomes a person of importance when she seeks clothes in the Canadian Department Stores for has there not been a special section, entirely devoted to the requirements of this age group, planned in connection with the ladies' ready-to-wear department? Frocks, coats, hats, skirts and sweaters, in fact everything that the modern young miss' wardrobe, is obtainable here.

Large Assortments in Men's Wear

The men's wear department, one of the most important in the store, is far famed for its large assortment of men's and boys' furnishings. Suits, hats, gloves, hose, shirts, underwear —everything for the man or young man in his wardrobe. An especially attractive range of toggery, shirts, sweaters, hose, plus furs and fancy trousers are carried in this department and every article of apparel is fashioned in the latest styles and patterns.

The 'made to measure' department is a very important one, where clothes are cut to individual taste and measure, thus offering individuality to the wearer. Expert tailoring hints the exclusive tailoring, and at the same time providing fabric with the same fit, choice and satisfaction.

In the 'made to measure' department, the man chooses his materials from an assortment of fine imported materials which have been procured from the world's best markets. He then decides on the pattern to his style and detail and the suit or coat is made to his own individual measure. Tailoring is done by experts in the Eaton factory and complete satisfaction is assured. Such famous brands as Brant, Eatonia and Shamrock are featured as regular lines.

In the boys' department a complete range of suits can be found, all moderately priced in single or double breasted styles. A large assortment is also carried of sweaters, hats, shirt-waists, hose and other accessories.

RESEARCH BUREAU AND MERCHANDISING

Is Important Factor in Giving Public Best of Merchandise

The Research Bureau is an important factor in Eaton merchandising.

For example—as merchandise is bought for the popular Eatonia Store a sample is sent to the Eaton Research Bureau for testing. Here various machines subject the sample to wear and tear, to the action of sunlight, heat or water thus determining in a few hours whether the article will prove serviceable or not and at the same time come up to the outstanding value demanded for Eatonia items.

Data is then formulated to assign a regular standard of merchandise. Rates of garments are tabulated and wrth standards examined. The manufacturer must keep to the standard set—failure to do so means a cancelled or returned order. A protective guarantee to every customer.

Hundreds of tests of varying degrees of importance are made—tests that prove definitely the quality of Eaton merchandise. Thus by constantly checking and comparing the merchandise, we do our utmost to assure you that the merchandise you buy is as represented. Only at Eaton's will you find such a unique institution protecting the purchases of many thousands of Canadian buyers.

EATONIA BRAND IS NOW STANDARD ONE

Looming prominent about all C. D. S. stores is the sign, "Eatonia," regarding which the following information may be given.

The "Eatonia" idea was conceived some years ago and was the result of a desire to produce certain articles which would be standard in quality, fair and value in other words, the best and most for the money.

It was tried out in a small way at first, but was immediately so successful that its scope was widened and has kept on widening ever since. Now it includes items in practically all departments.

DIAMOND "T" HOUSE PAINTS ARE FEATURE

Prepared exclusively for the T. Eaton Co. Diamond "T" House and Barn paints provide a first class paint job for either the professional painter or the house owner who does his own work. The paints are made from well ground pigments of fine quality and the mixing is done by experts. The paint has great spreading capacity and gives a smooth full rich gloss, which dries to a tough elastic film. One gallon of these paints will cover 350 square feet, giving two coats, indicating great economy in its use.

Mail Order Dep't is Popular Feature

Serving villages and cities in all parts of the Dominion, The T. Eaton Mail Order Department, represented at the Canadian Department Stores, daily distributes thousands of catalogues and descriptives. It is a separate entity with its own staff of goods and represents one of the most popular and flourishing branches of the Company's business.

The mail order catalogue is published in 1284. In this year the first catalogue was issued, being merely a booklet containing 32 store values, printed for distribution among out-of-town visitors at the Toronto Exhibition. The visitors took the booklets home with them and the first orders by mail were received, keeping a woman busy filling them with the aid of a boy to do the parcelling.

In the following year a larger edition of the catalogue was printed, this one having 48 pages, and the mail order staff of two was increased to four and later to eight. In 1902, the mail order department was located in a separate building and from then on its growth has been continuous. In 1907 and the first offer of its kind made by any mail order house in Canada was made by Eaton's of all charges on exchanges. Two years later the department acquired its own stock of merchandise and was given vastly increased floor space.

Gives Quick Service.

Speed is an important factor in the mail order building and the stocks are assorted in varieties, sizes and colors. The rule of rustling papers, clicking typewriters, spoken orders, electric stencilling of labels, rumbling trucks, whirring elevators and parcel-chutes prevails throughout the building. Outside a stream of wagons back and forth between the building and post-office; and an encircling pile of factories, 12 storeys high, completes the unified and economic source of supply for mail order goods. The Eaton Company has its own printing establishment where the catalogue and other work which is today distributed throughout Canada, is rem off huge power presses which house is located in Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon and Montreal.

NOVELTY NOTE IN SPORTSWEAR

Brief Jackets and High Built Skirts Featured in Most Cases

Sportswear, of both active and spectator character, follows the general trend of the season with new brief jackets, high built skirts, and novelty effects. Adopts the tailored gigolo style as a major silhouette theme as indicated by the styles now showing. This severe effect is frequently relieved by the use of scarfs, capes and graceful blouse effects.

The new knitted suits are as trim and smooth-fitting as a fine, tailored one. Contrasts frequently reach only to the waist (the "Bolero" style is still a favorite); but there are many favored ones that extend a little way below and are fitted and bellies. Vionnet's short cape oversleeves, drop-shoulder effects, and the unusual but buttoned-over double lapel, give them individuality.

Sport Fabrics.

The fabrics are sources of much interest. Velvety yarns are sponsored for popular and medium priced frocks. Over and over again, they are used for two-piece dresses with ribbed-bodice blouses. Lace-weave and hand-fashioning are prominent as decorative effects.

Stress is laid particularly on a kid and sueded cotton fabric. Suede fabric is a fairly light weight, and on several new rough fabrics of medium weight and cotton with almost invisible diagonal striping called tuftsuede cloths and mogue mesh. Ribbed sagoura is also a highlight.

The blouse group is important, especially large lace mesh versions in boucle with cuffs and blouses with striped treatmedia or large plaids. Neckline variation is understood.

Stripes Good.

Stripes present an important range of color variation on the sweaters of knit costumes. They are employed in horizontal bands of color on pastel backgrounds, most of which are worked out in a simulation of hand-knit or crochet. Lacy stitches in wavy stripes also lend decorative effects. Short sleeves is brief treatment, frequently puffed by ribbed borders, are a favorite style note.

Jackets Used Frequently.

Costumes vary from one-piece frocks to three-piece suits variously featuring the knitwear as striped effects, jackets and boleros in stripes appear frequently.

Blended colorings, such as tones of blue with light gray, or "poppy glow" which has a clear orange cast with eggshell, are featured in the sweaters, while skirts are frequently in monotone.

Overblouse and tuck-in model sweaters are represented in about equal proportion.

Small Desk or Table Important

Never has the small table come in for so much attention, as it has in the last few years. It must not be its laurels, for the small desk is going to rival it in popularity, shortly. Then there is that hybrid, the table desk, in reality a table, but with a desk tray with four feet which fit into holes in the table top.

A very compact little piece, a Directoire desk has a folding leaf that makes it appropriate for the small room. Made of inlaid walnut, the top has a pretty cabbie for flowers, or small books. Below the leaf are two deep drawers.

Another small piece is a tambour desk of mahogany with a fine inlay. Then there are the more masculine types, one, a modern art production with a black glass top and chrome handles, and another is a flat topped, knee hole desk, amply equipped with drawer space, especially suited to a man's needs.

For general use one may select a period table to go with the room or else choose, oh dear, how small one's choice! Take pedestal tables alone. One has a pie crust edge, on a tripod. Another is smaller and its top revolves. Another is smaller and its top revolves. Another has a notch for books, beneath its round top. Then the pedestals are on three-legged stands while others have four legs. Then there are several with shelves with tables with drop leaves. Some of these are just right for cards, with the leaves in, but terly tables and gate-legged tables have long been with us.

Large Auditorium Valuable Asset

One of the finest and most appealing features of the T. Eaton's College Street Store, Toronto, is the auditorium with its seating capacity of 1,246. Located on the seventh floor of the Furnishings Building, the auditorium is an example of the high degree of artistic decoration achieved with the object of utility in mind.

The beauty of auditorium was designed by Professor Jacques Carli, Paris, and the perfect originality of whose work in Canada is known to those who have seen the Eaton Grill restaurant. In architecture and decoration, the auditorium follows the Empire in its spirit of simplicity and refinement, in the use of rich tones of fine proportion, the walls of which are panelled and gold fabricked, the lighting being inset between the panels and ceiling. This color note is echoed in the black chairs upholstered in gold fabric, with the exception of an upholstery tiling in shades of beige and brown.

The lighting is one of the unique and most pleasing features of the hall's equipment. There is no glare, the light being softly diffused through the translucent glass set into walls and ceiling. Flood lights too are part of the architectural plan. All lights in the auditorium can be dimmed gradually.

The heating and ventilation fixtures are supplanted by clever decorative treatment, in the scheme of decoration. On the stage, the semi-circular arrangement of drapery and vani organ provides the background.

EATON EXECUTIVES TO USE OWN INITIATIVE

The late Timothy Eaton always insisted on self-reliance and independence of thought on the part of his executive associates and the following story from the life of the T. Eaton Company was told by Mr. Timothy Eaton himself.

One of the T. Eaton Company was holidaying in Muskoka when he received from his son, E. N. Eaton, telegraphed him regarding a matter of considerable importance, proposing the wire. The query, however, went unanswered as did a second message—but the third message was sent collect. This brought results and E. Y. Eaton received the following reply. "Consult E. Y. Eaton." This query has been carried out through the whole Eaton organization and the Canadian Department Stores.

EATON FACTORIES EMPLOY THOUSANDS

First Factory Was Sewing Machine in Main Store

The history of the T. Eaton factories is tinged with romance, for the first factory was established through a delay in service. Entering the window-blind department one morning, Mr. Eaton found the young manager, short on deliveries from the makers, operating a sewing machine and trying to catch up with his orders by making some blinds himself. That single sewing machine was the seed from which has grown the large, busy factories in Montreal and Hamilton and an enormous twelve storey building in Toronto, covering in all over 30 acres of floor space. The three concerns employ during the 33 weeks of the year thousands of workers, all of whom enjoy the same privileges as the store-workers.

The goods manufactured include clothing of every type for men, women and children of all ages, knitted goods of all descriptions — from stockings to sweaters, boots, shoes, harness, furniture; thread, embroidery, furs, neckwear, school books, flavoring extracts, and a host of miscellaneous commodities. Besides this, the firm produces from its own hygienic and modern creameries the famous Eatonia butter. The considerability of keeping the stores supplied from outside sources with sufficient quantities of goods, and of making of men's shirts and women's underwear, caused Mr. Eaton to start in 1890 eight sewing machines—which might be called the first factory proper.

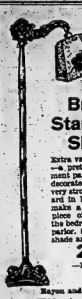
The system of manufacturing its own goods saves the Eaton Company the expense of travellers and middle-men and thus gives them huge advantages of low prices. Because they have connected intimate access to the factories, store buyers are in a position to inspect the materials as they go into the product they buy and the manner in which they are made—thus being assured of their reliability. On the other hand, the factory managers are in direct contact with the store and know exactly what the requirements of the public are.

Over $40.00 Per Family Spent in Belleville Yearly!

The T. Eaton Company, Limited, and its Subsidiaries, One of The Best Customers of the City's Industries

Figures just given out by the T. Eaton Company and The C. D. S. regarding its purchases last year from Ontario manufacturers reveal the fact, that not only is the company probably the province's best customer, but that Belleville particularly has reasons to be grateful, because a considerable proportion of the company' purchases were made from Belleville industries.

The figures show that in 1931 an amount was spent buying goods manufactured in Belleville, which is estimated to be equivalent to an expenditure of over $40.00 per family.



Not many citizens realize the importance of Eaton's and the C. D. S. business with Belleville manufacturers. The amount this company spent means a very substantial contribution towards the pay-roll of the city, and consequently towards Belleville's general prosperity.

Every citizen of Belleville will feel a personal interest in Eaton's and the C. D. S. for, as business conditions improve, the purchases it makes from local industries should even be still greater.

Belleville, as well as Ontario in general, has reasons to be proud of this great Canadian company.

UPROAR IN BRITISH HOUSE OVER IRISH ISSUE

Liberal Member Wants Question Submitted to International Court

Lander Attempts to Draw Definite Reply From Thomas

LANSBURY ENTERS

Thomas Says Government Will Draw Attention to Treaty Breach

London, May 5 (Can. Press)—Uproar ensued in the House of Commons this afternoon when Geoffrey Mandor, Liberal, repeatedly questioned J. H. Thomas, Dominions Secretary, urging the Anglo-Irish dispute be submitted either to the specially constituted Imperial Court of Appeal or the Permanent Court of International Justice at The Hague.

The minister gave no direct answer but after some excitement with a number of opposition members joining in, Thomas declared the matter in dispute was a treaty issue and that while it was customary when there was a difference of opinion for one of them to consult with the other, but President Ramonn De Valera had not done so.

Breach of Treaty

It was not for the British government to do other than draw the Irish Free State's attention to the "breach of the treaty" implied in the Free State government's intention to abolish the oath of allegiance and withhold the land annuities, the minister considered.

Mr. Mander pointed out the special right had been set up by the Imperial Conference, and also the matter could legally be submitted to the international court.

Mr. Thomas replied: "I have already made it clear that President De Valera has chosen to propose abolishing of the fundamental oath in the Free State by uni-lateral action."

Mr. Mander made several attempts to extract a definite answer about dealing with the dispute but was interrupted by loud shouts from all quarters of the House.

Wrangle Reviewed

The speaker rose and temporarily restored order but the uproar resumed when Mander repeated his question. A wrangle ensued between the speaker and Clement Leslie, Parliamentary Labor Leader and several Labor Members.

Finally at the suggestion of Stanley Baldwin, Lord President of the Council, and acting Premier Minister, Mander put his question.

Thomas then replied that when there was a difference of opinion between two parties to a treaty it was customary for one of the other party to ask for a consultation, at which the difference would be discussed.

President De Valera, however, without consultation or any intimation of any kind, the minister said, proposed to abrogate his side of the treaty. It was not for the government to do other than draw attention to the breach of the treaty.

Today the Royal Canadian Mounting Police at Ottawa said the raid was carried out by the Provincial Police, while the Ontario Provincial Police Headquarters here said "they had no report."

"Have you any idea where the men were taken?" Inspector Alfred Goodyear of the Provincial Police, was asked by the Canadian Press today.

"Not a thing, Mighty sorry, have no report on them," he replied.

Mounties Swing Batons When Picketers Hold Back Miners

Bellevue, Alta., May 5 (Can. Press)—Royal Canadian Mounted Police officers were forced to swing their batons again today when picketers attempted to prevent miners returning to work at the Bellevue Mine of the West Canadian Collieries. Before the crowd of demonstrators was dispersed four men were taken into custody. Bringing to five the number of arrests made since the disturbances at the mine started yesterday.

The company is opening the mine on an open shop basis after it has been closed for a month because of a strike of 1,400 miners in the Crowsnest coal fields, called in protest against working conditions.

Only about 40 miners reported for work at the mine today under protection of police who cracked a few heads with their sticks before quieting the mob that threatened the strike-breaker.

JAPAN OPPOSES

Discussion of Offensive Arms Completed Before Commsiison

Geneva, Switzerland, May 5—Claude A. Swanson, of the United States, describing the submarine as "The Assassin of the Sea", renewed his attack on those craft as aggressive weapons of warfare in today's meeting of the Disarmament Conference's Naval Commission.

Mr. Swanson would abolish the submarine, but his thesis was opposed again today by the Japanese delegation.

In the course of the morning the commission completed its discussion of offensive arms and the conflicting viewpoints were referred to the secretary who will attempt to conciliate them before fyling this report with the commission.

Thursday, the first of the three big Belleville Days in the business section, dawned bright and clear, and as soon as the doors of the stores opened for business the shoppers eagerly began the buying—all prepared with long lists of supervalues clipped from the advertisements of the merchants in the special edition of the Ontario Intelligencer of Wednesday. Buying was brisk all morning and in the early afternoon many visitors from out of town began dropping in, promising good volume of business for the first day, and an ever-increasing volume until the store doors close Saturday night and the last grand prize is drawn for.

Mayor Tice will officiate at the drawings which will be under the supervision of Mr. Harold Newby, and take place in the business premises formerly occupied by The Intelligencer.

Thousands of balloons will be released daily, each carrying prize coupons, and special prize orders from individual merchants. Capture all the balloons possible, they are valuable.

OPERATION IS A SUCCESS

Premier Ramsay Macdonald Comes Through Ordeal Excellently

London, May 5.—(Canadian Press Cable)—The operation on Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald's left eye was successfully carried out this afternoon. It was officially stated by his physicians.

The operation, which almost duplicated a previous operation on Mr. MacDonald's left eye, was performed at 4 p.m.

The previous operation, carried out four months ago, was successful, it seems, an ailment which results in painful tension and disturbance of vision and, unless properly treated, in blindness.

Throughout, however, the Prime Minister's physicians have stated he is not threatened with blindness and in addition his general health remains excellent.

Mr. MacDonald entered a nursing home preparatory to the operation last evening, and he will remain incapacitated for about six weeks.

OFF TO WEST INDIES

Toronto, May 5 (CP)—Obeying doctors' orders Hon. W. H. Price, Provincial Attorney General, will today sail to the West Indies from Montreal. He expects to be away for three weeks. Mr. Price has lately suffered from lung and bronchial congestion.

PROSPECT FOR MUCH FRUIT

Farmers Well Pleased With Cool Weather They Declare

Colder weather than usually experienced at this time of year has slowed up the budding and blossoming of fruit in orchards throughout the district appreciably. It is estimated that the delay will be only a matter of two weeks behind time at present. This state of affairs however has occasioned no alarm among the orchardists and they are in fact well pleased with the conditions at present. They point out that frost is still the greatest danger the district has happened late last night and early this morning but as yet the fruit has been favored with the warmest weather the buds which would have been well advanced would in all probability suffer heavily as they have done in past years. With the lateness of the budding the weather will be advanced far enough to mitigate this possibility of frost damage and the fruit will not be harmed. Prospects for a wonderful fruit crop are excellent.

Seeding operations on other farms have been almost finished with only the rare remnant little to be done by the farmers in that line. They also have been delayed for some time on account of cold weather and rain.

PAIR POSE AS POLICEMEN TO ROB COUPLE

Quecnsville, Ont., May 5—Two old age pensioners, David Moore and his wife, both aged 84, were robbed of their pension money by two men who posed as provincial policemen and searched their home allegedly for liquor. Police are investigating.

BUDGET PLAN MAY BE LOST GONE HAYWIRE

House Seems Divided Against Itself in United States

TAX STAMPEDE

Panicky Demonstration Indicates Shadow of Elections

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 5.—(By Ken Clark, Canadian Press Staff Correspondent)— A precipitant into which a Canadian Government because of its unified form could not fall, has caught the government of the United States threatening to destroy administration plans for balancing the budget in a year of economic uncertainty with the presidential elections six months away.

A house divided against itself, a confused and leaderless body, has emasculated the economy program, hashed the tax bill beyond all measure to inflate American dollar and will probably pass a bill to present $2,000,000,000 to veterans of the Great War.

Slang Repealed

Under Speaker John Garner and his Democratic majority in the American slang phrase, has "gone haywire". It appears likely only to have completely disrupted the scheme of a Republican administration to insure the solidity of the government's financial position, but to have seriously impaired the position of the Democrats in the forthcoming elections.

The shrill, high-pitched tones of Representative Fiorello Laguardia of New York, investigating against the original proposal for a sales tax to the billion dollar treasury deficit were effective. A stampede eliminated the sales tax and the bill was hastily repaired with the addition of important taxes removed by the Senate Finance Committee.

On Tuesday the House passed an economy bill which will save $42,000,000 instead of $300,000,000.

Dollar Supported

On Monday it passed the Goldsborough bill to restore the puchasing power of the dollar by control of currency and credit, with the object of a 50 per cent increase in the American dollar abroad.

The panicky behavior of the representatives may be attributed in the fact that in November they are up for re-election. They cannot risk government expenses without the approval of Doubtboard, they cannot pass increase taxes without a similar consent.

The situation is such as to cause considerable alarm in administration circles.

ESSAYS WIN BANK AWARDS

Roberts, of the University of Toronto, who also wrote on "Price Stabilization by Credit Clark" went to W. S. Major, of Queen's University, Kingston, whose subject was "The Wheat Situation at Home and Abroad."

Scarface Just Another Convict Plans to be Model Prisoner

By Victor Hackler
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Atlanta, Ga., May 5—"Scarface" Al Capone began a drive for "model" as convict No. 40886 in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary.

The big Chicago gangsta leader was just another prisoner, one of 3100, as he was examined, photographed and to see where he would fit in as a cog in the prison machinery.

Capone stepped into the prison office last night with the air of a man who was concerned he might have been stepping temporarily from the face of the earth. The Atlanta Penitentiary has the reputation of being the hardest nave nut to crack of any prison in the country.

Warden A. C. Aderhold has an answer to every query about the convicts in his care and invariably his answer is this: "I am not allowed to give out information concerning individual prisoners."

Such lack of information for a period of about seven and a half years is expected to envelop for the notoriety Capone has achieved as chief executive of the syndicated gangland.

Capone began serving his 11 year sentence with prison regulations and penitentiary officialdom awaited he would be given any special privileges. His story that became the story of all the other prisoners.

Capone promptly resolved before he went into the penitentiary to be a model prisoner and extend himself to win time off for good behavior, whittling his 11 years term down to about seven and a half years. He said he was in good shape and ready to do anything.

Capone said he was starting life over again and that the change would continue after he got out of prison. He insisted he was through with "the rackets."

JAPAN, CHINA SIGN TRUCE TO END SCRAP

Shanghai, May 5—A truce agreement was signed by representatives of China and Japan today officially ending the hostilities which began here last January.

The text of the armistice agreement was not immediately available, but it was understood to specify that Japanese troops be withdrawn to the International Settlement and the roads nearby, adjacent to Hongkew.

It was said also that some Japanese troops would be left in specified area between Hongkew and Woosung because of the impossibility of billeting the entire Japanese armed force within the settlement.

The withdrawal, it was understood, would begin within a week and would be completed within the following month.

MUST OBSERVE LAWS OF LAND

Ultimatum Will Be Delivered By Attorney-General of Prov.

Victoria, May 5—Backed by authority of the Dominion and British Columbia Governments, Hon. R. H. Pooley, Attorney-General, is on his way to Nelson to address a gathering of Doukhobors and their leaders. It is understood that he will deliver an ultimatum that the laws of the land must be observed without deviation or exception in any particular.

Nelson, B.C., May 5—All is quiet at the camp of Doukhobors at Thrums where they have concentrated since police dispersed an organized parade in the town on Sunday and arrested 118 of the offenders. Three or four of the sect created a mild excitement yesterday when they appeared in the Nude as the Kootenay train passed. Police were ordered to patrol the district. Last night a group of Doukhobors left the main camp for Krestova.

At the jail no additional houses have been erected to accommodate some of the prisoners and to eliminate overcrowding.

COUNTERFEITERS ARE CAPTURED

New York, May 5—A counterfeiting gang that planned to flood the east, police said, with more than $1,000,000 in bogus $20 bills was broken up here today.

Four men found working in the place were arrested.

All the certificates seized were engraved on Price Waterhouse & De Nemours Company common stock. There were 50 completed 100 share certificates and 600 partly finished certificates.

Rochester Man Found in Smoking Ruins Unhurt

WHEEL IN HAND

Havoc Everywhere as 2 Cars and Garage Go Up

Rochester, N.Y., May 5—Sam Spitale, 35, went to his garage here today, jumped into his automobile and stepped on the starter. The next thing he knew he was sitting dazed amid the smoking ruins of car and garage. He had touched off a bomb when his foot pressed the starter, police said.

They found evidence of dynamite about the premises.

Wheel in Hands

But Spitale was unhurt except for minor bruises, for which he was treated at a hospital, although the explosion shook the entire neighborhood. The bomb blew the engine apart, and part of the automobile through the garage roof, demolishing the rear of the garage and broke windows in the Bethlehem Lutheran Church exit door. Spitale found himself holding a steering wheel bereft of any connection with the steering shaft.

"I guess I'm lucky," was all Spitale said. Police were investigating.

WILL DISCUSS DEBT POLICY

Britain to Have Opportunity to Discuss War Debts

London, May 5 (AP). — The House of Commons today was promised an opportunity to discuss Great Britain's policy in reparations and war debts before announcement is made to reach on the British war debt to the United States.

This was the answer of Neville Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, to a question but Mr. Chamberlain made it plain that the British government will not be requested before any further payments are made to the United States.

Mr. Chamberlain said the next payment of interest was due in the United States on June 15, but had been postponed under the Hoover moratorium. The next payment thereafter will be made on Dec. 15.

'Pure Invention'

London, May 5 (AP).—Responsible government officials today denounced as "pure invention" reports published in the United States that Britain had decided to ask a 25 per cent reduction in war debt and reparations at the Lausanne conference next month.

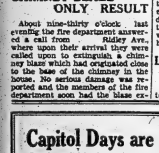
TRANSFER INMATES TO REFORMATORY

Three inmates of the Hastings County gaol were transported to the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph yesterday afternoon. Wilbert Simpson sentenced to serve seven months, Ernest Drouillard also sentenced to serve seven months after being found guilty on a charge of breach of the Excise Act, and Thomas Bowerman, who was sentenced to one year determinate and two years less one day indeterminate. The prisoners were taken to the C.P.R. depot late yesterday afternoon where they met Inspector Fish, who had started at Brockville and was picking up prisoners for the reformatory all along the line. Upon picking up his allotment of prisoners here, Bailiff Fish, had a large number of men under his supervision.

WRONG NAME USED IN COURT CASE



In an issue this week of this paper a regrettable error occurred in the report of a case heard in the police court at Belleville.

Albert Miller of Sidney, had appeared before Magistrate Millel on two charges, the first of stealing a dressing gown, a dress, and other articles of women's wearing and the second of non-support. Miller pleaded guilty on both charges. The clothes in question belonged to the family of James Jackson of Sidney, at whose home Miller resided and who lodged the complaint. Miller explained to the court that he was married and was at present living with friends as he was willing to work if employment could be obtained. Miller was given a year's probation sentence and bound over to keep the peace, having promised to find a job as soon as he could because of the health of his wife. Miller pleaded guilty to both charges.

In that issue the names were confused, and the name of James Jackson, the complainant, was given as the defendant in the case and no mention was made of the accused, Miller. The Ontario Intelligencer regrets this error, and wishes to assure Mr. Jackson that there was no intent to do him any harm or in any way injure his character. This correction is gladly published in justice to Mr. Jackson, who has doubtless been subjected to annoyance by the unintended error.

MUST PAY TAX ON ALL TELEGRAMS

In yesterday's issue there appeared a note in an article on the new taxes in which reference was made to a method which might be used to evade the tax on telegrams to any country outside Canada which was simply by sending the message collect. While this was given only as a suggested way of evasion, as it may lead to confusion, it may be stated that telegraph companies must collect the tax on telegrams sent collect to places outside Canada. There can be no such invasion. Such tax must be paid at the point of filing or sending.

ASCENSION MARKED AT ST. MICHAEL'S

50 MEN EMPLOYED ON DUFFERIN SEWER

Approximately fifty men have been working this week on the various construction jobs in and around the city. Of this number the majority have been employed on the construction of the sanitary sewer on Dufferin Avenue. Considerable work still remains to be done on the sewer although the job itself is not very large. A few men are still employed on back filling the water main, a number more are at the quarry getting the plant in readiness for operation within the next week or so, and several more have been engaged in digging up blocked sewer services and cleaning up streets. Work on the final connection of the spare water main, at the Lower Bridge, is progressing very slowly owing to the fact, that it becomes necessary to chip all the remaining sed rock out by hand. Only a few men can be employed in the small excavation at once. With the fittings and connections in place on the job it will not take very long to make the final connection after preliminary work has been done.

MOVEMENTS OF SWEEPER BLOCKED

Quite a number of cars which were parked on the down town streets last night interfered with the working of the city street sweeper, which operated in this area during the night. The numbers of the cars were taken and the owners will be called to report to police headquarters.

LARGER NUMBER THAN IS USUAL

The number of transients registering at the city police station was to be later than other fish, which have already found their way upstream to deposit their eggs and hatch the little minnows, and it is not until warmer weather that the mud-cat will find its way up stream. Meanwhile scores of succulent fish are being hauled in by the men and children who have been eagerly hooking them throughout the day. A number of older fishermen have been selling them from door to door in the city and reaping a harvest of small change.

HARRY SHONIKER ON RETIRED LIST

Harry Shoniker, a veteran of 43 years on trains running out of Oshawa and in the Belleville area has been working on the Madoc-Belleville mixed for the last seven or eleven years, has coupled his last car and unloaded his last express and baggage on that run. On Sunday he was retired on pension, having reached the age of 65. Harry went out on August 1st, 1890, braking on extra out of Bowmanville on the old G.T.R., he has stayed with railroading ever since. He was known from one end of the road to the other, as a good hard working man, was popular with every person and now when he retires for a well earned rest, he can look back on a fine record in his chosen work.

GOODLY SUM IS REALIZED

Committee Will Stage Dance For Baseball Club

At a special meeting of the financial committee of the Belleville National Baseball Club held at the Y.M.C.A. last night, the financial report of their recent boxing and wrestling show was read. After paying all expenses there was somewhat higher than had been anticipated, the financial report was read by Chairman H. G. Woodley. It was found that the night's entertainment had netted them the sum of $150 profit. The committee wished to thank all those who so kindly donated their services for the evening. They have gone and it was moved and carried that a vote of thanks be extended to them.

The finance committee then started their plans for their annual baseball dance to be held on May 13th. Dr. Jack Marshall will play the chair and the meeting at once got down to business. Ron J. Colling was named as chairman of the ticket committee and Cyril Floyd Martin as chairman of the orchestras and he reported that three local orchestras had donated their services for the night. Everett Stevens Commanders, Al. Adams Commodores and Charlie Goyer's Bon Ton Collegians will all be present and supply the music, gratis, for the evening, which by the way was named as chairman of the special committee and it was finally decided to have one of the largest prizes that ever to be presented in this city at a dance. The special door prize for the evening will be a $50 season's ticket, while other five game season's tickets will be also given as special prizes. Many other fine prizes for dancing and special dances and various prize dances will be given by the baseball committee at their dance this year.

Mr. A. O. Meagher was named as chairman of the advertising committee and will be assisted by Chris Lewis and Al. Sawyer, in his endeavours. A special window display of the winning baseball teams and their various pennants won will be arranged by chairman Russ Wotten and Ed. Woodley also pointed out, that the last baseball dance held in Belleville was one of the largest ever seen locally and then was no reason why the Belleville Baseball Club's second annual dance should not be equally as good.

District Meeting of Odd-Fellows Held in City on Wednesday

The annual district meeting of the Oddfellows was held yesterday afternoon at the Oddfellows hall, Front street. Lodges in the district were all represented, delegates being present from Picton, Wellington, Brighton, Trenton, Frankford and Belleville. The meeting was of a routine nature, the officers elected for the coming year were: D.D.G.M., W. H. Rose, Frankford, Warden, Mr. J. Courtell, Brighton, and Secretary-treasurer, H. D. Ranson, of Belleville.

YOUNG DANCERS WITH MINSTRELS

Deserving special mention and a place by itself is the contribution to the Rotary minstrel entertainment of a number of Belleville juvenile populations who are developing great talent as entertainers. These young people, pupils of Miss Esther Marsh in dancing and deportment, gave a splendid exhibition of grace and beauty in various dance numbers including the following:

Acrobatic Number—Betty Clilbert, Marian Adams, Georgia Scott.

Solo Number—Jean Bateman—Doris Whitten.

Duet—Jack and Betty Gilbert.

Tap Number—Margaret and Mary Forster, Peggy LaRoche, Eva Adams.

MUD CAT FISHERMEN HAVING BONANZA

Mud-cat fishermen of the district have been having a bonanza at the end of the government dock at the south end of the city. For some time past the little dark fish have been congregating in large droves in the bay and have been haunting the vicinity of the docks where the vegetation in the water has lured them. They have not yet come up the river, local fishermen say, and it will be some time before they do. Their spawning time is said

Male Chorus Makes Big Hit Aubrey Pringle is Heard

Rotary's Many Features Please Large Audience Second Night

Oh Boy, what a chorus!

That's an exclamation heard many times in referring to the Rotary Minstrels of 1932, and if any other community, anywhere near the size of Belleville, or twice as big, can dig up a male chorus to compare with that heard in the Rotary Minstrels, they haven't been heard of yet.

Worth the price of admission alone to hear the harmony and volume of those fine voices blended in one glorious symphony of sound.

Wednesday evening the minstrels in the auditorium of the Collegiate before and played to a large and delighted audience.

Came as a surprise and delight that glorious voice of Aubrey Pringle, an extra special feature of this year's offering. Aubrey's voice matches his physique, being robust, full-toned, deep-volumed, and withal melodious and every word distinct. No wonder this splendid singer panicked 'em on Broadway and made the Great White Way brighter with his wonderful voice in the Scarlett Fever, Heralders and in "That Quartette" which set the great theatrical producer Rammerstein, tearing his hair until he had them signed to a long-term contract for his theatres. Few are left of the original Scarlette from Floradora and Aubrey Pringle Canadian representative of "That Quartette" is the only surviving member of that organization which provided a real thrill for Broadway. Mr. Pringle sang with great feeling and expression, "Lonesome Sands of the Desert Grow Cold", and "Ten Thousand Years Ago."

While the chorus and end men did their part to the King's and Queen's taste, and Charlie Dolan, of "Platinum" and "Diamond" masterpiece was clever and capable as usual, Leo Briggs, the ever-faithful, at the piano and Reg. Hitchey, wielding the director's baton, performed wonders. Indicating many careful rehearsals, the fine work of the orchestra was also a strong factor in the success of the production.

"Minstrels Past and Present" was the promise of the program and among the minstrels who took the platform were Ab Wheeler, George Dunnigan and Charlie Dolan, veterans of many minstrel shows— and they looked quite at home amid that scenery which had seen better days in the old Griffin Opera House. Many laughs were made, Ab and Charlie and George will help make Tom Long a delightful old-timer after listening to the show.

Another outstanding feature of the program and one which came in the nature of a surprise was the clever tap dancing by Miss Lillian Marsh, of Montreal. Miss Marsh is a Belleville young lady who has starred in the big cities and is now playing a professional engagement in Montreal. Miss Marsh is clever and showed her dancing was a revelation of the pretty young miss. It is expected that she will go far in the entertainment world.

The dainty pupils of Miss Esther Marsh were a delight unbounded, especially the wee ones who showed grace and acrobatic cleverness of an astonishing nature. Every number of this feature was a gem showing care and cleverness in the training of these pupils by Miss Marsh, and encores were given. Each number were played with skill by Miss Bateman.

One of the big hits of the show was the graceful old-time minuet and character dances presented by the very clever pupils of the Ontario Academy of Dancing by kind permission of Superintendent Pelton. It is understood that the dancers take their time and movements from his music vibrations and it is nothing less than marvelous the cleverness displayed.

Among the many and clever entertainers showing much promise is Everett Stevens, whose "When Hiram Came to Town" was a real gem and presented faultlessly, showing much talent and finishing on Broadway and ending in Belleville. Mr. Hall was a character bit of rare enjoyment.

Special mention could be made of many more, did space permit, but everybody did their bit in good shape and the show was a great success, artistically and financially. Congratulations are due President Tom Webster and the entire Rotary membership as well as those outside the club who helped. As Aubrey Pringle said, it is a pleasure for artists to take part in such a glorious work as helping to provide funds for interned for the care and cure of crippled children.

His Country in Despair German Ex-Crown Prince Begs World's Relief

Analysis Double Problem of Finding Markets and Providing Work

BLAMES TREATY

Blames Versailles Treaty For Economic Distress and Humiliation

Berlin, May 5—Former Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm appealed yesterday for an understanding of "what is at stake in a Germany driven to despair by economic distress and the humiliating limitations on her sovereign rights."

This appeal came in the course of an interview, the first granted by the former heir to the Crown since his return to his Fatherland from exile in Holland, his fortieth birthday is on Friday.

Turning to the subject of the machine age and modern technical advances, the former Crown Prince observed.

"The equilibrium which existed about the time the war began between the standard of our technical attainment and the general conditions of life has been destroyed.

"We are faced with the difficult problem of having to create employment between things to be created by human labor on one hand and technical means on the other. We are faced with the necessity of restoring purchasing power and possibilities for the disposal of goods until translating into practical reality the God-ordained right to a job and bread for a man willing to work."

Has "Special Duty"

"Germany is now given the most zealous for work of any people on earth. Hence, it is conviction that, in this respect, Germany has a special duty to perform. All that is needed is that her people be afforded an opportunity to do so.

"These items of crisis have made obvious how acute are world-wide repercussions when this possibility is denied to Germany. In clinical analysis, the whole civilized world feels the consequences.

The former Prince had started the interview in German, but continued in English, and now he was back again in German, enlivened by undimmed Berlin slang. Displaying great emotion, and with his voice tremendously raised he said:

"That brings me to the terrible material and spiritual distress of my people. After all, it is impossible to discuss the burning questions which so move the entire world without delving into Germany's particular problems.

"When, therefore, you ask me in connection with the events of the day to make a statement, I cannot avoid hitting straight from the shoulder and telling you what is at stake in the Fatherland today."

Sees Evidence of Despair.

"I cannot close my eyes to our appalling misery, the constantly growing despair which everybody who is willing to see and hear encounters on every side, to the evidences of progressive destruction which, day after day, with merciless fatefulness, victimizes both small and large economic undertakings, bar up and development through years of painstaking tenacious labor.

"We say in Germany: 'Misery teaches one to pray.' Quite true. But when misery exceeds certain bounds, when it becomes so great that further increase means madness, it vitiates the character of men who have been robbed of faith in such a moral order of things. Such misery produces despair, and despair knows no bounds.

"Hence with all possible zeal, I call to those within my ken: What has become of our German people what by their own efforts and with unparalleled devotion, held their own for more than four years against a world of enemies, who stood their ground as long as they were exposed by the inferior weapons of soldiers, and until the moment that subterranean hate and lies and men against which we Germans were powerless, had undermined what was exhausted, bled white and starved?

"Claims made about Germany's guilt for the spread of the war have been utterly and have, besides, long been disproved.

Regina, May 5—"Thank you from the very bottom of my heart and God bless you."

With these words, Viscount Byng of Vimy, prevented from making an address through the orders of his medical advisers, expressed his appreciation to members of the United Service Institution of Regina yesterday at the conclusion of the function in his honor.

SUDBURY EDITOR SPIRITED AWAY

Arvo Vaara and Aide Arrested in Raid, Departed in Auto

Sudbury, May 5—Arvo Vaara, editor of the Finnish Daily Vapaus, and Martin Parker, translator, arrested in a Royal Canadian Mounted Police raid yesterday on the newspaper's office, were loaded into an automobile last night and rushed out of town in a southerly direction. Five plainclothes detectives guarded them.

The men were taken from the Northern Ontario Building, where they had been under guard of Mounted Police, following the raid on Vapaus, described as a Communist newspaper.

Arrest of the two men followed Sunday's riot in which alleged Communists numbering about 500 were attacked by citizens after they refused to carry the Union Jack alongside the Red flag at the head of a parade as ordered by local police. Eighteen persons were arrested on Sunday.

Vaara has been editor of Vapaus for some years. In 1928 he was arrested for publishing an editorial which expressed the hope that King George, then ill of pneumonia, might not recover and that a Communist Government might be established in Great Britain. He was convicted of sedition and sentenced to six months in jail with a fine of $1,000.

74 ARRESTED AT ROUYN QUE.

Police | Surprise | Secret Meeting—Prisoner Alleged Reds

ROUYN Que., May 5.—(CP)—As an aftermath to rioting on the streets here on Sunday, the local police force, augmented by members of Provincial and Royal Canadian Mounted Police, yesterday staged a secret meeting, placing 74 persons under arrest.

Since Sunday the police had been combing the foreign quarters of Rouyn and the nearby town of Noranda for participants in the May day riot, which was the result in the brief history of this mining community. The majority of those arrested were employees of a local smelter.

The riot from which resulted the arrests occurred Sunday afternoon when an alleged Communist gathering resisted police orders to disperse quietly. Over half an hour of street battling occurred during which a number of persons were injured, and a fire hose, intended for use to drive back the crowd of 200 men out by a mob action, and the Police, together with special constables eventually cleared the streets and restored order.

Marooned Man Own Surgeon Corrects Abdominal Peril

Operating Instruments Jack Knife, Darning Needle, Wire

SYDNEY, N.S., May 5.—(CP)—Marooned on stormswept Scatari Island, Sterrahs recently performed on himself an operation which doctors pronounced "as good as could have been done in a hospital."

Details of the case will be featured in the next issue of the Nova Scotia Medical Society Bulletin. According to the story, Sterrahs, fisherman, alone in his island cabin was threatened with death by an abdominal condition that came upon him without warning.

Without any previous knowledge of the simplest surgery, never having seen an operation, and guided only by faintly delusions misty-remembered with boats and gasoline engines, he successfully relieved the condition.

His instruments consisted of a sharp jack-knife, a darning needle, a blunt steel carning needle and a length of galvanized wire taken from an old tin pail. Had he known the operation involved the risk of severing arteries and causing blood-poisoning perhaps his hand might not have been so steady.

He was stricken at night, and the next morning, by candle-light for the operation was by lying on his back on the floor in front of flickering wood fire and working in that position.

MURDER PLOT SOON FOILED

Plan Was For Gunman to Kill Both President and Premier

Madrid, May 5.—(CP)—A plot to assassinate President Niceto Alcala Zamora and Premier Manuel Azana, after which a right-wing (presumably monarchistic) Government would seize power, was disclosed last night with the arrest of a lawyer and 4 retired military officer.

The lawyer, Pere Aranes, and the militarist, Joaquil Oyarabal, were believed to be mere intermediaries in the plot, which was described as an amazing scheme providing for carefully timed attack by gunmen.

The plotters were said to have attempted to arrange for the assassination of Alcala Zamora during his recent trip to Valencia. Then it was planned to kill the premier when he appeared at the state funeral which would have been held for the President.

With both of the powerful Republican Government leaders dead, the plotters were prepared to put a new Government of right-wing elements into power, according to one witness.

Oyarzabal was quoted as saying the plotters gave one individual some 5,000 pesetas (about 420) and instructed him to go to Valencia and hire gunmen to assassinate Alcala Zamora.

OLD CHICORA'S LAST DAYS

BROCKVILLE, May 5.—A vessel with a history arrived in port yesterday in the barge Warrenko, which reached here in tow of the tug Salvage Prince, with a cargo of 750 tons of anthracite from Cevego, N.Y. The Warrenko was built at Liverpool, England, in 1864 for use as a blockade runner in the American Civil War, and afterwards went to Lake Ontario, where she became the Chicora, in passenger service between Toronto and Niagara. Wrecked, she was recovered, and is now ending her days as a coal barge. Death in a probably one of the oldest vessels in service on Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence.

R.C.M.P. and Troops On Qui Vive at Yorkton Trial of Verigin

Saskatoon, May 5—(CP)—Tense excitement prevailed in the Langham and Asquith districts near here last night, following the burning of one school and threats to burn another, Mrs. L. Purdy, teacher of the school at Eagle Creek, her baby daughter and a servant narrowly escaped death when the school was burned early today.

A civilian guard which mounted duty at Epp School, near Langham 20 miles away, forestalled what is believed to have been a plot to destroy the building. Last night they fired four shots at three suspicious characters who were seen prowling about the school The guard is still on duty.

Awakened by the barking of a dog Mrs. Purdy who had her living quarters over the school but barely time to awaken her hired girl, grab her baby and escape in night attire. The ground floor of the building had been saturated with oil and the blaze started in the porch.

Mounting of the guard at the Epp School followed a warning from the Royal Canadian Mounted Police detachment at Saskatoon.

Guards Scare Attackers

Regina, May 5—(CP)— Booming guns in the hands of two youthful guards foiled a second attempt to burn schools in Saskatchewan last night according to information in the possession of Royal Canadian Mounted Police. One school was destroyed.

Fourteen young men, placed inside the building to guard the school at Epp, located in the Doukhobor district west and south of Saskatoon, were over-anxious when they saw two men crawling toward the schoolhouse in the semi-darkness.

The youthful guard forgot their resolve to make a capture and opened fire. The marauders disappeared quickly and it is not believed any wounds were inflicted.

Troops at Yorkton

Yorkton, Sask., May 5—(CP) — Hundreds of Doukhobors crowded the court house here yesterday when their leader, Peter Verigin went on trial before Mr. Justice D. MacLean and a jury for perjury More than 1,000 of Verigin's followers from Saskatchewan and Alberta colonies came here for the trial.

Verigin faces four perjury charges arising out of a civil action taken against him last Fall by George P. Chutskoff, a Doukhobor. Chutskoff, charged with perjury by Verigin, was acquitted yesterday.

Royal Canadian Mounting Police and troops of the Yorkton Regiment and special town police were ready should disturbances occur.

GOOD NEWS FROM WEST

The Canadian Pacific Railway report on crop conditions in Western Canada shows that the outlook has not been better for three years than it is this spring, which leads some to believe that the dry cycle has ended. A crop of four to five hundred million bushels is expected under fair conditions.

This statement supplements reports which have come out in the past few days from other sources which have been collecting data in respect to the crop. There is general unanimity of belief in a large crop this year.

Western Canada has been hard hit for some years and reports which have worked upon the sympathies have come out of the west and led to generous aid sent from Eastern Canada. Despite its handicaps the west has hung on grimly as might be expected and it now appears as if it is about to show its vitality.

This part of Western Canada is an inspiring one in these days when inspiring news is rather scarce, as the world hang-over of wheat has declined an increase in price is anticipated over last year. Interest attaches to the coming Imperial Conference which is expected to throw new life into empire trade. It is freely felt that there can be no recovery before the farmer sets the money in which and he has to get it before it will start. That the bright hopes of Western Canada will not be disappointed is the wish of Canadians everywhere who realize that a burden the west has been carrying upon its shoulders for some years, and how much of the past prosperity of this Dominion is due to the far-flung prairie lands.

THOSE NEW TAXES

The taxes are on in full force. Some there are which can be borne with a determination though they are what are called nuisances. They are bearing them determined to see the question through.

Some think taxpayers there is opposition to certain taxes as the cheque tax. Montreal Star remarks "Just as we are teaching a man to use cheques we put an increased tax on them. . . . We should not forget that it is against the system of the better development of our business methods. It is the picky and the cumbrous old method of carrying around a fat pocketbook bulging temptingly with bank bills some one of those who were just thinking of imitating big business and writing cheques."

The Star goes on "When we tax strong drink and tobacco we are helping the morals of the community. When we tax effeminate luxuries, we are certainly doing no harm, for many of them are worth going to be taxed. But when we tax an instrument of business like the telephone and the telegraph we are putting a burden on trade and commerce that may be impossible to raise our revenue without doing this."

It is pointed out that those who advocate removal of these taxes must recommend some other source of taxation which will provide the revenue. But as the Star points out such taxes render the community less capable of paying taxes.

Yet in spite of this economic attitude toward these taxes, there seems little opposition to the imposts, though evidently there will be some effort to avoid their payment.

A GOOD PLACE

Doubtless there are those who have felt for Al Capone but they few are as compared with the many millions who feel that behind the fortress of prohibition walls is the most effective shot at gangdom and that crowd which does not respect the laws whether in regard to income tax or other statutes.

His recent plea for an opportunity to get out to aid in the quest for the Lindbergh baby child is believed to be typical of the mentality of the gang who think that freedom from prison can be bought at that or any price. What does Al Capone think of the law? This poor effort of his shows what he thought of justice.

Most people say, Let Capone stay in penitentiary the full length of time hard his followers will not feel their old enthusiasm with their avowed chief a convict behind iron bars.

SEE BENEFITS TO TRADES

It is pointed out by those who favor the proposal of Alderman White to make a change in the assessment as relating to buildings begun this year, the new construction be not assessed for tax purposes until two years from the commencement assessment on the land as improved to remain as at the time of the beginning of construction, that this measure would, by encouraging citizens to build, stimulate the lumber, brick and other trades besides taking up a good bit of the slack in employment at the present time.

The cost of construction is in a large measure the cost of labor, everyone knows, a proof that if there is any building of account at all, money will start to flow among the workers.

THE TURNING TIDE

By Aline Michaelis

There is enchantment in the turning tide,
When sudden silence lies on land and sea
As crash and boom of mounting waves subside,
There is an instant like eternity
Between the mighty pounding on the shore
Where giant waves dash in, unhindered, free,
And the reluctant, muffled, sullen roar
With which they turn upto the deep again
Withdrawn by leash invisible once more.
There comes a pause in ocean's vast refrain,
And on the air a stillness far and wide,
As though in Nature every force must wane,
There is strange music in the turning tide,
That instant when it seems the world has died!

EX-MAYOR WALMSLEY reading in this g.f.j. in the news of yesterday column in which reference is made to a move in the council for more and better lights, that being the day of coal oil lamp illumination, a long step from the candles of the early settlers, recalls the dark days of yesteryear when the Lamplighter made his rounds in the gloaming and started the shadows flickering about the corner lamp-posts. Mr. Walmsley's recollection of the dim lights of long ago is flavored with a sense of appreciation at the great advance in illumination since that time, of the great power station and electric current distributing system by which the entire city can be illuminated in an instant, the switch which illuminates any part of the house by merely touching a button, doing away with scratching matches and fumbling hot chimneys, also the many other uses to which electric current can be put. Ex-Mayor Walmsley and other Bulletin of Belleville as it is, will also remember with pleasure of the boy gangs who used to congregate about the street lamp-posts o'nights, make whoopee and make life miserable for the lamplighter by heaving occasionally a rock through the glass part of the street lamp.

MAY DAY TROUBLES

Communists in Canada are few in numbers and utterly impotent. This is a mistake often when they run for office and appeal for votes. It is a mistake to fasten the Red label on the thousands of unemployed who paraded or tried to parade on May Day in several Canadian cities because they had nothing else to do. It is true there are a few communists, no doubt, but they got more publicity than they deserved. There was no trouble in Vancouver although it had been announced the Reds there had stolen tons of explosives and that they were preparing for wild attempts at destruction. Wisely the demonstrators were allowed to parade and talk, and the day passed off peacefully. That was the sensible way to handle the situation.—London Advertiser.

"WATERING" STOCK

The Prime Minister, amidst his multitudinous duties, took occasion yesterday to announce that he intended, as soon as the House was able, to take action against the practice of "watering stock" and the sale in the form of a gullible public. This is certainly a sort of action that a responsible Government should take. It would clean out the causes of mischief, even when they are highly technical and obscure. Effective legislation is the best cure to them.

All sorts of plausible excuses are offered for "watering" stock. It is contended, for example, that a company has a right to decide into how many shares the title to its property or properties shall be divided. This does not even pretend to increase the value of the property. It only decreases the value of the individual shares. That is, if a company's thousand shares sell at a hundred dollars each, the whole business is it if it divides these shares into two thousand and so decrease the single share to fifty dollars?—Montreal Star.

WHERE ARITHMETIC IS ESSENTIAL

It is probably true that arithmetic in the schools, as one critic asserts, discourages many boys and many branches having no practical value in after life and of only doubtful "disciplinary" value. But when he goes on to include among the "dry as dust" items of intricate textbooks the subject of "arithmetical puzzles" he is certainly far critic is in error. What the world needs at all times, but particularly now, is a sense of proportion, a sense of the practical.

About percentage, for instance, one finds astonishing ignorance in the most unexpected places. Published articles on the economic situation will speak of a decline of 100 per cent in employment or in foreign trade, which, literally, would mean the complete disappearance of employment. Or that to double anything is to increase it double the size. To cut anything in half, which is to reduce it to nothing at the present case, is to reduce it 50 per cent.

The mad days of three years ago and the "new era" talk that came through now are both in large measure attributable to a state of mind which has parted company with every rule of arithmetic to enter a curved-world in which "unlimited ratios and proportions— New York Times.

VICISSITUDES OF SHOPPING

Most women take pleasure in shopping. Most shops are eager to sell and to make shopping agreeable. Yet in the May American Mercury Ernest Elmo Calkins in "The Dreadful Chore of Buying" describes the difficulties with clerks and floor walkers. And, as the author points out, England, apparently does not belong to that small group of countries which is at more than 10c or three things of a kind, so it makes choosing so difficult.

She must have had a series of extraordinarily unfortunate experiences. When she tried to buy collar buttons for her husband in a Regent store, she made four or five fruitless journeys, from one counter to another, and finally got one with three in a box. Then she went across on her way home. When she asked for a pocketbook for a boy, asking for something in blue, and asking for not more than $25, a clerk insisted on showing leather goods and reds, or the desired colors in higher-priced goods. The clerk who was pestered by no less than eight floor walkers from one cleaning establishment soliciting her business.

The article suggests that merchandisers are so taken up with their own affairs that they fail to demand curves, buying and selling psychology, expert salesmanship, &c., that they have forgotten sympathetic consideration for the buyer's needs. Its advises courtesy, helpfulness and a sincere desire to please. Most shops try to secure in their salespeople just "what salespeople are."

APPENDICITIS SHOULD NOT BE NEGLECTED

Symptoms of Trouble Which Ought Not To Be Disregarded

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

LOUIS E. BISCH

When a person gets a sharp pain in the abdomen, about the first thing he thinks of is appendicitis, but when the pain is in the abdomen it means trouble with the appendix. And here I should remember, that a person may have appendix cases than formerly, because of more expert diagnoses on the part of attending physicians, more cases are recognized.

Then, in understanding the importance of the appendix in intestinal disorders belongs to American doctors, and nowadays these surgeons are extremely skilled in removing troublesome appendixes. This can often be done in an incredibly short time, sometimes under a local anaesthetic, without the use of chloroform or ether.

The appendix is attached to the lower end of a part of the large intestine, called the caecum. It is a very narrow tube, about the size of a lead pencil, and from two to three inches long, occasionally much longer. Since the waste products of indigestion on their way to the colon and rectum pass by the appendix, it is supposed it is plain that such products may become lodged there. Then the appendix may become inflamed as its walls become thick, pus formations occurs, and fairly frequently, since the appendix is a blind sac, closed at its lower end, a fecal concretion inside of it can form pus, swell the appendix and even burst it into a typical abscess Appendicitis means "itis" suffix meaning inflammation in medical parlance—usually reveals itself by pain and sharp tenderness on at intervals in the region of the appendix which, as already mentioned, is in the lower right abdomen. The pain usually in spasms, often extends down the right leg. The abdomen may also be distended and even the appendix, and there may be pain in passing urine. Nausea and vomiting.

Fever usually accompanies an attack but it may not be high, perhaps only 101 or 102 degrees Fahrenheit. And there is often nausea and vomiting.

In many cases wherethe inflammation is not severe the attack will yield to the ice bag and the starvation diet. Then in a few weeks, months or even years, until another attack comes on. There are surgeons, therefore, who argue that an inflamed appendix must always be removed at once and therefore, the sooner the better.

Appendicitis is probably the more prevalent among young people than among middle-aged or old, and the sexes are about equally susceptible.

If you suspect that pain in the abdomen, no matter how rarely, and especially if it is in the lower right side, you should better see a physician in whom you have confidence and find out whether it is a chronic appendix or not. If it is, follow his advice as to having it removed.

Remember that pain may be due to indigestion or faulty elimination. Indigestion with dark rain falls Minding others, Evidently, out of the darkness overflowing with sorrow, Into the world flash through the air, and soon is the earth and sky, Then the

BRAVES MOVE INTO WEST FOR FIRST SERIES

Will Be Able to Prove Whether They Can Take it

SWITCH DAY

Indians Strengthen Hold On Second Place Defeating Browns

BY GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Writer)

Having won their spurs in the East, Bill McKechnie's Boston Braves invaded the western strongholds of the National league today for a whitewind two weeks' campaign that will prove definitely whether they can "take it."

In that time the current leaders will meet all four western members, including their closest rivals, the Chicago Cubs, and the champion St. Louis Cardinals, who at last have righted themselves and are looking for trouble. If the Braves manage to hold their own in the company, somebody will have to take them very seriously.

Recent history is all against the Bostons, however. They last made similarly impressive start a season ago, only to falter, while rounding second.

They open their fight for vindication today against the Cincinnati Reds, while the Phillies engage Pittsburgh, the Giants meet Brooklyn, St. Louis and the Brooklyn Dodgers hope for the best at Cincinnati.

In their parades at sectional neighbors yesterday, the Braves flattened the Giants, 9 to 1, behind Betts, the veteran "rookie", turned in his first victory of the season, while he held the slugging Phils to four hits. "Dizzy" Dethridge knocked across all three Boston runs with a home run and two singles.

Cards Move up

The Cardinals showed up into the first division with their second straight shutout over Cincinnati, 1 to 0. Paul Derringer turned the fourth Card hurler to pitch brilliant ball in as many days, when he limited the Reds to six hits, three of them by Lonnie Frankland.

The youngster, Lonnie Warneke, recorded his fourth victory at the Chicago expense of Pittsburgh, 4 to 1. He scattered six hits and received noble support, while the Pirate defense cracked at crucial moments behind Larry French.

Brooklyn and New York spent the day traveling west, borne up by the comforting thought they scarcely can do worse where they are going than where they came from.

American League

Cleveland's Indians, sharing second place and the leadership of the western division with the Detroit Tigers, defeated the Browns 8 to 3 on the eve of their first visit to the seaboard. It was their tenth victory in their last eleven starts as they make their first eastern stand against the Athletics today at Shibe Park.

John Stone's home run in the seventh inning with two on enabled the Detroit Tigers to come from behind and beat the Chicago White Sox 8 to 7. Stanley Harris' troupe had to rally in third place opening against the Yankees tomorrow.

The four eastern clubs were unscheduled but the Yanks sharpened up their batting eye in a 14 to 3 exhibition victory over Bridgeport of the Eastern League.

Yesterday's Stars

John Stone, Tigers—His seventh inning home run with two aboard beat Chicago 8 to 7.

Flint Rhem and Gus Mancuso, Cardinals—Their pitching and hitting featured shutout victory over the Reds.

Huck Betts, Braves—Pitched his third straight win, a shutout over the Phillies with four hits.

Worthington, Braves—Hit a home run and two singles to drive in all three Boston runs.

Lonnie Warneke, Cubs—Let the Pirates down with six scattered hits to win 4 to 1.

Judging by the skeletons of prehistoric man, he differed little in stature from modern man.

Boxing and wrestling seem to be coming into their own in Eastern Ontario this season. We were recipient of a letter from the Canadian Locomotive Company's Athletic Club in Kingston yesterday to the effect that they are staging a series of wrestling and boxing bouts, under the jurisdiction of the Ontario Amateur Athletic Association, in the Limestone City on May 26th and 27th. The bouts are for the amateur championship of Eastern Ontario and participants will be represented from as far west as Belleville and as far east as Brockville and north as far as Renfrew. Applications are pouring in to the secretary's office from all intermediate points already.

The letter which we received was to the effect that any Belleville boxer or wrestler in the vicinity, wishing to enter these bouts should do so at once as possible due to the fact that the committee in charge of the series wish to make the drawings for the bouts next week. Boxers and wrestlers of every weight from 72 lbs. to the heavyweight division are included on the card to be presented. Mr. O. O. Olsen of Kingston is in charge of the championship bouts that are to be staged.

These above dates may conflict somewhat with the proposed bouts for May bouts that are to be staged in Belleville. Although nothing authentic has been noted as to the identity of the card, we are informed that a local three of last Monday night's bout will be represented. Wamsley the lad three bouts of the night. It might be well to stage more boxing bouts and only include about three wrestling tilts this time.

Following Monday night's bouts the Preferred Examiner has the Dundas Sports attempted to add:

Local boys who took part in the Belleville boxing bouts last night didn't do so well. Two won and lost, and two won and all lost—tragic as it may seem. Nel Minicola had to quit when a bad cut over his eye was re-opened. Jack Lee, Gen. Sparks didn't have enough condition to keep up his speed in boxing ways, so he lost. Baz Jack Gardner and Art Hunter both won decisions, but no beauty, but were so badly robbed by the judges that the crowd booed the decisions in a big way, and Jack Gardner left with the local boxers as they left the ring."

Manager Walt Gerow and Captain "Frenzy" Mills, of the Nationals, were up at the Exhibition Park yesterday looking over the possibilities of the local senior baseball team for the season. They both re-marked that the grounds are not fit to even limber up their arms on as yet, but they were of the opinion that if the rain demands dried up some in the next three or four days that they will be able to call a practice early next week. It is hoped that it is necessary for ball players it is expected that a practice game will be seen at spring training this season than has ever been noticed in the history of the "Nats". Manager Gerow is also hoping that the local three are plenty of young "ball tossers" in the city and that the community and he intends to get behind them and their golden opportunity this season.

When the Kingston horsemen were at Belleville the other day we heard that their great pacer Toll Gate was being brought here during the spring. At the Napanee track on May 24th and 25th and conditions it is too bad that Canada's great pacer, Toll Gate, was not brought to the city where there are no less than three tracks within hours of training at the present time. We understand that Toll Gate "has had to do considerable training on the county roads adjacent to Napanee. Such would not have been the case had the pacer been brought here, we would suggest. Logic Bennett of Port Hope is "chicked pink" over the fact that he brought his stable to Belleville. The Payette Stable eventually moved to New Hamburg however, due to the fact that there is to be a harness meet in that town on the 24th. Most of the Payette horses will be in Belleville for the June 1st meet, however.

The National Maids girls' softball league is the first team to start spring training when they held their initial practice at the Bayside Public School grounds on Tuesday night. Based on all last year's players a number of new faces were seen on the field and their next practice will be called for Friday night on the same field.

ORIOLES COME AT FAST PACE

Put Skids Under Bisons and Have Won 8 of Last 10 Games

(By the Associated Press)

The Baltimore Orioles appear in a fair way to overshadow all the sensational early season work of the Buffalo Bisons, whom they have supplanted in second place in the International League.

Buffalo rose to the top by winning 10 of its first 13 games but has skidded back just as rapidly in the past week by losing five out of six. Baltimore, hitting hard from the start, got off badly by losing its first series to the Bisons and did not hit its winning stride until the season was ten days old.

Since then, the Orioles have slugged their way up at a terrific pace, winning eight out of their last ten games, and yesterday they dislodged Buffalo from second place in the standing by trouncing the Bisons for the second straight time, 10 to 6. Russ Aristi did the days job of home run hitting for the Orioles, who have mashed homers in only three games by clouting his ninth and tenth of the season, and he hit a double and a single, drove in four runs, stole a base and fielded remarkably.

Royals and Steelers Coming

The Montreal Royals and Jersey City Steelers, who also have been playing some amazing ball in the past few days, turned in victories in yesterday's other two games. The league leading Newark Bears won't kept ville by cold weather at Toronto.

Montreal which gets its results through pitching, turned on Reading for 3 to 1, for its fifth straight victory and tied the defeated Rochester Royals for fourth place in the standing. Walter Brown was the sixth successful Royal pitcher to go the full route. He gave ten hits but kept them scattered, while Montreal bunched its eight blows with as many passes. It was the Key's ninth straight defeat.

Jersey City, recently come to life with the addition of their players and with the old ones scrapping for their jobs, put its second afternoon of heavy hitting against Rochester and won, 9 to 4. The Skeels collected 16 hits off four pitchers and scored in every inning after the first. Joe Moore and Rud Clancy set the pace, accounting for five doubles and two singles between them.

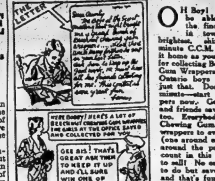
Painful Piles



Go Quick—No Cutting—No Salve

It takes only one bottle of Dr. J. S. Leonhardt's prescription — HEM-ROID—to end itching, bleeding, protruding piles. This internal remedy acts quickly even in old, chronic cases. HEM-ROID succeeds because it heals and restores affected tissue and removes blood congestion in the lower bowel, the cause of piles. Only an internal medicine can do this, that's why salves and cutting fail. H. McKeown's Drug Store says HEM-ROID Tablets must end your misery or money back.

Ki-Y League

For the purpose of organizing for the 1932 season the various leads in the Ki-Y leagues will meet at the Y.M.C.A. on Friday evening at 8 p.m. This league sponsored by both hard and softball teams for the past three or four years has gained considerable prestige about town. The loop is sponsored by the Y.M.C.A. and the local Kiwanis club who work in conjunction making the league the success, that it has been in past years.

All prospective teams are asked to have a representative at the meeting, where the necessary application forms for players will be available. As in former years teams will be limited to 15 players with all players with May 16th being the final day upon which players may be signed by any club in the local league.

Age limits of the various teams will remain unchanged with the hardball ages as follows:

Juniors 12 years and under.
Midget 15 years and under.
Intermediate 18 years and under.
Softball:
Juniors 17 years and under.
Midget 18 years and under.
Juvenile 19 years and under.

Due to the fact that Daylight Saving will not be in force all games will have to commence at 6.30 p.m. instead of at 7 p.m. as formerly in the past.

Only those teams who turn in their years' application promptly will be included, when the schedules are drawn.

WANDERING BOYS UPON FREIGHTER

Coderich, May 5.—The trail of two 16-year-old Toronto youths, Charles Hamilton and Robert Grieve, was temporarily lost here Tuesday when the former's parents left by motor for Rudolph Manfred, McAlpine street, Toronto, arrived here yesterday. It is known that the wander-lust lads had shipped aboard a grain elevator on the grain freighter Hagarty, bound for the head of the lakes, but their departure returning home to await developments.

The boys told me they were seventeen years of age and they looked it," said Acting-Chief Constable Ross. "They said they were tired hanging around Toronto, living off their parents, so they had decided to tough it for a while."

75TH BIRTHDAY IS CELEBRATED

Friends Arrange Surprise Party Honoring Mr. Mark Tucker

On Tuesday evening a very pleasant event took place at the home of Mr. Mark Tucker, Trent Road, when a number of his friends and neighbors arranged a surprise party in his honor, complimenting him on the occasion of his seventy-fifth birthday. Guests were present from Rawdon, Sidney, Belleville and Toronto and spent an interval in evening in music and readings.

During the evening the following address was read and Mr. Tucker was presented with a smar; sweater coat by his friends.

Belleville, May 3rd, 1932.

Dear Mr. Tucker:

"We a few of your many friends felt we could not let this important anniversary pass without expressing to you our sincere congratulations and best wishes that you may enjoy many years yet among us.

Seventy-five years of health and strength to enjoy your home, and the association of your friends. We wish you a happy birthday.

"In countless ways God has richly blessed your long and useful life. In your home wife is seen one of God's greatest gifts to man. You have been blessed with many friends whose love and friendship you have experienced both in joy and in sorrow. The church has been, and still, is a place which is very near to your heart and life. Those are among the blessings which have followed you all the days of your life.

"May the same loving Providence spare you both to share each other's joys and bear each other's burdens. We ask you to accept this token of our love, not for its intrinsic value, but because of the high esteem and love we have for you.

"Signed on behalf of friends."

LUMBER TRADE THREATENED

Desperate Attempt to Balance U. S. Budget Affects Canada

Washington, May 5—Desperately attempting to get the necessary funds to balance the United States budget, the Senate Finance Committee yesterday yielded to the demands of special interests for import taxes on lumber, copper, coal, oil and gasoline. A Canadian export trade, worth many million dollars a year, is definitely threatened.

The committee voted the following duties:

Lumber—Increased from $1 to $3 per board feet.

Copper—four cents a pound.

Coal—Two dollars a ton.

Oil—one-half cent a gallon.

Gasoline—two and one-half cents a gallon.

The proposed tariffs would eliminate an export trade roughly estimated for 1931 as follows: Lumber, $15,000,000; copper, $12,500,000; coal, $700,000. Their effect would be felt from coast to coast in Canada. Copper comes from British Columbia, Ontario and Quebec; coal from the Prairie provinces, and lumber from British Columbia and the Maritime provinces.

SOCIAL EVENING AT MOIRA LODGE

No Speaker But All Members Have Enjoyable Time

Due to the various other counter attractions about town last night the officers of Moira Lodge, No. 11, A.F. & A.M., did not engage a special speaker for their regular monthly meeting of May, although a number of the brothers were present at the meeting, the night was spent in a rather social gathering in the banquet hall following the lodge work on the floor.

Considerable work was accomplished by the officers before they adjourned to the banquet hall however. The evening's entertainment in the banquet hall consisted of the usual toasts and the remainder of the night was spent in telling humorous stories, which all present participated. Wor. Bro. W. M. Barlow occupied the chair for the evening and Rt. Wor. Bro. John Maidens was a visitor and helped confer the degree work during the evening's procedure.

Tonight at the Masonic Temple, Rt. Wor. Bro. John Maidens, D.D.G.M. of Prince Edward District No. 13, will make his official visit of the year to The Belleville Lodge No. 128. This is the District Deputy's last official visit in the district before the meeting of Grand Lodge, this summer and a large turnout is expected.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Putting The Figure in Khaki

To be uniformly plump or to be thin from the top of the head down to the little pig that cried all the way home is easy enough. One eats and gets fat. Or one lives on nothing and slivers down to the bone. But this new shape, decreed by those who design draperies to put upon the female form divine, is something entirely different. It is what the handsome girl should be. It is a combination of curves and slenderness, curves at the right places, slim-in-ness where nature intended. And you don't get that anatomical glory just by eating.

First, there is the slender neck. A bit of fat on the neck is the fore runner of necklace lines, gullies scooting round, chasing each other. The slender neck must be set upon shoulders which might almost be called manly, certainly they must be broad enough to carry the ample and spring tailored suit. The chest shall be no hollowed structure, but a fine husky lung drum, such as the grand opera star fills with song and warbles out. A chest curving in the wrong direction is, right now, a more heinous crime than a witch's wart on the long nose.

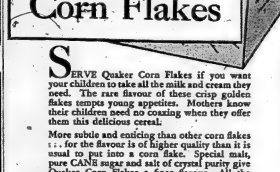
The waist! Ah! Hair an armful, that's all. The kind that attracts a man's attention, the aspiring waist line. From the lower rib there is a little cut-in which continues to the exact line of the equator, then slides gently, gracefully flowing into slim hips.

The thigh diminishes gradually to the knee, it doesn't pull out past the body as some thighs do, in a bunch, but achieves a real decline. On the lower legs there must be developed calves. Lack of calves put legs in the pipestem class. And by the way, there's an easy way to get human legs and they don't never use an elevator, run up stairs, on the floor, fast!

With proper exercise, the body will assume these proportions, with a nice flat young tumtum thrown in for good measure. Slack abdominal muscles ruin an otherwise perfect figurette. Even the slightest suggestion of a fat shelf below the waistline takes the snap out of the shape, no matter if a girl has just turne dsixteen and bears the face of an adolescent angel. Too many young gals these days have sloppy figures. Deplorable, we say. And due to nothing on earth but plain laziness. Muscles were meant to work. If they dont work they do a tissue flop, and the beauty jig is up.

Ten minutes of the following exercise night and morning—we don't expect the lazy little louts to even try it, but hope they will—will prove good fun and will do a lot toward creating the slender roundedness that is demanded now by the stern arbi ter of beauty and fashion.

Stand erect, right hand on table for support; swing the left leg forward high, swing it with a backward kick, keeping the body right. Stand with left hand on table and frisk right leg. Lie on the back on the floor, left leg goes slowly, lower them slowly. Watch out or you'll drop them suddenly and ruin your heels.



Lastly stand erect, hands on hips, lift chest, take long breath through the nostrils, exhale with a whistling sound. Go to it, and good luck.

GRAIN STORAGE

This is the time of the year when it becomes important to the farmer to know, fairly accurately the quantities of grain he has available for seed or other use. A rule for determining the quantity of grain in bin, which proves very reliable, is supplied by the division of field husbandry of the Dominion experimental farms. To estimate the amount of grain in a bin multiply the length by the width by the height of the grain in the bin to determine the capacity in cubic feet and then divide this sum by 1 1-4, which will give the contents in bushels. Care must be taken to see that the grain is leveled off to ensure accurate measurement.

S. overnments came back strongly om yesterday's setback. In the ill considerable pressure on the United States dollar in the foreign exchange markets, but it showed some further signs of lifting.

STOCK MARKET OPENED DULL

Less Resistance on the Downside Than on Advance

Toronto, May 5—Toronto Stock Exchange Market opened dull and with no improvement in the tone from the close of yesterday morning. Stocks moved slowly and within narrow limits. Sales did not increase to any interminglad, though there was less resistance on the downside than on the advance.

B. A. Oil was slightly easier at 8¾, but otherwise there was no change in this group. Most of the base stocks still were soft and Ford of Canada and Bell Telephone retired on their previous levels. Nickels and preferred Massey Harris were unchanged, the latter at 27 and Montreal Power and Brazilian made small gains and Page Hersey Tubes firmed ½ point to 43.

FIRMER PRICE ACTION NOTED

Movement Among Cheaper Issues Confined and Aimless

Toronto, May 5—Quiet trading and firmer price action on the Standard Stock Exchange this afternoon marked the forenoon today reflecting a firmer tone in industrial boards. Higher-priced stocks were practically inactive and no movements among cheaper issues were confined and aimless.

Teck Hughes, Hollinger and Wright-Hargreaves were unchanged from last night, when taken at noon. International Nickel showed a slight gain at $5.85 and Noranda was off a few cents at $12.50. Eldorado firmed a couple to $1.98 and Castle-Trethewey a fraction.

TROUT FISHING REPORTED GOOD

Many Now Are Returning From North With Heavy Creels

Trout fishermen, who have been taking the occasional day off within the past week or so in pursuit of their favorite sport in the streams of the back country have been reporting very favourable catches recently, and some tall tales have been filtering back of fish that were caught and others that got away. The one which were lucky enough to flip off their hooks before they took, of course the largest, but outside of these some of the specimens which have been observed were fine examples of the speckled trout, of good proof, according to your fancy dictates.

Local fly merchant Jan Pront street created a furore in the city yesterday, when he came back from banks of Kean Creek, near Bancroft, with a string of catching brook trout weighing two and one half pounds. Further than that he substantiated his claim with the fish he caught. He brought them out and displayed them proudly on the counter. There they were the smallest weighed two pounds, the other, the largest, three and one half pounds. The news spread. One old time fisherman came in, took one look and then informed the rest of the anxious anglers: "Humph.....take trout."

The largest size brook trout yet to be reported this year circulated well around the one pound mark.

WRATHSTAYED IN CASES OF TWO SENATORS

Meighen Announces No Further Action in View of Illness

PROBE ENDS.

Brief Statement in Senate Spells Finis of Beauharnois Scandal

Ottawa, May 5—Senator Andrew Haydon's ill health yesterday interverned to save him from the expulsion sentence which surely awaited him in the Senate.

Announcing that there would be no further action, after the ailing 66-year-old organizer of the Canadian Legion, Arthur Meighen, Government leader in the Senate, wrote finis this afternoon to the sensational history of Canada's greatest political scandal, the Beauharnois.

A tense stillness settled on the Senate red chamber as Senator Meighen rose shortly after the opening of yesterday's sitting to make his brief announcement. His speech took scarcely a minute to deliver, but in it the history of the Beauharnois issue off the front page and relegated it to the archive obscurity in which the great power enterprise proceeded before the investigation began, their successful crusade for an investigation had been launched.

Rumors had been rife that action would be taken against Senator Haydon so that the Government leader's clear conviction that "he would not be justified in considering further action" came as something of a surprise to the crowded Senate galleries. It meant that the Senate would escape a trial with the Beauharnois case, both of whose principals had been found guilty of contempt.

McDougall's Action

McDougall's action terminated his appreciation of Dr. Wilfrid Laurier McDougall's action in the matter but moderation last additional point he made and added that he remarked that he considered the terms of the searing letter of censure "adequate." Moderation. Regarding Senator Donat Raymond, the third of the three Beauharnois scandalists, Senator Meighen said he never had felt further action would be warranted.

Senator Meighen's tribute drops a note of political picture, possibly the Senate itself shares the same feeling for Senator Haydon as brief spell of prominence during the past few years. It was Senator Meighen's well as rather funny the way the Senate gallery and Senator Meighen's last Senator Meighen finished his speech.

The text of Senator Meighen's speech follows:

"In view of the resignation submitted to this House Tuesday night, I think it is due all the members that I should make a statement indicative, and indeed completely explanatory of what the Government leader in this House, think should be done in the case of Senator McDougall naturally and necessarily disposed of the question of further consideration or that phase of the case has been brought to me by him. I expressed Tuesday night my appreciation of his action. I am not now going to the letter were unfortunate, but that was his concern.

As regards Senator Raymond, I have never felt—and I do not now—that the evidence of the findings of the committee, just though they were, and I believe they were, would warrant consideration of any further action on that score.

Senator Haydon's Case

"With regard to Senator Haydon I came to point to the House that I have received the most convincing proof that I can recall, not merely authoritative information concerning the state of his health, information is such that without any reservation whatever I am prepared to accept the judgment here expressed in the case to consideration of the honorable senators."

After Senator Meighen had made his statement, the House passed immediately to other business.

Senator Haydon, who, though ill, is not confined to his bed, answered to the telephone call when the reporter called him later to ask if he had any comment to make on Senator Meighen's announcement. After the question completed, Senator Haydon had interjected two or three words of thanks for Mr. Meighen, which was seconded by K. A. Simmons. The presentation of a gift, past, suddenly a jewel to E. C. Cuff was made by J. J. McNab and K. Gooch. The ladies of the various circles of the evening, silver vases filled with cut flowers.

TENNIS CLUB TO BE FORMED

If Sufficient Membership Is Secured Amesite Courts Will Be Built

Trenton, May 5 (Special) — A meeting of a representative group of young men and women of the town has been called for tomorrow evening for the purpose of forming a tennis club for the coming year.

Mr. T. Howard Jarrett as leader of the movement, acted as chairman. It was decided to divide the club into two groups, junior and senior; juniors to be 21 or under. Mr Oscar Asle was appointed secretary pro tem and will communicate with all young people's clubs before the next meeting which will be held on Thursday, May 12, for the purpose of electing officers. Tentative membership fee was agreed upon, $3.00 for the girls; $2.00 for the juniors and $5. for the men. In this way it would be possible to raise nearly $500 which will be used in building amesite courts, to be located on the bay shore. It is hoped that everyone interested in tennis will turn out for the meeting on May 12. Trenton until now has had no public tennis courts, consequently many people who otherwise would be playing frequently are not able to do so.

Rotary Ladies' Night

The Trenton Rotary Club entertained their wives and friends at their weekly meeting at Hotel Quinte. The Hon. Mr. Martin of the Public Welfare Department was the principal speaker of the evening. Speaking of the various conditions in handling the welfare that it was a much higher standard than that of our neighbours, but that there was still work to do in bringing those who were handicapped both physically and financially.

In speaking of the visit to the Ontario School for the Deaf located in Belleville, that it was one of the finest institutions of its kind that he had ever had the pleasure of inspecting. Col. Bywater moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Martin, which was seconded by E. A. Simmons. The presentation of a gift, past, suddenly a jewel to E. C. Cuff was made by J. J. McNab and K. Gooch. The ladies of the various circles of the evening, silver vases filled with cut flowers.

DISRESPECT TOO GENERAL

Magistrate Mikel Comments Upon Perjury Cases in Court

Donald Masterson appeared before Magistrate Mikel this morning in the local police court charged with several serious offences including committing perjury when he gave lying witnesses at a recent trial, besides being charges of seduction and perjury.

When Masterson was faced with the various charges, Magistrate Mikel, Mr. P. J. Butler, K.C., asked the court for six days enlargement as he as counsel had not satisfied the full testimony of accused. His Worship granted the enlargement on account of the time and the conditions prevailing, recognizance of bail being placed by the county subject to the approbation of the Crown Attorney, and also in the local police court on Wednesday last, before Magistrate Mikel. Mr. S. C. Donnan appeared for the crown.

Appeal to Case

All the cases brought up today were in connection with the hearing of a recent case in the court under the Unmarried Parents' Act in which Masterson appeared as the defendant, and the plaintiff in the latter case two witnesses had taken the stand and testified in the presence of Masterson on the occasion in question. These two witnesses were today before the court on a charge of perjury in connection with their evidence on this previous case heard.

The two latter pleaded guilty to the charge of perjury and due to their excellent character and the fact that they had been prevailed upon, according to their plea, by Masterson, their testimony was asked by their counsel, but His Worship Magistrate Mikel was of the opinion that there was being altogether too much indulgence for the law in these matters of late and fined the two accused $50.00 each and meted out a suspended sentence of two years in each case.

An elderly lady appeared before His Worship on a charge of vagrancy and was allowed her liberty after being warned that she must remain off the streets.

COMMUNITY DANCE ON FRONT STREET

WOMAN FLIER WILL ASSIST

Joins Planning of Defense For Capt. W. N. Lancaster

MIAMI, Fla., May 5.—Mrs. Jessie M. Keith-Miller, American aviatrix, has joined in planning a defense for Captain W. N. Lancaster, her British flying partner, in the event he is indicted for murder of her young fiance, Hadden Clarke.

"Everything brought out in the case has made Bill (Lancaster) look badly," the woman flyer said yesterday as she worked with Lancaster's attorney on preliminary defense plans. "There are a thousand things to be brought out in fairness to him that are yet undisclosed," she added.

She cited her partner's war record and expressed the view that statements she previously had made in an attempt to establish that Clarke took his own life had been interjected in a manner to reflect on Lancaster. She said she feared a Grand Jury indictment for this reason.

The Grand Jurors concluded their inquiry into Clarke's shooting yesterday but probably will make no report before Saturday or Monday. Lancaster has been in jail three days since Clarke's attorney M. Vernon Hawthorne swore to a warrant for his arrest on a murder charge.

SCREEN ATTRACTIONS

Present and Prospective

Previews and Reviews of Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

At The Belle

"TARZAN THE APE-MAN" BREATH-TAKING ROMANTIC DRAMA

All of the breath-taking adventures contained in the famous Edgar Rice Burrows story have been brought faithfully to the screen by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in their thrilling jungle picture, "Tarzan, the Ape Man," which is the feature offering at the Belle tomorrow, Saturday and Monday, three days, matinee daily.

Johnny Weismuller, world's champion swimmer, who was signed by M-G-M to play the title role due to his tremendous physical build, is almost an exact personification of Tarzan. Standing six feet three in his stocking feet, his magnificent one hundred and ninety pound frame is shown swinging through the trees and in hazardous encounters with jungle beasts. Swimming sequences in the production are a very interesting demonstration of the technique that has enabled the aquatic star to win and hold most of the world's records for speed in water. The girl of the Burroughs story is more or less familiar to the millions of readers who have followed the adventures of the famous fictional character. The English Lord who has been raised by apes as one of their kind meets a young English girl on an ivory seeking safari with her father. After amazing adventures together in the jungle, a love springs up between them and Tarzan risks his life to save the safari members from horrible death at the hands of a savage pygmy tribe.

DOUBLE BILL PLEASES

Pat Thomas Meighan, Charlotte Greenwood, and half a dozen top-notch players, an expert director, and a delightful story full of breathless action and side-splitting comedy all together, and the result is very apt to be as excellent as "Cheaters at Play", which evoked genuine enthusiasm from the large audience at the Belle last night.

"Gold Diggers of Broadway," the uproariously funny all-color musical extravaganza is the second feature offering on the same program, all of which will be repeated again tonight, for the last time.

At The Capitol

BIG DOUBLE BILL AT THE RACING YOUTH

Whirlwind romance, pulse-quickening intrigue, thrilling shrieks of powerful racing cars, and good old-fashioned, investrained laughs are tightly packed in "Racing Youth", Remaining one fortnight of the honest-to-goodness motion pictures that thrilled us all in the days of Warren Herrigan, Wallace Reid and William S. Hart, a handsome young fellow by the name of Frank Albertson falls in love with the beautiful heiress who owns the auto factory where he works, wins the vital auto race in a thrilling finish, routs the villains, and then wins his boss in a delicious manner that makes you like it with him.

"Racing Youth" is the sort of picture that makes you feel that the world isn't precisely doomed, and that Adam should provide you to pull on your bonnet and take the trolley or the flivver to the Capitol Theatre.

The cast is complete and excellent, Grace Clyde is the sort of blonde who "registers" every time she "looks," and Slim Summerville and Louise Fazenda are, as usual unsurpassed in their comic antics.

Forrest Stanley, Arthur Stuart Hull, Otis Harlan and Eddie Phillips offer capable portrayals in the remaining roles, and the picture is a large feather in the cap of Director Vin Moore, who obviously knows his movies.

Earl Snell wrote the inviting screen play.

SUNNY

Marilyn Miller dances into the Capitol Theatre on the same program in "Sunny", the Vitaphone adaptation of her famous stage success.

This is Miss Miller's second film. Her first, "Sally", was one of the most popular pictures ever produced. Despite the fact that the dialogue was in English, the picture was packed them in in practically every foreign country.

Miss Miller holds a unique place on the American stage. She is so outstanding as a dancer and as a light comedy opera star that has no competition. There is no other actress with her combination of talents who can challenge her supremacy.

"Sunny" is a different type of picture from "Sally", but the same concept prevails. Miss Miller introduced a number of novelties in "Sally" and there is no exception in the picture.

Lawrence Gray, Joe Donahue, O. P. Heggie, Judith Vosselli and Barbara Bedford are among those in the supporting cast. William A. Seiter directed for First National.

"Racing Youth" and "Sunny" will be the featured attractions at the Capitol on Friday and Saturday.

Abbreviated Suits Block Paris Streets

Paris, May 5—Consistent with current world-wide demands for economy in everything, a score of Paris mannikins paraded in the busy streets of Paris near the Place Vendome yesterday to illustrate how the fashionable woman can economize on beach costumes.

The mannikins were showing the latest 1932 model bathing suits and their display was so breath-taking that some near-sighted fashion critic remarked they might as well have worn nothing. The upper part of some of the suits was a filmy wisp of bodice, connected with the lower part only by a slender silken thread. The lower part consisted of abbreviated trunks.

The open-air parade—the first ever attempted in Paris—lasted only a few minutes. A crowd gathered with amazing rapidity and traffic was jammed until the managers of the enterprising fashion house which staged the parade hurried their mannikins back inside.

Unofficially it was hinted in police sources that such parades should not be repeated, but the fashion house took the attitude that if girls are allowed to appear on the Riviera beaches in bathing suits, the Paris authorities can have no objection to the appearance of mannikins in the streets of the capital.

TRADE SHIP FOR CANADA

90 Scottish Firms Are Sending Exhibits of Products

Glasgow, May 5 (CP)—The steamer Letitia of the Anchor-Donaldson line sailed from this port today for Canada on a trade mission designed to strengthen the bond between the Dominion and Scotland. She was laden with cargo described as the most valuable that ever left the Clyde.

About ninety Scottish firms sent exhibits of their wares aboard the vessel and most of them sent representatives as well. The cargo, ranging from iron and steel to typically Scottish breeds of dogs, contained what was said to be the best Scotland can produce in machinery, chemicals, textiles, foodstuffs and livestock.

On its arrival in Canadian ports the ship will be converted into a floating showroom with spacious stall on four decks and all exhibits open to the public.

Bonar Law

Bonarlaw—The April meeting of the Springbrook Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Thomas Hannah with an attendance of about thirty.

The roll call being current events was quite well responded to.

Plans were made for the June meeting when the department speaker will be present. It was moved by Mrs. J. R. Brown and seconded by Mrs. A. Haslett that the federation fees be paid. It was suggested that any contributions of clothing which anyone should wish to give to the Children's Shelter be brought in to the May meeting. Community singing was enjoyed by all.

The following program was then given: Mrs. Allen McComb gave an interesting paper on "Education." A well prepared paper on "The Leagle of Nations" was given by Mrs. H. A. Bunn. Mrs. I. Brown gave a comic reading on "Mother's Day". Readers for the June meeting were made for the department.

Kingston—In connection with the action taken at Monday night's meeting of the City Council to have a license fee of 25 cents placed on bicycles, in order to assist the police in checking up on stolen bicycles the police records show that during the year 1931 there were 147 bicycles reported to the police as stolen and 115 recovered. In 1930 there were 171 wheels reported stolen and the number 106 were recovered.

WHY GAMBLE WITH A SECOND CHOICE TIRE WHEN GOODYEARS COST NO MORE?

Thousands of extra miles in these body-balanced Goodyear tires

You can get out of a tire only those miles that are built into it. Mileage is not a matter only of weight, size or tread design. It is a matter of construction—the fabrication of correct materials and their proper mating. Unbalanced tires will not stand the shock and speed of modern driving.

Goodyear tires are balanced. The same tire engineers and workmen who gave you the famous elastic-like Supertwist Cord and the All-Weather tread, build tires in which every part is moulded into one complete unit. In tires as Goodyear builds them, carcass and tread are one. Strong Supertwist Cords, protected by Goodyear-processed rubber, are built up layer by layer—evenly—uniformly—defying separation and friction.

The man who drives on Goodyears is free from the troubles he has had with unbalanced tires. All risks are lessened. Most risks are eliminated. Goodyear Tires are safe at higher speeds. They are non-skid. Their balanced construction defeats the attacks of modern brakes. The cause of the dreaded and dangerous blow-out—inner friction-heat—is conquered.

Goodyear Tires give thousands of miles of extra service because these miles are built into them—by Goodyear—the greatest name in rubber.

"It was from Bob Rawlson, was it not, that you also obtained information of the probable Seacoast merger with the Frontier organization?" asked Sarah.

"I don't know what you're talking about," he answered.

Sarah said quietly, "It doesn't matter, except to Lynn. Lynn quarreled with Tom because she thought you'd spoken against her express wishes in her told his confidential information to outsiders. That's neither here nor there. You know quite well what I'm talking about. Lynn confided in you last summer. You yourself told me so. It would have been easy for you to find and approach the person who had made the original suggestion to Tom, and to learn from him the moment when it would be wise to buy what stock you could through various investment houses and in small lots."

"Then you didn't——" began Lynn. Her face was colorless.

"No, Tom didn't. I'm certain of that," Sarah told her, and turned to Dwight again. "You'll deny any complicity, of course. Although if you was, I suppose, my fault. I haven't forgotten that you asked me with whom Tom was intimate in the bank; so that I told you Rawlson's."

"You're out of your mind!" he said. "I know Rawlson, of course, casually, as Morton's secretary. What is all——"

"It doesn't matter," said Sarah again, "although I congratulate you on your sagacity. It isn't every man who does a little marriage on the side, while managing to separate two young people who are in love with each other."

"Sarah," he asked, in magnificent bewilderment, "what on earth has come over you lately? You're not like yourself at all. Unfortunate——"

She said shortly, "Never mind that. The fact remains that you're a married man. And that both you and Lynn should know better."

"I shall be a married man very long," Dwight informed her. "Or rather, not married in the present sense, Mrs. Dwight." He waited a moment, and then drove home. He wanted to hurt the woman sitting there facing him; wanted to hurt so that she would cry out. "Mrs. Dwight has done me the honor to consent to a divorce," he said, "and so I have asked Lynn to marry me when my freedom is full accomplished."

"Ah!" said Sarah, very low. She turned to Lynn. "Is this true?" she asked.

"Yes, it's true, Sarah! he did ask me to marry him. But I don't understand about Bob Rawlson and Tom and——"

"That can wait. Do you love him?"

"Please, Sarah, this is embarrassing and unnecessary," Dwight said. He rose and stood smiling.

"No. He know that. But—oh, Sarah!" Lynn lowered her dark head against the older woman's shoulder and wept from bewilderment and fatigue. The broken words she uttered were not clear but one or two of them were: "Tom—to Sarah's ears, "So lonely!...so unhappy."

Sarah put her arm around the girl. "Because you thought Tom had failed you, you were going to marry David, perhaps, and be more lonely, more unhappy?" she asked.

Lynn replied, "Yes," faintly. Then she drew away from Sarah and spoke abruptly, distantly. "Oh," she said, with violence, "I'm so ashamed. If it's been my fault, Sarah, all my fault, I'll never forgive myself."

You see, that time in the country, I spoke to you about Tom and about Dwight —about Tom. I told him that I was interested in Lynn and that if what Tom was considering was unethical or dishonest, I'd like to see it was." She added, "I ought to lose my job for that, Sarah. I was worried about Tom, about the whole business, and a little drunk, too; not realizing what it was saying."

Sarah took her eyes from Dwight's face. She said, "Lynn, did you mention Bob Rawlson on that occasion?"

"No. Not by name. I said Tom had an acquaintance who'd advise him." Lynn's face, white and dark, black arrow on her forehead was clear against her pallor for the first time she looked at Dwight, spoke directly to him. "Why did you do it? Why did you let me think, cause me to think that Tom——"

He answered, smiling, "My dear, didn't I tell you all's fair in love and business?"

She was silent, her lips shaking. Sarah answered for her.

"Perhaps. But it's hardly a basis for a happy marriage when one has never had the ghost of a chance to make love to David. You've not even less now. Even if she had not learned what she's learning tonight, she would have been married with another man in her heart. You'—she turned to Lynn—"you would not make any woman happy, David, not any more. You're just not built that way."

Dwight took a step toward them, His expression no longer expressionless. "What right have you to say that?" he asked violently. "I love Lynn; I've loved her for years. I'll make her happy. I have never," he said, deliberately, not forgetting to stab, "cared for any woman as I do for her. She'll forget about this; I'll make her forget. I tell you I love her; I'd give her the world, if I could!"

Sarah said "I suppose so. Yet you told me that once, I remember."

There was a deep silence. Lynn cried, "Sarah!" and Dwight repeated it.

"Sarah!" he said, but on a note of warning.

Sarah said, "Not that that matters any more, either. Why you have mattered to me, David, for twenty years is beyond my comprehension. But Lynn must know. It may explain things to her some later, she thinks it all over; may explain why I was so blind."

CHAPTER XLI

"You—and David?" asked Lynn. It was the first time she had spoken Dwight's Christian name.

"Yes; I and David."

"Twenty years ago," Dwight reminded Lynn smoothly. "Remember that."

He was instantly sorry he had said it. It dated them somehow.

"You were going to marry him? asked Lynn of Sarah. "—why didn't you tell me? I didn't know or dream."

"No, there was no question of marriage between us. Dwight couldn't afford to marry—a nobody," Sarah told her evenly. "We were—lovers."

"An elastic term," Dwight remarked.

"Not very. Not in this case. Shall I tell her about Maryland, David, and the place called Heartsease? Shall I tell her about the apartment here in New York?"

"No, no!" cried Lynn. "No, don't tell me anything more!"

"But I think I must," Sara h said. "No; it isn't necessary." Lynn found herself on her feet, facing Dwight. "Why?" she asked, and again, "Why?"

He said soothingly, as one speaks to a child, "Darling, you would never have known, for me. What Sarah's motive is——" He shrugged. But he knew her motive. He said, "Don't look at me like that. It happened so long ago; it was over so long ago. We were young and sorry and——"

"But Sarah!" Lynn couldn't understand it; couldn't reconcile it. Sarah, her mothers' friend! Sarah who had given her her chance, been kind to her. She said brokenly, "It had been anyone but Sarah. I wouldn't have cared. Why should I? After all, I'm not a child. But to treat Sarah like that!"

She turned from him, went down on her knees beside Sarah's chair and looked up into a face that was no longer calm, into eyes no longer steady. She cried out, "It must have hurt you terribly to tell me. —oh Sarah how could he?"

Her head was on Sarah's knees. The older woman touched the satin-soft hair.

She said, shaken, "Don't cry for me, Lynn. As David says, it was over long ago. If you had asked for him I would have been silent; you would never have known. But you don't care for him, Lynn; you love Tom. I had to show you how little you care for—David."

If you had cared, you wouldn't have turned to me; thought first of me."

Dwight asked, after a moment, "Lynn, will you come here to me?"

She rose unsteadily and walked a few steps toward him. He hands went out to her, pleading, eager, ardent. She shrank away.

She cried out, "Don't touch me; don't dare to touch me!"

Empty, defeated, his hands dropped. He said sharply, "Lynn, you are being very foolish. Granted that I treated Sarah badly many years ago; it has been forgiven. We have been friends since. We appealed to the other woman. "Is that not so, Sarah?"

"I have been your friend," she answered evenly.

"She bears me no grudge. Lynn, you know, you must have realized that there was no other women in my life. You are modern enough, surely, to understand. I'm not a boy. I'm not a boy, to bring you first love. I've had my share. He slumbered over that loathing. Fearing that verity. "But I bring you something worth as much more. Last love; love that will endure for the rest of my life. I love you. I am a desperate, hard hearted, he cried out—helplessly. "Oh, for Lord's sake, Lynn, there is beyond all reason! To repudiate me for someone you have known all your life because you were born; for a moral scruple——"

She gasped, appalled. He had belonged so utterly to her generation that he could not understand.

She said, "It's not a moral scruple. It's Sarah. Can't you see that that makes all the difference? When I try to realize——" She felt back to try to realize—" She felt back to Sarah's other woman, you warm to her arms about her. "Sarah, you've been kind to me."

"Not for a long time," Sarah told her. "And not very kind to David."

He looked at Lynn, but her eyes were on Sarah. He put his hand on the doorknob. He said, "I'll come back."

No one spoke. The door opened and closed. Lynn put out her fingers. Tom, racing past toward the elevators, stopped. He said, "I will drop himself into the room.

He said, "Oh, no, you don't! You don't, Lynn!"

There was a moment of confusion. Sarah suffered! Her own chair sighed, Lynn cried, "Tom!" incredulously, "Tom!" Then, wild disorder; his cheek was bruised; his collar torn. He pushed Dwight back into the room ahead of him and slammed the door.

"Why? Tell me this out!" he said. "You'll excuse me," Dwight commented coolly, "if I say I don't care to stay any longer."

"You'll stay!" Tom contradicted. "Look here you. Somehow you found out that there was something going on at the bank. I don't know how; it doesn't signify. You went to Rawlson and got all the dope you needed. And you're mage money on the side. That explains your new car. I don't care how much jack you make or how you make it. What does concern me is Lynn. Lynn thought I'd tipped someone off and was getting my wind.

"Well I didn't. You did. I got it out of Rawlson." He looked with satisfaction at his knuckles. They, too, were bruised. "I'll say he worked me for his money! He didn't tell me until I made him. But before you go, perhaps you'll be good enough to tell Lynn and Miss Dennett that I didn't have anything to do with this stock manipulation."

Dwight said darkly, "No, you didn't. I'll be too much of a fool, I'm not."

The door shut behind him.

"Well!" said Tom and looked from Lynn to Sarah; they were looking at him in silence. "Well, that's that!" He felt his chin. His fine high color faded and passed. He was let down. "I must look like the devil," he said, after a moment.

The girl had had been on Lynn's knees relaxed and released her and she flashed into life. She sprang to her feet and ran to him, threw up her arms. "Tom, are you hurt! Did he hurt you?"

"Who? Me? Not as much as I hurt him." Tom told her, grinning. "Hey, what are you crying for? I'm all right."

"I'm not crying; I'm laughing. Yes, I am crying, but just because I'm happy." She was close in his arms now; she was saying, "Tom, please forgive me, please!"

Sarah got out of her chair and walked stiffly toward the door. She said simply, "Everything's all right now."

But they did not hear.

Tom put Lynn in a chair and managed to occupy the same chair himself.

She said, "All these days and nights I've been waiting; hoping you'd come back, Tom. I was ready to take you back if only you'd come, even if you had done it. I'd got so I didn't care. But I would have believed you if only you'd told me again."

"I was an ass," he agreed amiably, "flinging myself out like that. Of course everything looked pretty black against me. Dwight? How he caught on——"

She said, and it hurt her terribly to say it, "It was my fault. Down there in the country, I told him. I put it to him as a case, a hypothetical case, to see what he'd think."

"Then how——" asked Tom, bewildered.

"He asked Sarah later, casually, if you had any close friends in the bank. He knew I meant you, of course. Sarah told him you went around with Bob Rawlson. The rest was easy."

"Oho darned easy. He cleaned up, there's no doubt about that. If it gets about it won't be healthy for him around here. And Rawlson will lose his job."

"He's going abroad. Dwight, I mean."

YOUNG INDIAN GOOD JUMPER

Untrained Brave Jumps 6 Foot 1 Inch on First Attempt

OTTAWA.—The Canadian Press—Canadian Olympic committee officials awaiting point winners for the Los Angeles games might well turn to talent material among Indian tribes in the Northwest Territories if an athletic record in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police annual report is accurate.

According to Inspector H. Royal-Gagnon, a young Indian whom he does not name jumped six feet one inch at a field meet held at Fort Chipewyan. Knowing nothing of the high jumping art, the Indian, the inspector relates, "just jumps over."

A few highly trained Canadian athletes have ever jumped more than six feet and as the world's record is only 6 feet 8 1-4 inches, the feat of the unknown Indian in his first attempt is considered most remarkable.

Continue Drive on Rebellions

Harbin, Manchuria, May 4—General Hiroe's three Japanese brigades continued their drive against the Chinese rebels north and northeast of here today, with heavy fighting in which many on both sides were killed or wounded.

FOREIGN SERVANTS STAY IN COUNTRY

Washington, May 4.—(AP)—Notice was given today by Representative Celler (Democrat), New York, that he would attempt to solve part of the unemployment problem of United States by pressing for adoption of his bill to compel persons who enter this country as servants of diplomats to leave when their term of service expires.

Celler complained to newspapermen that approximately 14,000 had come into this country in the last seven years for this purpose.

Alike But Not Related

By Thornton W. Burgess

Relationship don't count at all; By what you do you stand or fall. —Paddy the Beaver.

"Some people think I am your little cousin," said Jerry Muskrat to Paddy the Beaver as they sat on the roof of Paddy's house, where Mrs. Paddy had just joined them. "I suppose that is because we live alike in many ways. We both spend most of our time in the water. We both are good swimmers and can stay under water for some time. We both build houses in the water in much the same way. So I suppose it is country. Cousin, if we are, I would like to think we are."

"You belong to the Rat family, don't you?" said Paddy, making a statement and asking a question at the same time.

"Yes," replied Jerry, nodding his head. "Yes, I belong to the Rat family."

"Well, I don't," declared Paddy in a most decided tone of voice. "My family is the Beaver family and it stands alone. I take it that you are a cousin of Robber the Rat, and if you are I am ashamed to be cast."

"Yes," admitted Jerry, somewhat unwillingly. "Yes, Robber is a cousin of mine of whom I am very much ashamed."

"Don't let that bother you," replied Paddy promptly. "Forget it. It is what we ourselves are, not what our relatives are, that counts. Robber the Rat may be a thief, dirty in his habits, and not rated among all respectable people, but what has that to do with you? If you are honest, if you have good character and the respect of your neighbors, it doesn't matter what your relatives are or may do."

"But it does matter to me," said Jerry Paddy shook his head vigorously. "No, it doesn't. You only think it does. He declared: "Because the Rat is as bad as they say he is it does you no harm, because you are honest and industrious and everybody knows it. You doesn't help him a bit. No more should you allow what he may do hurt you. You should not allow it to think that I am our big cousin. What good opinion I have of you."

"No real good," confessed Jerry, "only you are so wonderful and do such wonderful things that I would be proud to know that we were related."

"If you must be proud about something be proud of the kind of friends. You will get exactly as much good out of them," said Paddy. "You have a lot of relatives, haven't you?"

Jerry nodded. "I should say so!" he exclaimed. "I can't begin to keep track of them. The Rat family is a big family and I suppose I am the biggest member. My nearest cousin is Danny Meadow Mouse. They tell me that excepting for size, we look something alike, but I can't see it myself. Don't you think it odd that if you and I are not relatives we should be so much alike in the way we live?"

"Not at all," replied Paddy, promptly. "We both happen to have sense enough to live in the water and prefer to live there. If we have learned to do many things that is all there is to it. I'll venture to say that you couldn't be happy away from water for any length of time, and I know I wouldn't. We must have certain things to be happy and we must have water in order to be happy. Old Mother Nature has taught us how to live in the water and has fitted us for that sort of life. So we are somewhat alike as a result, but being alike doesn't mean to make us related. I am no tail. No Rat ever had a flat tail like mine."

"My tail is flat," spoke up Jerry quickly.

"But not like mine," replied Paddy promptly "Yours is flattened on the sides and isn't so very big. But just look at this great paddle of a tail of mine! There isn't another tail like it in all the Great World so far as I know. Certainly no member of the Rat family has one like it. No, we are not related. I am not your big cousin, but if you like I will be your big friend."

NO REACTION TO RELIGION

Prayer Bore Many and Bible is Dry Book Says Cleric

Toronto, May 4—Many of our people show no reaction to religion at all. Prayer bores them and the Bible is a dry book to a great mass of people, said Rev. Patterson Hall, Gait, reporting for the committee on evangelism on the state of religion at the Synod of Toronto and Kingston meeting here today. "We must revive in the Presbyterian Church the real spirit of religion and vital faith," he said.

Completion of Union

A commission of Synod was appointed to deal with the matter of completing the Union into one charge of the three congregations pointed to deal with the matter. Rev. G. Good, Lindsay, said the Union would save two grants totaling $600 o' home missions funds now given three charges separately. The Synod decided to discuss further possible unions of small rural congregations.

Mrs. J. J. Hills presented the report of the Women's Missionary Society, which had a membership of 34,096 in all. Total receipts were $131,194.

A committee to deliberating on the question of whether the general assembly might be dispensed with and the membership of Synod increased, Rev. A. J. MacManara clerk of assembly, declared, a meeting of the assembly in Ontario cost the church $10,000.

FOUR MAY NOT GO TO PRISON

While Fight Against Conviction is on, They Stay on Ship

Honolulu, May 4—Definite assurance that Lieut. Thomas H. Massie and three others convicted with him of manslaughter will not go to prison as long as their fight against conviction is in progress, were forthcoming today.

Both prosecution and defence counsel said the four would probably remain in custody of the United States Navy at Pearl Harbor and it was authoritatively understood Judge Charles S. Davis would commit them to the custody of naval officers when they appear before him for sentences Friday.

Meanwhile, pressure was brought upon Governor Lawrence M. Judd by official Washington and civilian circles to pardon the quartette convicted of slaying Joseph Kahahawai who allegedly had confessed a criminal attack on the wife of the naval officer.

For almost ten years chemists of the University of Minnesota have been studying effects of soil on different metals used in making burial caskets.

FRENCH PRESIDENT SHOT IN HEAD BY RUSSIAN

Russian Fascist Shoots at 74 Yr. Old President Paul Doumer, Wound in Head Very Serious Doctors State

Father of Four Sons Slain in Great War, is Himself Victim of Would-Be Assassin's Bullet in Paris Today

BLOOD TRANSFUSIONS, TREPANNING

Early Fears of Impending Death Eased, as Doctors Announce Condition of Venerable President is Satisfactory Considering Wound

Paris, May 6—At 6.45 o'clock this evening the Senior Surgeons attending President Doumer left the hospital after pronouncing his condition "very satisfactory."

The President's nephew said the patient's chances now were largely a matter of his advanced age, since no vital spot had been struck. He said his uncle had shown some improvement in the past two hours.

Paris, May 6—President Paul Doumer, 74-year-old head of the French Republic, was critically wounded today by an assassin identified as a "White" Russian.

Two blood transfusions and a trepanning operation were performed immediately and the doctors held out some hope that the President might recover.

The police hammered at the assassin until they learned that his name is Paul Gorguloff, that he had come here from Monaco especially to commit this crime and that his motive was revenge for the French refusal to intervene in Russia against the Bolsheviki.

Paris, May 6—Dr. Gosset performed a trepanning operation on President Doumer shortly before 6 o'clock this evening. It was announced afterward that there was still some hope that the President might recover.

Paris, May 6—President Paul Doumer, the beloved 74-year-old head of the French Republic, was shot three times and desperately wounded today by an assassin as he was passing through a crowd of veterans.

He had come fro mthe Elysee Palace with Claude Farrere, the noted author. Together they entered the Grand Hall of the Baron de Rothschild mansion near the palace.

Farrere walked with him up the grand staircase where the President paused to sign a copy of a book by a contemporary author.

Then he moved over to a table and stood talking with Farrere and Madame Farrere.

Springs Out of Nowhere.

Suddenly a man sprang, seemingly out of nowhere, levelled a pistol at the President and fired three times.

M. Doumer crumpled. He sank to the floor. There were bullets in the front of the head, in the head behind the ear and in the chest.

Farrere sprang forward. The assassin's pistol was still smoking in his hand. He raised it and fired twice. Farrere slopped with a bullet in the arm but lunged forward again and grappled with the man.

Paul Gelchard, Director of the Paris Police, ran forward. The assassin fired again. The bullet struck Guichard in the arm.

Tense Police Seize Man.

By this time a dozen police surrounded the man and a crowd gathered about them.

As Gichard grew it became an infuriated mob. The police had the greatest difficulty protecting their prisoner. At last they got him away.

At police headquarters Gorguloff gave his name as Paul Gorguloff, a Russian physician.

They had no idea of his motive, but someone heard him shout as he fired: "Die for the fatherland."

Meanwhile, back in the exhibition room, Farrere and others bent over the President.

Mumbles Some Words.

He was already nearly unconscious. He mumbled a few incoherent words as they lifted him, placed him on a stretcher and carried him to the Hotel Beaujon. While, was carried to the hospital and taken immediately and there was a blood transfusion.

It was impossible at the time to get developments to get all the facts about the assassin. Reports that the President had died; that he was dying, and that his wounds were not so serious as had been thought at first, followed each other in rapid succession.

The President and had discovered that none of the bullets had penetrated the brain and that he expected M. Doumer to recover.

Not Possible.

One of those who were first to reach the President's side said afterward that he had heard M. Doumer whisper "Pas Possible." In English it would be "This Seems Impossible."

Press agencies received the same word that, when they searched the assassin they found in his pocket a notebook with the picture of Hitler and pencil sketches of him. This day I killed the President of the French Republic."

Premier Andre Tardieu was the first man to reach the hospital after the news had gone about. Former Premier Calliaux came soon afterward, and then there was a stream of Government officials.

Wife Grief-Stricken.

Madame Doumer, who gave four sons to France in the war, was grief-stricken when she heard the news. At the evening were on and a crowd passed about the hospital bits of news trickled out. The doctors disclosed that after the emergency operations the patient had rallied slightly.

"Ca va," he murmured, the doctors said. That means "I'm all right."

The police, hammering at Gorguloff, learned that he had come to Paris from Monaco on Wednesday night especially to commit this crime.

He was born a Cossack, he told them, and two years ago formed what he called "Society of Russian Fascist.

He shot President Doumer, he confessed, because he wanted revenge for the French refusal to intervene in Russia against the Bolsheviki.

It was learned later that a second blood transfusion had been performed.

Statement of Ministry

This evening the Ministry of the Interior issued this statement:

"Today at 3 o'clock President Doumer, during a visit to an exhibition by war veteran writers, was the victim of an attempt on his life by a Russian Anarchist who appears to be not in full possession of his faculties.

"The President was struck by a bullet in the head and another in the shoulder which caused a flesh wound. He was at once taken to Beaujon Hospital where he received the attentive care of leading surgeons."

BLOW STRIKES REPUBLIC OF FRANCE HARD

Such Thrill as if Declaration of War Has Been Declared

INCREDULITY

BY GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Paris, May 6 (C. F. cable) —The attack on President Doumer today swept France with a thrill like a declaration of war. The shooting of the venerable president of the Republic by a so-called Russian "Fascist," which left the president in a critical condition, struck at the very quadruple entente pillar of the French republic.

Crowds, stunned and almost incredulous, gathered in the streets this evening discussing the shocking news and the manner where the president has already undergone a trepbining operation for his head wounds and two blood transfusions. The news stands were mobbed with demands for rapidly succeeding editions which never sufficed. Queues selling rapidly to apparatus were jammed to the doors of offices listening to the latest medical bulletins.

Paris, May 6—If President Doumer should die of his wounds, the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies would meet immediately to elect his successor.

Article VII. of the French constitutional law provides for this procedure in the event that the president should become vacant for any cause.

In the interval between the vacancy and the election the cabinet is empowered to function.

This procedure was followed in 1894 when President Carnot was assassinated at Lyons.

Paul Doumer, distinguished white bearded statesman, who has served the country for many years in the field of politics, became president of the Republic last May.

His political competitor was the late Aristide Briand, but the "man of peace" had alienated enough of his contemporaries by his policy of rapprochement to prevent his election.

At Age of 74

So M. Doumer at 74, became the chief executive of France. Ironically, it was the second time he had been a candidate for that high office. Premier Millerand Pallieres, president of the Senate, and Loucheur.

He is a son of humble beginnings, his father was a section boss on a railroad, and died when the president was a boy and it was a struggle to obtain an education, for he had to leave grammar school, at 14, to help support his widowed mother.

Journalist

He laid the foundations for his political career in journalism, and became interested in politics; he specialized in finance and became minister of finance in 1895.

Subsequently, for seven strenuous years, he was governor-general of the faraway post; was re-elected to the chamber of deputies, three years later he became president of the chamber, and for the third time after when Pelleres, then president of the Senate, declared him for the office of the Republic.

Three Sons Killed in War

M. Doumer's heaviest sorrow came in the war. Three of his five sons were killed in battle and a fourth died of his wounds soon after the armistice.

During the war M. Doumer was a member of the national defence government posts, although in 1917 he was minister without portfolio in the Painleve cabinet which was overthrown by Clemenceau.

In 1921 Aristide Briand, then premier, made Him minister or finance. Six years later he became president of the Senate.

BELLEVILLE DAYS ARE HAPPY DAYS

First Day of Big Three Day Bargain Carnival Great Success—Shoppers Turn Out En Masse and Storm Stores — Many Special Store Prizes Won By Lucky Shoppers — Coupons For Grand Prizes in Great Demand—Much Interest Taken in Daily Drawings For Prizes—Balloons—Band Street Dancing, Neverything.

Belleville Three Big and Better Days arranged by the Retail Merchants' Association, started off with a bang yaterday, with gaily decorated streets, flags flying, store windows attractively dressed and everybody on their toes with expectancy. For three days the merchants have arranged a carnival of super-values, with prices lower than ever before or ever will be again, to make this sale a memorable event and give the people an opportunity of making genuine savings by purchasing at these low levels.

Shopping proceeded briskly all day and when the time came at 4.15 for the balloons to be released the business section was crowded with children and grown-ups all eager to get in on the special prizes which capture of the winning balloons held.

Many stores attached special prize card to balloons and the finders were rewarded by valuable articles when the cards were presented at the stores.

Today the shopping carnival proceeds with every merchant anxious to give the shoppers the best bargains they have had in order that this event will long be talked of as the greatest shopping event ever held in this or any other town. and make it possible to repeat as an annual event. Here's where the shopper makes the profit, not the merchant, except in good will, future business and ready cash in hand.

Last evening Daily business centre was crowded for the Window Shopping Parade and the windows were found very interesting, the art of window dressing being well exemplified.

The Belleville Citizens Band led by Piper Jamie Clarke paraded the business section with stirring tunes and played for the street dance arranged by President Charles Hanna, a large crowd taking part and everybody having a happy time.

For Saturday and Saturday night the merchants have arranged specially attractive offerings and shoppers will find this an opportunity which can never occur again, as prices on nearly all commodities have now reached rock bottom and are firming up already for a steady climb back to normal.

Winners of the prize drawings for Thursday will be found in another column.

First Autogiro Owned in Ontario Arrives in Belleville This Afternoon

Leavens Bros. Air Services, Ltd., of this city, have purchased a Pitcairn Autogiro, the first machine of its kind to be owned in Canada. These allow it to hover, to travel very slowly in the air without stalling or to descend vertically as the will of the operator. The Autogiro is 40 feet 10 inches in length.

This is the first Autogiro owned in Ontario and the second in Canada, it is the first in Canada to be used for passenger-carrying work. Predictions are that this type of aviation machine will be in use for years.

Its ability to descend vertically makes it very safe in case of engine failure since it can land safely in any vacant lot. For the same reason it is said to fly at the low altitudes which is sometimes of great importance in the case of private flights. Its appeal lies largely in the fact that it does not stall, that is, go out of control, at slow speeds. The revolving wings exert the same lift at all speeds. This is the basic principle of this design.

The Autogiro combines more step nearer the ideal of aeroplane designers to build a plane which can be flown by the ordinary person as safely as he or she drives a car.

Autogiro appointments are rapidly landed on the lawn of a downtown Detroit office building for passenger and ascended, just to show what is possible with this type of plane.

Leavens Bros. are operating four planes this season throughout Ontario and Quebec, carrying passengers on short rides at the low rate of one cent per ft.

GOV'T TOOK NO PART IN ARREST

Toronto, May 6—Ontario government officials had nothing to do with arresting of Arvo Vaara, editor of Vapaus, Finnish Daily, and Martin Paker, two alleged Communists at Sudbury, nor have they any official knowledge of the arrests, declared John Charles McCrea, Acting Attorney General, today.

Major General Victor Williams, head of the Provincial Police, and Alfred Cuddy, Deputy Commissioner, both declared they had no knowledge of the arrests.

A. VAARA TO BE DEPORTED SAYS W. PRICE

Announces Intention Before Sailing to West Indies

ALL SENT OUT

Those Who Don't Like Country Can Go Where They're Content

Montreal, May 6 (CP)—Arvo Vaara, Communist editor of the Finnish Daily Vapaus in Sudbury, who was arrested in a police raid on the newspaper office, will be deported, Col. W. H. Price, Ontario Attorney General, said here before sailing aboard the Canadian National liner Lady Somers for a vacation in the West Indies.

A Toronto despatch received yesterday stated that the movements of Vaara were surrounded by mystery and he had been bundled into a large automobile with five plainclothesmen and headed south.

"Do you intend to deport Vaara?" Mr. Price was asked.

He replied in the affirmative.

"Will he be sent from Montreal by any of the liners leaving today?" Mr. Price said that he did not think so as there were only several days to have the deportation papers arranged.

"This man was in trouble three times for unlawful assemblage in His Majesty," Mr. Price added. "Now he has been going too far again and I intend to deport him if I can get to put up with violence."

Mr. Price explained that it was essential to protect Canadians and that Reds who incited to violence would be sent out of the country.

"If they don't like our country let them go somewhere else where they will be content," he declared. "We are not going to have them here."

He added that two other men arrested recently would be deported.

Mr. Price is leaving for a three weeks' vacation in Kingston, Jamaica, for his health.

BLACKBIRD'S WEIGHT PUTS CLOCK AHEAD

A well know citizen who was hurrying across the market square on the way to Sunday this morning glanced at the town clock and noted that it was to be three minutes after nine o'clock and to his astonishment the hands proceeded to fifteen minutes after nine. "My eyes must be bothering me again, really I must have my eyes looked after"—said this citizen, he was freed from anxiety regarding the eye sight, for upon a very lip of the large hand of the clock, he saw sitting a fat black bird, whose weight had forced the hand of the clock downward in the quarter of the hour marking.

When the bird flew away and the hand was relieved of its weight it soon became porper'y adjusted.

Police Survey Shows Who Offenders Are Under Parking Bylaw

Mayor Tice Makes Plea to Merchants Not to Cause Congestion

TOTAL 50 P.C.

Unless Cooperation is Given Drastic Change in Regulations Likely

Merchants of this city have been, perhaps unconsciously, working to their own disadvantage.

This much was gleaned from a police report which has been turned in to Mayor Geo. O. Tice, who had requested it some days ago, and an interview with the Mayor which followed later.

The report had been made by members of the local police force on the request of Mayor Tice, who wished to determine some method of alleviating the parking situation in the city which has assumed dangerous proportions due to both buying residents of the city and those from the surrounding district who make Belleville their shopping centre.

Taken Survey

After an exhaustive survey of days during which time the police checked and re-checked hundreds of cars to find average time most of them use while parking their machines on Front Street, it was estimated that 50% of those left the "reasonable time" limit were Front Street merchants themselves. Some of the cark owned by the merchants were found to be parked for periods of up to seven hours a day in front of some of the stores. Other machines were the property of clerks who worked within.

Co-operation is Core

In an interview with a reporter of the Ontario Intelligencer, Mayor Tice expressed the earnest wish that the merchants, besides all others, would co-operate in this matter. "If they will co-operate they will find that it will be to their benefit as well as the city at large." We cannot afford advertising the city and inviting outside residents to come here to shop, and then when they do come with their cars they can find no place to park them. Nine times out of ten they either go back without spending a cent or they simply go on to some other town," declared the mayor.

Asked if the council as a whole had considered the fact that drastic remedy might have to be applied in order to obtain relief in this matter, it was learned that a committee had been appointed to look into the matter of regulating the time of parking, but if it were found necessary to take drastic measures if the merchants and others without parking facilities in the business section then the city would be that much the worse off.

"There should be complete harmony in this matter," declared Mayor Tice, "and I know that when the matter is drawn to their attention there will be little or no official offender we are going to have to take steps to see to it that them to use their own judgment and not that of others in looking for themselves. Then there will be no need for us to do anything more."

"CAPTAINS" DEPART

Sex Education for Children Favored by Anglican Council

TORONTO, Ont., May 6.—Sex information for children of primary school age; special sex education in theological colleges, and normal schools; and encouragement of the criminal code paragraph which prohibits the sale and distribution of contraceptives are urged in a statement, issued today by the Anglican Diocesan Council of Social Service and the Academy of Medicine. The statement carried a forward by the Archbishop of Toronto.

"The statement says in part "Wives should not be required to bear children beyond their physical and nervous capacity; neither beyond the parents' economic power to maintain them properly; Children have the right to be well born, nourished educated and trained; birth control is not dealt in the Lambeth Conference resolution may be sometimes practised.

"The Lambeth Conference Statement does not encourage the increase of the number of children in poor families. Together with the expression of opinion against the use of artificial devices for preventing conception, is quoted. To it is appended a quotation from the report of the Social Service Council of Canada: "If scientific or artificial method of birth control are had, it is found time the church explain his attitude towards it."

WINNERS OF FIRST DAY

Happy Day's headquarters near Victoria Avenue on Front Street this morning resembled a mob scene from a movie. Traffic on the walk was blocked and paralyzed by scores of eager shoppers who stood before the large window and watched Mayor Tice, assisted by members of the Retail Merchants' Association draw the first day's winning numbers from the large box. Thursday's ballots which were given shoppers in the various store on Front Street, and which were dropped in convenient boxes to be this morning, at ten-thirty tossed in the large box and drawn out by His Honor. The numbers were called off as fast as they were drawn and marked on a large chart which now hangs in the window.

Tomorrow at the same time the drawing will be repeated. It is interesting to note that many of the tickets which were drawn are owned by the same shoppers who had come from points far outside of Belleville to participate in this gala shopping event. Winning numbers are listed below:

CONNECTIONS AND FITTINGS PLACED

Connections and fittings were, late yesterday afternoon, installed at the junction of the spare waterworks main to that of the existing pipe line near the lower bridge. Later in the afternoon a long distance telephone call was put in to Toronto by Manager, Mr. E. T. Aselin asking for the proper fitting machine, which will be necessary to complete the coupling at that point. The machine, the largest one in Canada, will probably arrive in the city early next week, and will be in charge of an employee of the Toronto Waterworks department who will be sent with it to do the cutting of the pipe and assist the local employees in connecting up the pipe line. The machine will be installed in the pump house, now connected, and the work will be done through that.

Further work which occupied the attention of the department this morning was the connection of a six inch main from the main feeder on the Alemite property to Dufferin Avenue lead. This work is being carried on with little interruption to the supply to the Alemite company even though the main leading into the factory will be tapped. Without the aid of the machine recently acquired by the department, this work would have been impossible.

ELECTRIC WIRING AT HALL STARTED

Preliminary work on the electric wiring of the city hall was commenced this morning by Mr. James Winn, who was awarded the contract for the lighting and wiring some time ago by the city council. Conduiting assisted by Mr. Norman Hardwick, another local electrical contractor of wiring the city hall will take some time as there remains much to be done. The difficult part of the job, according to the man, will be the beams, which are still solid and heavy despite their age.

READING CLUB CLOSES SERIES

The Reading Club of the city tonight brings to a close its series of lectures given by Professor Lower, Head of the English Department of Queen's University. In his very interesting addresses during the season, Professor Clarke discussed English novelists and poets and this evening he will conclude his five lectures with his second talk on Thomas Hardy, discussing particularly his poetry and the drama "The Dynasts".

A number of reading groups were organized this year in connection with the Reading Club, the various groups choosing their own subject for study. Canadian poetry, drama, and the novel were some of the themes among following up Professor Clarke's lectures by studying the authors about whom he spoke. The various groups then came together monthly to hear Professor Clarke.

OLIVER BENN IS TOLD TO DEPART

Thursday morning early the city police answered a summons to a house on Bonisteel street, where it was said a man, to whom the occupants of the house were giving breakfast, was acting in a very strange manner.

Constable Evans and Taylor went to the house in the police car and brought the man to the station, where he was recognized as having been in Belleville a few years ago and who was ordered at that time to leave the city immediately.

The name of the man, who is 29 years old, is said to be Oliver Benn and his home is reported to be in Kingston.

Magistrate Mikel this morning ordered Benn to leave the city at once.

DUCK BANDED AT ROCHESTER N. Y.

A week or so ago an item appeared in this paper relative to a wild black duck that had been caught in a muskrat trap at Robin's Lake by Mr. Wm Hubbs. The bird had been banded in the United States and the number was forwarded to the Biological Survey at Washington. Today a letter was received from that department stating the duck had been banded by W. H. Large of Rochester, N.Y., on Nov. 5th, 1930.

OLD LANDMARK PREY TO FIRE

Property at Frankford, Owned in Belleville, is Destroyed

Fire, which with a slightly more encouraging wind, might have had more serious consequences, occurred at Frankford, when the barn and drive house belonging to the old Sweetman property, now owned by Mrs. Thos. Hurley of Belleville, were totally destroyed. Mr. Brown, an employee of Mr. Trevitt Mabee, gardener, was engaged in cleaning up the brush on the hill just west of the barn and as there was but very little wind, he set fire to a pile about 50 feet from the buildings. The draft carried the sparks directly toward the barns, and as the roof was old some of them dropped through and ignited some straw, with the result that the flames spread so quickly that nothing could be done. However, some of the residents of the village side of the street were kept rather busy protecting their roofs. Fortunately, there were no contents of any great value, as the property had not been occupied for some time, although Mr. Mabee had been working the land for garden purposes. A water and gas engine also few chairs, etc., stored in the drive house were successfully rescued.

And it seems that fires, like other misfortunes, have a bad habit of not coming singly, for about 8.30 p.m. on Tuesday evening the light of another conflagration was revealed to the north of the village, and upon investigation the large semi-mer cottage on the island belonging to the paper mill property, was in flames, and as it was of the usual construction of such buildings, was practically consumed by the time it was seen. The cottage, which was erected some thirty years ago by W. S. Miller, then owner and operator of the paper mills, was of quite large proportions, and even in those days of palatial summer cottages, would be classed as a fine summer resort residence, but since the departure of the original owners had been but slightly used and allowed to fall into a dilapidated condition. It is thought that perhaps some transients had been making a stopping place there as it was in a much secluded spot, but its destruction is a loss to the village if only for the sentimental value, in that it was about the only unchanged property land mark of the original property owner.

PAYS OFFICIAL VISIT TO LODGE

Rt. Wor. Bro. J. Maldens Speaks on Principles Freemasonry

The principles of Craft and Freemasonry was the subject upon which Rt. Wor. Bro. John Maldens, D.D.M. of the Prince Edward District No. 12 spoke to the members and visitors of The Belleville Lodge No. 133 A. F. & A. M. upon his official visit last night.

Before opening his address Rt. Wor. Bro. Maldens thanked the officers and members of the lodge for their many kind words and expressed to them his gratefulness. Rt. Wor. Bro. Maldens opened his remarks with a preface on the subject of life so as the members present could understand the reality of the message he wished to convey to them. The speaker outlined the fundamental meanings of life by stating that this word is perhaps more used than any other word in the English language and more especially during the past twenty five years, when life has changed more than any period in the annals of history. He pointed out, that there were many phases to life, which began at birth and ended only in death. "Life is what you make it, I cannot alter your life although I may suggest many ideals, therefore, I say life is what you men make it and it is in your hands to try to make your particular life one of happiness." said the speaker, after he had concluded that if the members would follow the teachings of Freemasonry they would be better men and finer citizens.

Origin of Masonry.

When relating the significance and relation of Freemasonry and life Rt. Wor. Bro. Maldens pointed out in personal meaning and teaching of Masonry which he considered to be knowledge of nature and the power of various operations towards the uplifting of mankind. The speaker then went on to relate the origin of Masonry and how it had spread to all corners of the globe due to its learnings and teachings which always pointed to the uplifting of man. He also pointed out that Masonry during all the ages had always communicated enough teachings to the outside world to express their knowledge that might be generally useful to the uplifting of mankind, but had never allowed teachings which might be harmful in any respect.

"Masonry gave the world agriculture, astronomy, arithmetic, music, poetry, chemistry, geometry, government and religion", said the speaker; but was of the opinion that geometry was the greatest achievement. And Masonry had handed down to man due to the fact, that both science and architecture had been assisted to limits unbounded through its channels. It was also the first and noblest study to teach the fundamentals of many arts today as it is used by the operatives in their professions. The speaker pointed out, that in days also used as by speculatives as well as operatives and therefore formed a fundamental of the Craft.

Three Pillars of Life.

Mr. Wor. Bro. Maldens, in summing up his subject, instilled in the minds of the Masonic members that Masonry consisted of three phases as did life, namely youth, manhood and old age and the divine mind, which centred so fully upon life as also as profits for Masonry. If they would but adhere to its teachings. The speaker was of the opinion that no man wanted to walk along the road of temptation, but as it had been interesting but the path of tomorrow should be more interesting than this was the way of life and the teachings of Masonry tried to convey to its members, the right path of tomorrow. "So it is very easy to trace and connect the principles of Masonry and its beautiful symbolic teachings in the path of life," said the speaker before he concluded by bowing out, that Freemasonry perpetuated, when properly understood, the moral simplicity and fitness for the changes and tribulations, that followed in life.

The meeting was introduced by Wor. Bro. Fred Chapman and Wor. Bro. Leggoll, master of the Belleville Lodge, thanked Rt. Wor. Bro. Maldens for his educational and inspiring words during the evening. V. Wor. Bro. J. C. McCarthy was presented with an address as a Grand Lodge officer by the officers and members of the lodge.

For the entertainment of members and visitors Mr. Lennox Vanhorn, Leslie and Raymond, played three duets which were much appreciated by the audience and upon Leslie played the violin, while Raymond played the accompaniments on the piano. Bro. Sid Hector delighted the gathering with a solo entitled "The Belle of St. Marys" the solo, which he recently sang in Peterboro and received a silver medal for his efforts.

A number of visitors were present from various centres in the surrounding district and they were called upon to say a few words. The meeting ended with the singing of the Junior Warden's toast.

HAPPY DAY COMMENTS

HAPPY DAYS ARE HERE AGAIN—The depression was forgotten and all entered into the spirit of Belleville days as Happy Days at the Community Dance held by the committee in charge of the present campaign last night on Front Street. Headed by the Belleville Municipal Band hundreds of citizens took advantage of the street parade and dance which was held at different sections of Front Street while the band serenaded the various merchants who are responsible for the present business boom. The gala affair opened with the Belleville Municipal Band playing a short concert at the corner of Bridge and Front Sts. Jimmie Clarke, dressed in his Scottish Highland regalia also delighted a large gathering with a number of selections on the bag pipes.

x x x

Later the band paraded up Front Street, followed by hundreds of citizens and stopped at intervals to serenade the various places of business. About nine p.m. the gathering which by now had swollen in many hundreds, centred around the intersection of the street, between Campbell and Bridge streets where also delighted a large gathering with a number of selections on the bag pipes.

x x x

Under the direction of Chas. F. Hanna, master of ceremonies, a street or community dance was soon the order of the evening and all present accepted the spirit of the enterprise and it was not long before the street was crowded with joyous dancers. Round dances, square dances and step dances were all the order of the evening and the citizens all joined in the spirit of the celebration and to the satisfaction of those responsible for the present Happy Days campaign.

x

The Belleville Municipal Band played the music for the round and square dancing while Jimmie Clarke played the music for the step dancing on the bag pipes. The evening was one of the most successful, of its kind ever to be staged in Belleville and those responsible for last night's entertainment felt that the present Belleville business campaign was one of mutual interest to both merchants and citizens alike.

x

Many hundreds of citizens took advantage of the many beautiful window displays and paraded the streets, window shopping until long after the dance had subsided. Master of ceremonies Chas. F. Hanna and the Belleville Municipal Band were over-joyed at the success of the evening.

Belleville Band blew the blues away in no uncertain manner last evening.

Hundreds of residents of the city made a Roman holiday of the night. They rallied and joined with the band at the intersection of Front and Campbell and paralyzed whatever traffic that was brave enough to try to get through, and threatened to extend their activities until day break. The scene was comparable to an Old Boy's Reunion. The lid was lifted and no one cared to replace it. Acting on the theory that Happy Days should during the war to cheer people up, those who were responsible for the gala event also declared that old man repression could also be chased by the band and lilting strains. They succeeded. Although the street dance was the big feature, practically all the merchants throughout the city, and many points of interest in the side columns of this paper, it was largely attended by young and old.

x

A massed attack was made on the square as the band struck up. Feet played, active feet shuffled and tramped. Old gentlemen danced with young girls, elderly ladies with young looking men. Street lights glimmered on the fantastic mob who were ready to seize any opportunity to dance and be happy. Whirling couples jostled each other, and stepped on each others toes, but there were no sour looks cast last evening. Affable is a word to use "Happy Days" everybody's been talking about I'm for it", emphatically declared one elderly man who was doing a buck and wing jig all by himself, just to show how good he was feeling.

"What's that?" queried a deaf old gentleman who had come up just in time to see the crowd. He said that we'd like to have a week of this. Come on in and see for yourself. Which the old fellow did. They all danced. Furthermore there is a strong probability that they will dance again on Saturday night from ten to twelve. At least they will if Charles Hanna, president of the Retail Merchants' Association says he is trying his best to get the band together for that night. If it will be know definitely late on whether or not the band can be secured.

While the band played and the Front street frolic was at its height shortly after eight-thirty o'clock last evening, the fire department sirens agitated as the hose carts belted their way through the crowds in the down town section to the front of Murray's Hill where a large truck, the property of the Murray Transport Company had caught fire. The blaze, originating in the cab of the truck, was quickly brought under control by the firemen who used a hand water pump on the burning bags and a few other articles which were on the dirt. The truck which had caught fire in some unexplained manner. Very little damage was done either to truck or cab.

MANY STREETS TO BE OILED

Residents, However, May Petition City Clerk Against Oiling

Contracts for the furnishing of cement, and coatings for the city during the year were awarded by the city council when they held their committee meeting last night. Charles Hall will supply cement to the city at $2.56 a barrel, while the Fruit Machinery Company will supply the castings at a price of $4.34 per hundred pounds.

Owing a number of streets having to be oiled in the city and due to the number of petitions, which come in every year against the oiling the following recommendation was passed: "That the city engineer be instructed to prepare a list of streets to be oiled this year, together with the cost of assessments and to have this list on exhibition in the office of the City Hall for the convenience of taxpayers who are assessed for street oiling. Any petitions against street oiling are to be presented and filed with the City Clerk not later than May 16th for the purpose of checking the number of streets to be oiled. The chairman of Public Works and the Engineer have the authority to oil any street should they consider it necessary in order to properly preserve the roadway regardless of any petition against the said works."

Parts of the streets will begin in the near future and the council instructed the chairman of Public Works and the City Engineer by recommendation "to receive quotations on road surface material for street oiling together with a quotation for supplying the material and sand covering on macadamized roads. The quotations, etc., to be placed before the council for consideration.

Due to the breaking of a stop sign a new one will be placed at the side of the Bridge Street east at Bleecker Avenue.

WIDELY HONOURED

The Masonic fraternity and the legal brotherhood mourn the passing of F. W. Harcourt, a past master of his lodge, order and an ex-official guardian of the province who looked after the "infants" within the meaning of the law who had been left bereft by death of one or two parents.

His long practice in his profession, the prominent place he occupied in the life of the province and the training in the highest principles of living which he as a member of the Masonic order received all tended to make a man who was naturally of the most loveable disposition, one who was exceptionally thoughtful and painstaking in the noble office he filled for the Province of Ontario.

Many who do not know Mr. Harcourt personally have been included in his kindly spirit for the surroundings in which they were brought up.

THE ATOM SPLIT

The splitting of the smallest particle of matter known to man has been accompanied after a quest for ages without undue fuss for several people. The earth did not shiver, when the deed was accomplished with no destruction of planets and suns. Most boys would make more fuss over splitting a stick of wood than the scientists did over their blasting of the atom though the latter is one of the greatest achievements of all time while the woodsplitting is just now falling into disuse.

China and Japan have signed on the dotted line of the scenario which have been enacted on the Shanghai front. The western world will hope that this will be lasting and that little tempests will remain undisturbed. For a time things looked none too bright over there with fears of complications. But that seemingly has blown over with a demonstration on the part of the western world that nothing was to be allowed to pass in the Orient which might entangle other nations.

STORES FOR RELIEF

The recent hint of Premier Henry as to the opening of stores for the feeding of to unemployed where supplies can be given them is causing discussion in the press. One newspaper points out that the time has come when the dollar must be the dollar must be secured and that there must be little or no room in this public aid for the middleman. Others condemn the plan as the cheapest and most direct manner of treating the matter.

It is clear that the construction of highways and the public works cannot be carried on because of the large amount of money which would be involved. Direct aid will therefore have more to the fore until employment picks up.

It has been hinted in Belleville that in the event of a decision along the line Mr. Henry has given, a relief board is one the best possible place for the handling of such supplies.

This fact stands out clearly that the control of relief henceforth will be vested in some provincial agency which will see that uniformity is carried out.

WORK FOR PRISONERS

Men in jail should not be idle. This view was expressed by Mr. Justice Raney at Sarnia this week in a charge to jury addressing the grand jury that idleness of prisoners is doing them no good.

Incarceration is intended to be a corrective and as a punishment and work is the finest corrective ever found. It was man's original job and strive how he will he can never get away from the curse of work. He can find nothing in the animal world that rests, for hunting for food keeps beasts fit.

With some men this has been changed. Some have learned to dodge work and to live on their wits, but that life is parasitic and does not attract the generality of men.

Prisoners in the local jail have work though they are not overburdened with manual labor. However they do what work is to be done and are none the worse for it.

OGOPOGO AND THE FISH STORY

Is Ogopogo back again in the Okanagan? He has it is said been seen by a railway agent and the Montreal Star wonders if Ogopogo is just around the corner and declares that he is another of the victims of depression—he lacks credit. How to deflate, counter-deflate or inflate him is the problem the Star sees, which declares that fundamentally the credit of Ogopogo was never better. There has been an overproduction of Ogopogo.

Ogopogo is in another happier day another name for a fish story. But even today the fish story bids fair to bloom as usual for with many of the old interests falling away beneath the bottom floor as in stocks, men have time to fish and to spin fish stories. Good romances may be expected.

Seriously speaking, is there an Ogopogo? Few believe it. There might be an Ogopogo in the wilds of Borneo, which might even possess monstrous dragons, but in current period of depression, of this contemporary in the United States, whose milk, factories and offices probably absorb more married women than those of any other country, directs attention to a survey recently made in the U.S. women's bureau which it was found that only 3 per cent. of these are working because they want to. All the rest, it is reported, are supporting themselves and in many cases their families as well. Not many employers in this country are in the United States, we think, are exercising preference for married women employees, either consideration being equal.—Hamilton Spectator.

TELEVISION

Television has not yet arrived. In the May issue of the Scientific American, one of the editors, Mr. A. P. Peck, investigates field and reaches the conclusion that we will not have television comparable to the home movies set for some time to come. So much ballyhoo has been written about the subject that Mr. Peck's impartial review is refreshing. What the people want in television is to be able to see stage presentations, boxing matches and horse and dog shows. Even then they will look in vain for such an appearance. Here is the reason: a ten-foot square television screen, which he says is too cumbersome to interest the home video-loving enthusiast.—Hamilton Spectator.

A HALF-CENTURY OF SERVICE

Marking half a century of constructive service in Canada, the Salvation Army is celebrating this year its golden jubilee. It was in 1882 long since the inception of its work in the Dominion, that the army has achieved greatness as a nation, and has made outstanding contributions to the progress of the world. In that era of development the Salvation Army has played a part in the steadily growing importance in mining, lumbering and agriculture, marvelous prosperity and industrial invention cannot supply. It has comforted aching hearts and restored broken lives, and given unselfish service to the sick and the unfortunate.

The work of the Salvation Army in the Dominion of Canada has become a part of Canada itself. It is therefore entirely characteristic of the Army that its golden jubilee celebrating its golden Jubilee should also be of a practical character.—London Advocate.

RESTORE CYCLING!

Is the bicycle about to return to popular use in this country? "Cycling" is the term applied to the recently invented thing that it will in the Old Country, for it has published a new and revised 10th edition of its book "Cycling Manual". It has even included separate chapters on mountaineering and tricycling. Pastimes which were considered to be passing or driven off the roads long ago, but which "Cycling" claims are coming into their own again. Motoring, it says, "has such a call sounded through Great Britain as the Call of the Open Road. Millions of city clerks, typists, factory hands, mill girls, can be seen each week streaming out along the Great Open Day Open Road towards the English countryside. There are over seven million cyclists about among the fighting army." This revival of cycling may be due to two reasons. When times were good motor drivers left little or no room for cyclists. Then time compelled many motorists to use their large and expensive machines to storage if not into "scrap" so the cyclists were given a chance. The other reason is probably settling down to bicycles they will find the exercise beneficial to their health. We have not noticed any marked revival of cycling in Canada, but the conditions necessary to operate in one country may also operate in another. There is a key content, in the other.—Mail and Empire.

Where can a man buy a cap for his knee,
Or a key for a lock of his hair.
Can your eyes be called an Academy
Because there are pupils there?

What jewels are found in the coat of your head?
Who crosses the bridge of your nose?
Do you use in shingling the roof of your mouth,
The nails at the end of your toes?

Can the crook of your elbow be put in jail,
If so, what did it do?
Where can you sharpen your shoulder blade
I'm darned if I know, do you?

Can you sit in the shade of the palm of your hand,
Or beat on the drum of your ear?
And if the calf of your leg eats the corn
On your foot,
Why can't we have corn on the ear?

LONG AND FERVENT PRAYERS via radio, on Morning Devotions, seem rather a waste of time, if we believe that the Lord knows just what we want before we ask Him and knows it a lot better than we ourselves just what we need most. Reception is not any better for radio prayers in Heaven than for the prayer over in the bed chamber, and it is only taking up the time of high class singers brought together to sing the old gospel hymns for the air audience of millions in city and country hungry for the old songs that mother used to sing when you and I were young Maggie.

SQUATTER

Let me come back to live but just in sight
Of the blue smoke that from your chimney flies
Spins its pale skeins above the hillside spot
Where I may watch your windows, each clear sight,
Lift their sad sockets of sorrel golden light
To mark the limit where my sufferance stops;
Let me but watch your walk among your crops—
Myself hedge-hidden—in obscure delight.

Let me come back, and pitch my wayward tent
In the far corner of your smallest field—
O my heart's landlord!—nor, if you consent,
Shall you regret the tenure that you yield:
Grant me the squatter's privilege—I swear
You shall not even know that I am there.

WHAT GOES ON WITHIN MIND OF CHILDREN?

Even Trivial Circumstance May Make Abiding Impression

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

LOUIS E. BISCH

What impressions children really are a puzzling matter. One would think that a big birthday party, a lovely toy, some special event in school or an unusual kindness on the part of the mother would make lasting impression upon the plastic mind of the child.

Yet the fact is that a comparatively trivial circumstance may make a indelible impression on a child, while some big event may sooner or later fade from the memory.

It has been found that impressions made almost from the outside which have a strong emotional content are apt to be the most lasting. Just a kind word at the right time may do more to mould a child's character than a year at school.

Children's minds are not as simple as one might think. Children ruminate about many things that their parents and teachers never suspect, for nobody ever takes the pains to inside the thinking machinery of these minds. We assume that we know that—most of it is guesswork, anyway—and then how often we learn! And that is why we often make such frightful blunders in child training.

An infant cries, for instance. Without rhyme or reason. Withholding of a toy he wants to play with is the first thing we think that the person with the child talked harshly and this harshness of voice frightened the child.

As regards an older child let us consider the case of she reads a passage in a book that is romantic, that contains some love possibly even a sex element. The parents probably do not know that their son or daughter ever thinks in such terms, yet what the child has read has made a deep impression on the parents, a marked influence for good or evil throughout the child's life.

We often deliberately place books in the hands of our children that are actually an insult to the child's intelligence. Much of the fairy stories we ourselves read to children are the veriest drivel. Mother Goose rhymes—are utterly nonsensical, yet we insist that the first everything we give our children to read.

Why do we not know exactly what a child may be thinking we ought to control? Why not? It is working logically, and that it is thinking logically is shown by the reasoning and common sense that control mature brains. Therefore the answer to these questions we must always try to give sensible explanations to the child, because what the answer is, let us not try to fool them for they are keen enough to say so.

We shall always impress any child honestly and sincerely on the part of its parents and those that teach it, and we shall succeed with it. If they learn that the parents have told them the truth. Then the result is always dependable and we may be sure to be suspicious of you even when you do not expect it. Then it is time when it is highly important that you question them.

Even if we don't know everything that a child thinks about we shall at least make an effort to find out as much as possible about it. Then we shall possess positive control and asking him questions. Make him tell you what he thinks about you. Try by every means possible to discover his mind.

PRISONER WALKS OUT OF COURTROOM

Winnipeg, May 6.— Julius H. Reisch, held here at the request of Los Angeles authorities, where he is wanted to answer more than a score of criminal charges, walked out of the Law Courts Building yesterday after pleading guilty to a charge of wife search for their prisoner. He was found in the office of Police Magistrate Jackson. Reisch was taken to the Law Courts under police guard, but was unable to obtain a hearing at once owing to other cases being before the court. Police escort and the prisoner are said to have joined Magistrate Jackson in his office. Both left the room during the proceedings without being noticed.

HEARD ON THE STREET

(By Jay. Dee.)

ABOUND THE TOWN—

Work on the lane-way behind Loyalist Theatre is progressing and soon takes effect the new store will be commenced immediately. Foundry money at still in evidence in the city. A local watch repair man has a notice up in his window to saw him coming back into the city last night with a nice mess of speckled trout. Interesting to say exchange, care of Canada's veterinary surgeon, is in every country in the neighborhood of Belleville. Ten million dollars every million of this money is required to be spent in Canada. One of the local sheiks has been parading the town with no socks on his feet. "What is it, a new fad?" I was asked. "Naw—no socks! I ain't wearin' 'em."

A reader suggests a tax on milk bottles. Says if the milkmen charged for the bottles they wouldn't be so many broken ones and there'd be less walks around the city. Now, it is claimed the broken glass is a menace to auto tires and the hands and feet of the children who play amongst it. A local business man wants to know what happened to the bylaw regarding the cleaning of chimneys outside the stores. Not necessarily on liberty of the clan is the spot, but there are on the increase in the city. The bylaw has been busy all right, writer by the various lodges has now been put out to grass. Lads in the city have gone in for some heavy experimenting with television kits. The boy who has been getting the signals in code from "stars" is still getting them now and then. Even the girls are co-operating in this "hook-up" campaign, I've been noticed. What happens when you walk into a store and, while not looking change, happen to drop two bits down a hot air register in the floor? There was a row in one of the local shops yesterday when the manager didn't do anything. So the citizen started in to take a quarter's worth of goods lying on the counter. He took plenty. Then they called the law and made him disgorge. Then the manager intervened the customer. The customer is always right! While the band music was at its height last night when the boys were standing near Campbell Street someone stole a rear tire from a car which had been parked almost opposite! So far no one knows who did it or where it went. That is the second time this year has been taken off a car parked on the Main Stem.

Another seal was reported to have been seen in the waters of the bay last week. Either that or a sea serpent! A considerable controversy has arisen among the farmers of Prince Edward County over the Provincial Act. When one of the aldermen was approached by a transient the other evening and asked for a time the alderman gave the man ten cents. Then he had to explain that it was a "panhandler." In line with theatres and hotels the Belleville cafes and other articles to patronal an unknown locality has now installed the same scheme. If you buy the meal ticket you get your silverware with it. Leafs Drop Pair Through Inability to Solve Hurlers

(By the Associated Press)

If they aren't already doing so, seven clubs in the International League soon may be wishing the Philadelphia Athletics had decided to keep Buzz Arlett (Buzz) Arlett in the National League this season.

Arlett's free-hitting proclivities have furnished the high spot of the Baltimore Orioles' recent drive for a pennant. A surge that had carried them into second place, two games and a fraction behind the Newark Bears, today!

Fielding weaknesses shot Arlett out of the big leagues after only one season in the Quaker city, but Ford to overlook those as long as the big outfielder continues to bang as he has been doing. Through yesterday's game, Arlett had collected 36 hits out of 82 times at bat for a gaudy .434 average and had driven in 22 runs.

The Buffalo Bisons, in particular, have reason to regret the day they let him go to Baltimore. In three games at the Bisons' baseball graveyard, Arlett has been at bat 12 times, made ten hits, including three homers, and driven in nine runs. His hit collection—good for an average of .667 has included his ninth, tenth and eighth home runs, three doubles, a triple and three singles.

Yesterday he drove in five runs with a four-run, triple, double and a single as the Orioles whipped the Bisons, 11-5 for their fourth victory in six many days at Buffalo.

Win Double Bill

Newark, however, gained half a game on the Orioles by taking a double header from Toronto, 4-0 and 3-2. Jim Weaver allowed the Toronto Leafs only six hits in the opener and Bota Mckola reached for only three in the finale. Johnny Sellrik's homer with two on in the eighth broke up the first game for the Bears.

The Reading Keys absorbed their tenth straight loss and Montreal hung up its sixth victory in seven starts, Jersey Yerkes held the Royals to one run in the first seven innings but the Royals got six men for four runs in the eighth to win. Shiver hit a triple and a home run for the winners. McAfee and Poncroski held the Rips to five hits.

Red Wings Finally Win

The Rochester Red Wings finally won a league game, upsetting Jersey City, 7-4, behind the airtight pitching of Ira Smith. The Skeeters would not even have been close had not Jersey caught hold of some of Smith's deliveries for a home run with two on in the fifth. Phil Gallivan, making his first start for Jersey City was hit hard in the four-and-a-third innings he worked and Trivi was charged with the defeat when the Red Wings scored three runs in the seventh.

Yesterday's Stars

Hughie Critz, Giants—Drove out double and three singles, scored two runs and batted in two against the Cardinals.

Ernest Lombardi, Reds—Accounted for four runs against Brooklyn with home run and triple.

Bill Clark, Robins—Scattered the nine hits and beat them 2-0.

Lin Storti, Browns—His four singles drove in four runs against the Red Sox.

Lefty Grove, Athletics—Stopped Indians with six hits and struck out five.

By The Observer

In preparation for their opening game of the season we notice that the Oshawa "Dukes" are practising on the Trenton City rink. The "Dukes" will play the Hurls Tuesday evening in the second game of a double header to be staged at Exhibition Park in Toronto on Saturday. Mayor Stewart is to toss the first ball, we understand.

The "Dukes" boast of many players on their roster well known on Belleville baseball circles. Pitchers like "Duke" Dalsky, "Sherry" Ogden, Matty Malbeen and Lefty Wills will do the hurling for the Motor City crew this season. Other Oshawa players who have earned a record with the local diamond of several years' standing are Scott Hallett, "Doc" Gordon, Reg. and Walt Fair, Theo and Clare Elliott, Alex Gray and "Tarzan" Mackenzie. The "Dukes" have no less than 19 players under the direction of Manager George Hill, a newcomer to baseball in Oshawa, and are considered logical contenders for the West Toronto senior loop at the end of May. Walter Fair, by the way, has returned to the game in the capacity of coach this season. The club executive are hoping that Dalsky to have Al "Ty" Tyson reinstated as well. Here's a look the smart club, on paper.

According to dispatches from the east, the Eastern Ontario baseball league will commence operation on May 21st this year with the champion Smiths Falls team playing in Brockville. Cornwall, Ottawa and Perth have also been named as umpire for the opening game of the season. Only the so-called "en" for many years in the St. Lawrence section of the province and is one of the few leagues that has weathered the storm of the game over two decades." "Irish" Ramsay, hale of Ottawa, is again with the Smith's Falls club this season.

In Peterboro the senior C.O. R.U. club are endeavoring to sponsor a city baseball league whereby they can develop players for the future. The idea is one of recent origin, and had all teams in the Central loop thought more of developing players in the past few years would not have had to import playmen, as have been the case, and there have been any scarcity of players as is so prevalent in Eastern Ontario today. It looks as though Peterboro have struck upon the only logical idea to relieve the situation—namely "develop your own" players at home.

Belleville's loss will be Madoc's gain, Corey Scapa, who performed the goal tending duties of the Belleville juniors last winter—has moved to Madoc where he will open a restaurant in the near future. Scapa is a coming goalie and Madoc will not have any worries as to the filling of that position next winter on their Trent Valley Hockey League club.

We have received information to the affect that there are two men's softball teams in the city desirous of the formation of a softball loop in Belleville this year. The idea is proposed to be of a senior nature and to allow other industrial and city teams into the fold. We have communications from two teams to date any other teams wishing to enter such a loop may forward their application to the sporting editor of the Belleville Intelligencer as soon as possible.

We notice by yesterday's sporting page that the financial executive of the Belleville Nationals are contemplating a monster dance early in June with three dance orchestras in attendance on May 15th. All we can say is: "if their baseball dance is as good as their recent boxing and wrestling show—well it should be a dance long to be remembered in Belleville."

Ivan Michaeloff accompanied by Lionel "Big Train" Conacher passed through Belleville last evening enroute to Ottawa where he will appear in a wrestling bout tonight. From there they will motor south to Montreal where Conacher will wrestle next week.

Conacher still remembers Belleville—chances of that being his battle which followed the Hillcrest-Belleville game in 1923—"Cwnie" still wonders who cooked his trees behind.

SEVEN OUT—ALL OUT

The Toronto Maple Leaf twirler, one of the apples in Manager Tom Jerry Abberback, was once the goal of one of baseball's most freakish feats.

He struck out seven men in one inning, believe it or not!

The young pitcher, who is now bounced crashly off his glove.

WES FERRELL HAS FIRST TO WIN FROM A'S

Knocked From Heap When A's Go on Batting Rampage

DODGERS WIN

Open Western Campaign With Close Win Over Cubs

BY GATLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Mr. Wesley Ferrell won more games than any rightslinger in the American League last season, 22 of them, but he still is just a "cousin" to the Philadelphia Athletics.

The Cleveland ace started against the Mackmen four times last year, was knocked out of the box before he got started in two defeats, almost half his total of reverses against all clubs, and lost them all one.

Yesterday, flushed from five consecutive victories over western clubs, Ferrell was thrown to open the eastern campaign at Shibe Park. Possibly Manager Roger Peckinpaugh wanted to learn if lightning could keep striking in the same place, and sure enough it did.

When Ferrell finally threw in the sponge in the seventh inning he had been raked for twelve hits by the league champions and the score was 11 to 4. The final count, after the A's had finished up on Ferrell's fashionable 3 to 2, and the Indians had slipped from second place into third, was 14 to 4 over Detroit Tigers.

Ferrell spoke spoiled what had promised to be a pitcher's "natural" when Kamm led off with a walk. Letty Grove held the Browns to one hit through the first five and didn't allow a blow until Lyn Lary's double in the sixth. His one far and wide with Vosmik on base. Then Averill poled out a triple with a homer, a double and two singles, making his first four-base smash with a home run and two singles and scored the sixth and seventh rounds and defeat Boston 11 to 5. Jimmy Dykes, batting cleanup, held right hander, held the Red Sox to seven hits.

National League

Thanks to two errors by their opponents at crucial spots, the Brooklyn Dodgers opened their tour of the National League's western points with a 3 to 1 victory over the Chicago Cubs. Moore's wild throw from the outfield gave the Dodgers their first run in the fourth and Stan Hack's bad throw in the seventh. It was Root's first defeat this year.

Ernie Lombardi, big catcher, returned to the Cincinnati line up to help the Reds to a 9 to 6 win over Boston and a triple and prove a big factor in the Reds' 10 to 6 defeat of the Boston Braves. The Reds knocked Ed. Brandt from the hill in the fourth and they scored five runs. Boston won hitting honors, 13 to 9, but couldn't get them in clusters.

Led by Bill Terry and Hughie Critz, the eighth place New York Giants slugged Bill Hallahan and three other Cardinal pitchers for a 10 to 6 victory in their opener. Critz collected a double and three singles, Terry his seventh home run of the year and a single.

The Phillies were rained out at Pittsburgh.

ROBBERS MAKE HAUL IN STORE

Trenton Poolroom Entered and Quantity Tobacco Taken

TRENTON, May 6.—(Special)—The poolroom owned and managed by Mr. O. Reading of West St., was broken into on Wednesday night and about $35.00 worth of tobacco, cigarettes and chocolate bars were taken. The burglars gained entrance by breaking out a panel in the rear door, reaching in through the broken panel they were able to release the bolt, which barred the door. The burglary was discovered by Constable Huffman, while making his rounds, a search of the vicinity has made but no trace of the culprits were found. The police are continuing the investigation and expect to make arrests in a few days.

Forms are being put up on either side of the pier and concrete will be put in. A number of trucks are hauling stone and gravel to fill in the portions, that had been washed away.

Mr. George LaBrash, local service station owner, who is foremost in aiding the Kamm's Corners sick Austin car, has now added to his collection a pet coyote. Reports had been drifting around town, where he had a white owl in captivity, on investigation by the reporter, it was found to be not a fierce bird but a timid coyote, that ones seen slinking across the prairies of Western Canada. LaBrash secured the cunning animal from a fur farmer, who has been rearing it so does not know the details of its capture. The animal's instinct to chase other animals is to hunt hunter is in with the dogs, when the animal is cornered he is able to save it from being destroyed if a pet is wanted. W.M.S. HONORS MISS CLAZIE

John St. Church Society Give Luncheon Party For Missionary

On Wednesday May 4th., at 1:30 p.m. about sixty members of John Street United Church W.M.S. were greeted at a delightful luncheon given in honor of Miss Mabel Clazie, who is home, on furlough, from Formosa, where she has been working in the interests of Christ.

The President, Mrs. Archibald spoke a few well chosen words of welcome to Miss Clazie and wonderful self-sacrifices in giving her life to work in the foreign field and proposed a toast to her, to which the members responded.

Miss Clazie spoke a few words of thanks and declared that her work was small compared to what the W.M.S. members were doing in providing the means to send missionaries.

After singing Hymn 254, Group Leader, Mrs. Cronk took charge of the meeting. The subject for the month was "Indian Work in Canada". Her paper was full of interesting information about Indians and Roman Catholics were the first to bring Christianity to Indians followed by the Methodists and then by the Presbyterians. Each church centred on work among the children and built residential and industrial schools.

The W.M.S. of the United Church have nine institutions which care for Indian children and by doing so raise up leaders in the race.

Those now situated are Alert Bay, Alberni, Abernie, B.C., The Hills and Round Lake, Sask. Portage la Prairie, Man. The Crosby Girls' Home, Port Simpson, and Elizabeth Long Memorial Home, B.C., Nelson House, Man. and Improved Day School at Hamock, Sask.

The United Church is ministering to nearly 17,000 Indians in Canada and the Indians are responding very encouragingly.

Mrs. Cronk then introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Hoyle, who gave an interesting talk on the work in Coqualeetsa Indian, B.C., where she was engaged in.

Coqualeetsa means "a place of cleaning". There are 150 pupils and they are taught practical as well as academic work. Industrial teaching is the most effective for the student is enabled to learn practically and when he graduates he is ready for any kind of employment.

There are in the vicinity of this school, five tribes, speaking five languages, but they are all willing to learn to speak English. There are from 12 to 15 teachers and the pupils study for half a day and do practical work for half a day and all the boys learn farm work.

There are 10 departments: farming, where they have 80 acres of land. Gardening, where they raise fruit, flowers and vegetables. Manual training where they are taught boat building.

Girls' department where they are taught sewing and mending. Cooking department. Laundry department, bathing department. Music also for those who care to study it. Christmas is celebrated in gifts, concerts and treats. The students are taught self-reliance and independence.

Miss Jack expressed beautifully the thanks of the society to Mrs. Neal and Mrs. Thomson seconded the motion.

Miss Clazie was then presented with a lovely bouquet of flowers.

The meeting closed with hymn 274 and prayer by Mrs. Ferguson.

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman)

ADDRESSING GREETINGS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—Although Christmas time and its greeting card is over, I want to settle once, and for all an argument. Friend Husband and I have every year: the proper way to address them.

Every year I have a couple of friends who address their cards to me only, although they have met friend Husband. My husband says that they are wrong, and that their cards should be addressed to both of us. I came to their defense, saying that they are right. It so happened that they always enclose a husband-chief with the card, and therefore I contend that because of this they should address it to me. And so on and so forth.

And yet when I address my own cards, whether a hanky is enclosed or not, I cannot omit the Mr.

2.—How is this paper and letter correctness?

C.

1. Of course the sending of the handkerchief with the Christmas card does complicate the answer to the problem, but I feel that the card is so obviously intended for both, that the envelope should be addressed to both you and your husband. The rule is that all cards of this kind, even though they are not strictly personal, like birthday cards, also invitations and announcements, such as wedding invitations, visiting cards and announcements, such as wedding invitations, visiting cards and birth announcements, should be addressed to both husband and wife. And this holds true whether or not we know both. So I agree with friend Husband, and apparently you agree with us, too, for you abide by this rule when you send your own cards. Even though you are loyally trying to satisfy your friends' customs, bless you!

2.—Your letter was one of the most charming and delightful and friendly ones that I have ever received in many years of doing this column. I wish that I dared to publish the nice things that you so graciously said about the column!

And as for the form of your letter that too is perfect in form, in sentence structure, in punctuation. In the text, may I sign myself, married name and bless you for this!) and in the beautiful appearance of your letter. Now doesn't that help you up? And I like your letter paper.

BIRTH ANNOUNCEMENTS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please answer the birth of a baby to friends living in distant cities? Telegrams are so expensive and notes take so long to write.

Is it still considered correct to attach a plain white card bearing the baby's name to a Mr. and Mrs. card, with a white ribbon? If so, what should the wording be on the card?

J.

The form you outline is still the best form for the birth announcement. The Mr. and Mrs. card, larger than the usual visiting-card, carries the engraved names:

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Rollins Wood with the street address in the lower right corner, if you wish. " no name of the baby is engraved on t " small card, and in the lower left corner, the date of the birth. Nowadays we often see Miss engraved before the name of the girl, even at this early age, and Master before the name of the boy. This certainly begins the "social consciousness" early!

If you don't wish to go to the expense of having these engraved, I suppose that they could be written, but clearly and carefully, in the proper form and formality as they would be engraved. And the ribbon, whether a baby is a girl or a boy, should be white.

Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers.)

Happy Day and Sis Saw The Whole Show And Were Not Seen

Belleville, May 6, 1932.

DEAR MR. WINTER:—I see you hustlin round yesterday checking in things as in general, and I was in many of the stores, ad say, most of them were busy, and all were happy at the big bargains—those kids had a great time with the balloons and at knight the old band with Reggie Hinchey and Bert Hagerman playing some good. I didn't see many people I new at the dance, but I guess I was too shaken a wicket foot.

We body got on the street yesterday, or in the stores, and no body got hurt. So we saved two dollars and were so tired we went home and they've got laugh. The prize for my last letter was won by Pat Baker, on Grocer street, or he says two dollars.

We sure have had good time in your town and hope you invite us back for the next bird boys reunion and will sure be here if I'we not in jail.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Make Up? You Can't Live Without it

Say what you will about mercantile bushes, lip smooch like a streak of strawberry jam, all the variation of complexions that are hand-tooled you must confess that without some bit of artifice you feel scrubby. That lovely natural complexion of which we used to hear tell, that perfect skin surface that has never been profaned by a touch of powder, belongs to a prehistoric time. If it goes around now as is—well, it just doesn't. Great-Grandma lugs her beauty grops, using them to advantage. The beauty parade hasn't any side lines, everybody is in it, marching. The beauty show hasn't any audience, because every girl and woman is giving a performance of her own.

It all helps to take the feminine mind off of things that the feminine mind is better off without, bills that come romping in with astounding regularity, the question of what to have for dinner, plaster that falls down, floors that must re revarnish-ed. The trifles of the make-up bit are jolly friends. They make up for one's worries. One turns to them, finds them comforting.

Make-up should not go beyond a certain point. There must be subtle restraint. A factory blush of normal temperature is more fascinating and seductive than one with a temperature of 104. That's the only flaw in some make-up artistries, that pale will overspread the carmine, get mixed with the powder puff, ruin the whole game and defeat their own beautifying aims.

To be able to apply make-up beautifully is to be expert in the details and to know how the face or faces should be treated alike. There is to be mastered the profile, the character of the features, the texture of the skin and its color. Sometimes the color of the dress will demand more high lights or less. And as every woman knows, powder shine is like a magnifying mirror while artificial light will be her get away with comlete murder.

The commonest error is in taking rouge on too low or in forming a round, apple-like blob, which is not natural at all.

When rough creeps up high on the cheek bones and trickles over the eyelids, the color of the eyes is improved, made deeper, more luminous—color-looking. When face powder is placed low, it creates a dragging effect around the mouth. That's of the way with natural flushes. It is just as well to take it for granted that Nature knows her business, even if she has short changed some of us when handing out rose-and-ice cream complexions.

One shouldn't see definite evidence of rouge or lip stick, though it is perfectly all right if one suspects they are present. This is a modern age and cosmetic helps are not unbecoming to the active ladies of this particularly delirious period. Dress, millinery, manners seem to demand them. But there are tricky ways of getting them on, using the perceptive eye, the discriminating touch, and above everything else the right shades.

If you don't know what are the right shades, there are experts who will tell you. For that job the beauty operator is trained.

Powder pads and rouge compacts that have seen long service without meeting up with soap and water are a welcoming committee to blackheads. They grind dust into the skin, force it into the pores, and are a menace in more ways than one. Blackheads invite infection, develop into pimples, sometimes flare into a case of chronic acne.

Try Cooling...Soothing...
YARDLEY TALCUM

MEN and women meet on common ground in their appreciation of Yardley Talcum. It is so fine...so cooling...so absorbent. And it is antiseptic. Skin irritation is a thing of the past that has made Yardley's THE Talcum in such warm climes as Rhandahar and Calcutta where fine Talcum is so utterly essential. You may have Yardley Talcum in Lavender, loved above all other fragrances, or in Freesia or April Violets. At all good drug and department stores—35 cents—in aluminum containers—50 cents.

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman)

THE VEGETABLE ENTREE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—What is meant by a "vegetable entree"?

2.—Should a serving fork and a serving spoon always be placed with a dish that is being passed by a waitress in a private home?

3.—How should asparagus be eaten?

4.—Is it customary to leave a tip when one has lunch at a soda fountain?

5.—What is the very best form for a complimentary close of a business letter?

Alice.

1.—A vegetable entree is a grand invention, and is growing in popularity.....I'm glad to say..... in this country. It is the serving of a vegetable as a separate course, between, say, the fish and the main course. I am extremely enthusiastic about it, for it gives a very palatable just as serving the salad as a separate course glorifies a salad.

There are several vegetables that are especially appropriate for this kind of serving. Artichokes, for instance. You will admit that it is not particularly easy to eat artichokes when they are served with the dinner course. But when they are served alone, as a course by themselves, with a fine Hollandaise sauce and a good long fork placed after one for refreshing our fingers.... it makes a perfect course. Asparagus is to be excellent served in this way. And many people serve beans this way, an entree. Also string beans cut lengthwise, very fine.

And to my taste it is the perfect way of getting all of the enjoyment from corn on the cob. Also mushrooms panied by a finger bowl!

Fried egg plant is the best form, because the most convenient for the guest.

3—With a fork.....not with the fingers.

4—It isn't customary, but many people do it. Especially when it is appropriate to leave a tip for service we have had especially good service.

5.—The best forms are:

Very truly yours,
Very truly,
or
Yours truly.

The first is perhaps the best of the three.

WEDDING RECEPTION

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—Is it the duty of the father of the bride to stand with the bride's mother in the receiving line at the wedding reception? My father very much wishes to do this, but we have had so many of our friends tell us that it is not correct that we are content to pay our respects.

2.—In the receiving line too does the bride stand on the right or the left of the groom?

3.—Is it customary to show the wedding presents? If we do, are all the cards be removed?

1.—If your father wishes to receive with your mother in the receiving line, by all means let him do this. It is quite proper and thoroughly, I think, the most cord- nervous that I al and charming plan for this to could not be done. Naturally weddings are reunions, my f e e t a n d relatives and friends, and it seems so delightful to have the people meet concerned with the occasion. . . . . the bride's mother, who is the hostess and the bride's father, who is the host. . . . . stand beside the bride and groom to receive the guests.

As a matter of fact, you are to be congratulated on having such a cordial and hospitable father, usually the reason why the bride's father strong woman." All druggists. does not stand in the receiving line is that he does not wish to do so, from medical advice.

STOCK MARKET IS LIFELESS

Stocks Are Lightly and Spasmodically Traded in Toronto, May 6—Toronto Stock Exchange market was absolutely lifeless this morning. Stocks were lightly and spasmodically traded, prices of individual stocks fluctuating scarcely at all during the morning. Variations of an eighth and a quarter of a point marked the dealings of the range for most of the issues.

Page-Hersey Tubes was an exception, coming out two points higher at 48. On the next sale the stock dropped back to its former close of 46, however.

Oils were still well supported, with Imperial at 8 3-4 about the best trader in the group. Ford of Canada, C.P.R., Bell Telephone, Brazilian, Photo-Engravers, Cockshutt Plow, Massey-Harris all unchanged. Mickel eased slightly. Walkers Preferred was unchanged, the Common firm at 2.

22 YEARS AGO KING GEORGE BECAME RULER

London, May 6—(CP Cable)—Today was the 22nd anniversary of the King's accession to the throne and a series of 21 gun salutes were fired by the Court Remembrancer at Windsor Castle, while the bells of St. George's Chapel pealed merrily.

The court removed to Buckingham Palace on Wednesday and will remain there for a month until Whitsuntide, the end of next week, when their Majesties go to Sandringham, Norfolk.

FAIR ADVANCE IN NEW YORK

Encouragement By U. S. Efforts to Balance Budget

(By Canada A. Lapper)
(Associated Press Financial Editor)

New York, May 6—Wall Street declared considerable encouragement today from the renewed efforts in Washington to balance the Federal budget, and the unfavorable report of the House of Representatives Ways and Means Committee on the bonus bill.

Prices made fair recoveries, although the gains were irregular and at times by hangover liquidation. Numerous issues pushed up one to two points in the early dealings, then slipped back, to resume their advance before midday. By early afternoon, there were numerous issues up two to more than three points. Trading quickened on the advance.

Oils Again Steady.

Issues up two to three points included American Can, American Telephone, Santa Fe, Air Reduction, Coca Cola, Pacific Public Utilities Service of New Jersey, American Tobacco B, Auburn and Peoples Gas. Oils were again a conspicuously firm feature, gains of a point or more appearing in Standard and New Jersey, Shell Union Preferred and Phillips Petroleum.

Rails were also firm, with the highly traded issue, which sold on Tuesday at 13, again topping the less today. United States Steel and many other prominent issues advanced more than a point. General Motors gained a major fraction.

Hopeless View.

While the sharp increase in income taxes proposed by the Senate Finance Committee were viewed with some uneasiness in Wall Street, Leading bankers have been so insistent upon the imperative need of balancing the budget as a prerequisite to economic recovery that a hopeful view was taken of the progress made.

The gilt shares again reflected the opinion of executives in that industry that a substantial reduction under fairly satisfactory control, may be timing the corner.

Lindsay Couple Arrested For Arson

Lindsay, May 6—Frank Forest, 56, and his wife, Dorothy, 54, were arrested at Bobcaygeon, and brought to Lindsay by Provincial Police on a charge of arson.

The arrests followed a fire which on April 26, destroyed the Forest home, Presbyterian church sheds and a shack. Mrs. Forest was released on $10,000 bail but her husband remains in jail awaiting preliminary hearing Monday.

CARDS OF THANKS

PLAN TO STOP MOTOR TRAFFIC

It is proposed by the police department to stop all traffic during the balloon ascension in connection with the Canada Day celebrations between Bridge street and Victoria avenue on Front street, Murray and Gaterday. The police department were quite busy yesterday afternoon watching the movements of especially the kiddies who were darting out into the centre of traffic to pose for cute themselves a coveted balloon. Sergeant Booth pointed out that as the children in their excitement to procure a balloon darted helterskelter across the street it was endangering their lives and therefore the police department were going to introduce the non-traffic area during the short space of time the balloons were overhead.

NEW THOUGHT IS AT LARGE

Hon. H. H. Stevens Addresses B. C. University Students

Vancuver, May 6.—"There is a new type of thought in the world taking possession of the world and this will finds its expression through you," Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Trade and Commerce said in addressing the convocation of the University of British Columbia here last night.

"I have learned, particularly in the past two years that in the realms of trade, science, are and education, new principles, ideas and concepts are going to take hold," Dr. Stevens said. The older generation now being the burdens of affairs, would carry on but would find it difficult to enter upon what was valuable in the thought, and it was through those who would succeed that it would find its expression.

"In the realm of international trade," said the speaker, "principles which have been in vogue for centuries will have to be discarded and new ones be adopted."

The speaker believed the world would come out of the depression after having learned a much needed lesson. The present difficult times would be the old virtues which had seemed lost.

COOPERATIVE MARKET PLAN

LONDON, May 6.—Economic campaigns among foreign nations would have compelled the British policy, even if the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa had not been arranged, declared the Peterborough and British Industries, in a report presented to the Government during the conference, and made public last night.

If nations within the Empire, how ever, are determined to adopt strictly nationalistic economic policies, they will further restrict and curb their own trade, but international barriers are the report warned. If they decide to stand alone, instead of co-operating with partners in the commonwealth then each one must fall eventually under the dominance of some foreign economic group, "however attractive may be apparently the ideal of the Empire it may be."

Urges Empire Preference.

The federation declared the fiscal system of the Empire must rest upon a foundation of intra-Empire preferences. Disaster would follow if the various dominions should go to Ottawa simply as sellers intent on bargains.

"In the British Government, the report suggested, should decide what advantage it can offer to the British market to the Dominions producers, and these clearly must be in respect to primary products. "It is obvious, however," the report added, "that if the Empire trade policy is to be based on the principle of mutual benefit, the continued development of such advantages in the United Kingdom market must depend on adoption of a similar policy by individual Dominions overseas."

JAPS RETIRE FROM THE CITY

Wounded Rival Signatories Attest Document in Sick Chambers

Shanghai, May 6—The Japanese High Command announced last night that evacuation of the troops that fought the Battle of Shanghai already had been ordered, in accordance with the terms of a formal armistice signed earlier in the day by emissaries of the Chinese and Japanese Governments.

The signing of the truce was a most unusual procedure. It was necessary to carry the document to two sickbeds.

Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese Minister, affixed his signature in the hospital, where he has been a patient since the sanguinary Shanghai bombing last week and a short time after he had written his name he was taken to an operating room where one of his legs was amputated.

Gen Tai-chai, the Chinese representative signed in his home, where he is recuperating from wounds inflicted by a group of soldiers who attacked him on Tuesday because they thought he was going to approve a peace in which China would be the loser.

The closest thing to a ceremony, such as usually marks the signing of such an international agreement, took place at the British Consulate, where Sir Miles W. Lampson, British Minister to China and leader among the Occidental negotiators, and the representatives of other neutral parties affixed their signatures.

An official version of the armistice indicated that both the Japanese and Chinese had compromised. Japan apparently avoided any definite commitment concerning the date for completing evacuation; although it was understood that the Japanese negotiators undertook to get their troops out within a month.

The Chinese conceded to Japan's their demand that the Japanese retire from Shanghai proper, according to the International Settlement, although certain exceptions were made notably in regard to Hongkew and Woosung.

A. ST. PIERRE IS PENALTY PAYER

Prosecution Maintained Accused Sought to Place Mallory Spell

Sherbrooke, Que., May 6 (CP) — A drama of international league running that has its background in Hereford, Que., 18 months ago passed through one of its most intended here today, when Albert St. Pierre was charged for the murder of Rene Mallory was shot through the heart Assembly line semi-final at 4.35 a.m., and was pronounced dead 15 minutes later.

The case is one where the hand of justice has fallen more heavily on the man who cohered the crime than on the one who was the agent in carrying it out. Rene Mallow was shot through the heart on the night of November 11, 1930, when he with his brother and another man was discovered seeding a cache of St. Pierre's liquor on a farm at Hereford.

It was conceded by the prosecution during the trial that St. Pierre had not fired the bullet that killed Mallory. The Crown's theory was, however, that St. Pierre was the author of the plot to lure the young Vermont man across the border so that he could be killed. The prosecution maintained St. Pierre had deliberately sought to give Mallory the appearance of being a thief so that he could be shot in apparent defence of property.

PROSPECT FOR MUCH FRUIT

"Colder weather than usually experienced at this time of the year has slowed up the budding and blossoming of fruit in orchards throughout the district appreciably," it is estimated that the trees are from one to two weeks behind time at present. This state of affairs however has occasioned no alarm among the orchardists who prefer to be well pleased with the conditions at present. They point out that frost is still to be expected in the district, as happened as late night and early this morning, and if the trees had been forced ahead by the warmer weather the buds which would have been well advanced would in all probability suffer heavily as has been done in past years. With the lateness of the buddine the trees will be advanced far enough to initiate little possibility of damage and the trees will not be harmed. Prospects of a bumper crop at present are excellent.

Seeding operations on other farms have been almost finished with and there remains little to be done by the farmers in that line. They also have been delayed for some time on account of cold weather and rain.

Direct rays of the sun are being used in forest service entomologists in exterminating destructive beetles.

"TARZAN THE APE MAN" VIVID ROMANTIC ADVENTURE FILM OPENS AT THE BELLE TODAY

Tarzan, "The Ape Man," Metro's new talking version of the famous Edgar Rice Burroughs story, holds a lot of surprises for those who see it at the Belle Theatre this week. In the first place, who do you suppose plays Tarzan? Name all the movie stars you can think of, and you're still wrong. Now start over —the would be the ideal Tarzan—a while man strong enough to hold his own among the beasts of the jungle, attractive enough to gain the affection of a civilized woman? Obviously, the requirement is physical perfection; and by going into the world of international sport, the perfect type was found in Johnny Weissmuller, world swimming champion. If you doubt that swimming develops grace and muscle, just watch Weissmuller swing from tree to tree with the easy nonchalance he developed in swim dives.

Maureen O'Sullivan, the perfect type selected to play opposite Weissmuller, is equally well cast for the role of the warm-hearted little heroine; and Neil Hamilton and C. Aubrey Smith are very good indeed as the two white traders who venture into the jungle for ivory.

Needless to say, they find settlement that will keep you in suspense throughout the picture. Will they escape the deadly ingenuity of the Elephants? Will they escape the deadly ingenuity of the pygmies? Will Tarzan persuade the girl to stay in the jungle? Maybe you know the story, and can answer these questions. But you'll hold your breath just the same, as new dangers and a new audacity in telling the tale of life and death and love unfolds.

"Tarzan, The Ape Man" is a talking picture that will make you gasp with astonishment and wonder. When the hippos resent the intrusion of canoes, and the everturned craft spill white and native rovers into water swarming with crocodiles, you'll catch your breath and pray that the white men's guns will shoot straight.

On the other hand, Tarzan's friends the monkeys, emotional and impulsive creatures, hardly deserve to be shot; and in the scrap between them and the white invaders your sympathy will be with the girl, will be with the apes. Maureen O'Sullivan was an excellent choice for the role of the warm-hearted little heroine; and Neil Hamilton and C. Aubrey Smith are very good indeed as the two white traders who venture into the jungle for ivory.

Needless to say, they find settlement that will keep you in suspense throughout the picture. Will they escape the deadly ingenuity of the Elephants? Will they escape the deadly ingenuity of the pygmies? Will Tarzan persuade the girl to stay in the jungle? Maybe you know the story, and can answer these questions. At The Capitol

A REAL PROGRAMME AT THE CAPITOL

Today and Saturday spells happiness at the Capitol Theatre where "Racing Youth," a comedy starring those unique farceurs, "Slim" Summerville and Louise Fazenda, and "Sunny" the happy go-lucky musicale starring Marylin Miller are being offered on the same program.

"Racing Youth"

Carl Laemmle, Jr., boss of Universal productions, has shown an unusual knack of producing the right thing at the opportune time. There has been no automobile racing picture made this year, and "Racing Youth" contains all the thrills which were ever packed in any race.

In addition to two automobile races, one on the track and the other through the heart of Los Angeles, "Racing Youth" has a strong romantic element and is topped off with splendid comedy. No need to take anyone's word for the comedy. It is supplied by that lanky comedian, Slim Summerville, and by Louise Fazenda, who has added her remarkable talent to comedies without number. Others in the cast include June Clyde, Frank Albertson, Otis Harlan, Forrest Stanley and Arthur Stuart Hull.

"Sunny"

"Sunny" is a delightful romance, and abounds in some of the cleverest comedy that has come to the screen for a long time. It is easy to understand why "Sunny" ran for three years in New York with Marilyn Miller as the star.

"Sunny" has the quaint and glamorous background in its early sequences of a small circus, playing at Southampton, England. Miss Miller, in the title role, is a bareback rider and a dancer. She is secretly in love with Lawrence Gray, a young society man whom she had previously met. He is intrigued by her, but does not realize that he loves her. He is engaged to a society girl and the party is sailing from Southampton to New York, when he runs into Sunny's circus, and renews his acquaintance.

One of the highly entertaining sequences of "Sunny" is the scene where she escapes from a carnival wagon where her father (O. P. Heggie) has locked her, in overalls, a mistaken for a dock worker, and is literally kicked onto shipboard, where she becomes a stowaway.

O. P. Heggie, the versatile character comedian, lends sparkle gaiety to "Sunny." His performance, as always, is of the highest calibre.

As the plot unfolds, Sunny marries Jim, played by Joe Donahue, in order to get into America. The scene then moves on to a fashionable summer resort where Jim has established a gymnasium.

Joe Donahue is a new name to moviegoers, but his winning Irish personality instantly establishes him as a coming figure in movie stardom. He is a brother of the late Jack Donahue, of stage fame. He sings and dances well, and is an admirable partner for Miss Miller. Lawrence Gray is highly effective in the romantic leading role opposite her.

The last complete shows commence today and Saturday at 8.30 p.m.

TOOK $100,000 TO FIND BABY NOW ARRESTED

Private Detective Charged With Swindle in Lindbergh Kidnapping

MONEY VANISHES

Accused Tells Weird Story of How He Gave Up Ransom

VV4fJ,VH—zb—AYLS (ch)YIDVaVVl

Washington, May 6 (CP)—Gaston B. Means, former special investigator for the department of justice was arrested yesterday on a charge of larceny after trust" and accused of taking $100,000 from Mrs. Edward B. McLean on the promise that he would recover the Lindbergh baby.

Means pleaded not guilty when arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham. Marriage and bail was set at $100,000 over the vigorous protest of his counsel Means could not make bail and he was taken to the District of Columbia jail where he will be held, unless he obtains bail in the meantime, until Tuesday when he will have another hearing.

Means, the United Press learned, told Mrs. McLean a fantastic story through several states and to the Lindbergh home, promising first to produce the baby at Aiken, S.C., and again at Bermuda.

About the middle of March Means told her he would hand over the baby at Aiken. She drove there with her maid, butler and chauffeur, but Means failed to appear at her son's cottage, Means met her and asked for more money. He was at this time that Mrs. McLean became definitely suspicious. A few days in ElPaso she returned to Washington and put the whole story before her attorneys.

Claims Lindbergh Approved

Mrs. McLean is the wife of the wealthy Washington and Cincinnati publisher. She is well known in the social and official life of Washington and is the owner of the famous Hope diamond. She declined to be interviewed yesterday but Albert Fox, an attorney, issued a statement in which he said Mrs. McLean engaged Means to assist in the Lindbergh kidnapping case with the full approval of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Means, Fox said, told Mrs. McLean he would take half of the $50,000 himself and give the remainder to the kidnappers, with whom he claimed he was in contact.

If the charge against Means is substantiated it will bring $15,000 the money that has been paid to Means the famous baby without result.

Fox's version of the story is:

Mrs. McLean became interested in the Lindbergh kidnapping case and believed the child might be returned through the medium of the Catholic Church. Accordingly she got in touch with Father Francis X. Hurney, well known Washington priest, who worked on the case.

The idea of employing Means as intermediary occurred to Mrs. McLean after the child had been stolen from Lindbergh's cousin, who lives here. Land agreed to help and early in March went to New Jersey to confer with Lindbergh and Col. Henry Breckinridge, Lindbergh's attorney. Lindbergh gave his consent to Mrs. McLean's investigation and offered to endorse her should she be instrumental in recovering the child.

Knew He Was Crooked

Mrs. McLean knew Means had served a sentence in Atlanta penitentiary for conspiracy to violate the prohibition laws.

Mrs. McLean, Father Hurney, Land and Means met at Mrs. McLean's home.

"I know the very man who did it," Fox quoted Means as saying. "When I was in Atlanta some of the other prisoners suggested to me that he and I should kidnap the baby."

Mrs. McLean gave him several thousand dollars for expenses, and Means then went to take $100,000 and keep half of it himself, Fox said. On the evening of March 7 George W. White, President of the Metropolitan National Bank, delivered to Mrs. McLean in her home $100,000 in ten and twenty dollar bills. She gave it to Means. No record was kept of the serial number of the bills.

While Means was in Atlanta a general way of Mrs. McLean's activities he was in communication. Means had been brought into the case.

Money Never Returned

Means took the money to his home in Cherry Chase, Md., a Washington suburb. Throughout March Means promised delivery of the baby "at least 20 times within 24 hours, and once said he had held the baby in his arms."

"But Means had alibi after alibi. Always something would happen. Hijackers would head off the kidnappers and scare them away or else something else would happen," Fox said.

Chiefly Conc erning Tails

By Thornton W. Burgess

As he sat there next to Jerry that tail was right in front of Jerry.

Each one hath Mother Nature given
With something that for him is best.
—Jerry Muskrat.

It is true. Old Mother Nature knows the needs of each, and each is provided with something especially suited to those needs, something which perhaps no one else has. If you envy some one else what they possess, you may be sure that some one envies you what you possess. And it is more than likely that the thing you envy some one else wouldn't do for you at all.

Jerry Muskrat, who was making his first visit to the pond of Paddy the Beaver deep in the Green Forest, and so seeing Paddy and Mrs. Paddy for the first time, couldn't keep his eyes from their tails as they sat on the roof of their house. Never had he seen such tails. Never had he dreamed that anyone could have such tails. Paddy's was a little the biggest, but then Paddy was a little the biggest.

As he sat there next to Jerry that tail was right in front of Jerry. Somehow it didn't look like a tail. Probably this was because it was so unlike any other tail that Jerry ever had seen. It was flat and very broad and fairly thick. It looked clumsy. It looked as if it would be more of a burden than an aid. Certainly it wasn't for ornament; there was no beauty to it.

"I beg your pardon," said Jerry at last, but I can't help looking at your tail. Never have I seen a tail like it."

"And you never will," interrupted Paddy, excepting on another Beaver."

"Don't you find it rather in your way?" continued Jerry.

"In my way?" exclaimed Paddy in a tone of surprise. "At all. In my way! I should say not! I'll venture to say that I get three times as much use from my tail as you do from yours. What do you use that flat-sided tail of yours for anyway?"

"I use it to signal with and to steer with when I am swimming, and sometimes to help in swimming," replied Jerry promptly. "I don't know what I would do without my tail."

Paddy chuckled. "You haven't learned any use for your tail that I do not have for mine," said he. "But I have other uses besides. When you signal with your tail I presume you hit the water with it."

"That's right," replied Jerry. "I'll show you."

He slipped into the water and floated there for an instant. Suddenly he lifted his rubbery tail, turned it so the flat side would strike the water, brought it down sharply and instantly jumped beneath the surface. In a moment he reappeared. "That is the way we Muskrats signal danger," said he as he climbed back on the roof of Paddy's house.

Paddy nodded approvingly. "We Beavers do much the same thing when we are in the water," said he. "Now I'll show you how we do it."

In his turn he slipped into the water. He lifted his broad, flat tail and when he brought it down on the water it made such a report that Jerry jumped. It made him think of the report of a terrible gun. Then Paddy plunged just as Jerry did. When he came up he was some distance out in the pond. "Come over here with me and I will show you other uses for my tail," said he.

Jerry dived in and swam after him. Paddy led the way to the shore and waddled out to a young tree. At the foot of this he sat up with his tail out behind him as a support. He called Jerry's attention to this. "Sometimes I use it to sit on," said he and doubled it under then to show Jerry how.

"And I use it to signal with on land just as I do in the water," continued Paddy. "When I am cutting a tree and it is about to fall I warn Mrs. Paddy to look out and I do it with my tail this way." He brought his tail down on the ground just as he had done on the water, and again it made Jerry jump.

"I wish I had a tail like yours," sighed Jerry.

$14,000 BANK ACCOUNT LEFT

Toronto Woman Believed Heiress of Supposed Pauper

Toronto, May 5—"If I get anything like $14,000, I'll not deny myself a single thing," declared Miss Maggie Costello, 216 Lippincott St., when Coroner Obadiah Markle, died in Hamilton a month ago, learning that amount—much to everybody's surprise.

This confession was jubilantly genuine. "I have had to deny myself a long time," Miss Costello said, "so, if I get that money I'll satisfy a lot of ancient desires."

Early in April Markle died in Hamilton, apparently a pauper. For some months he had been receiving an old age pension fund, to all appearances, had been living on this fund, he was buried by the city.

It was only last Thursday that Miss Costello, only living relative of Markle's, heard of the death. She and Markle had kept up a fairly regular correspondence, and one of her letters addressed in his room following his death.

Miss Costello will pay for his own burial. What is left, it is thought, will be turned over to Miss Costello.

Although Markle had never indicated to his niece—or anyone else—that he had stored away money Miss Costello suspected he had "quite a bit."

"He had me on one or two occasions," she said, "that he was going to leave me his money in old age."

She said she had been talking to a lawyer from Hamilton concerning her uncle and his affairs. She had told him her uncle had money put away, but never knew how much.

"Well, I can't see why you want to put this in the paper," Miss Costello remarked. "I'm afraid if it were four or five hundred thousand dollars I was going to get, I could imagine it. But for $14,000, well—"

BIRD NEST IS PUT IN TREE

Boy Marauders Taught Lesson By Elderly Citizen

The difficulties in which many birds find themselves when they allow their too trusting natures to permit them to build their nests in such a fashion that they are easily accessible by small marauders was shown in no uncertain manner last evening. Robins are the chief sufferers; long association with man has permitted them to become too trustful, but they do not take into consideration numbers of small boys in the city who take delight in stealing and destroying their eggs which have been laid.

Last evening a small group of boys, who were walking down West Moira Street were alarmed by a resident of that street when he observed the fact that they had in their possession a robin's nest which had been secured from one of the many low trees in that district. The nest was filled with a number of eggs, but most of them which had been secured were broken when. Others lay strewn along the walk where the boys had playfully thrown them. One of the group assuming robin darted from limb to limb in the tree overhead and screamed in violent fashion at the outrage. One of the group endeavoured to strike her with a number of stones as she flew by her as she hopped in distracted fashion after them. The old gentleman who stopped the boys rescued the nest, carried it off to a tree near the house where he placed it, but there was little chance then of saving the eggs. They were broken and cracked and even if they had not been, the many moments exposure such as they experienced would have stopped their incubation.

The small leaders and others have for some time tried to instil into the minds of their pupils the advantages of having the birds in the districts, but such education seems to be waging a fight against a tendency to break such laws.

I can't describe a Floating Power Ride to you. Nobody can. It's something you have to feel and experience.

But I promise you a surprise and a thrill.

Imagine, if you can, a car without vibration. Think of the smoothest car you've ever driven. Multiply that smoothness by two or more. Then you'll have some idea of Floating Power smoothness. The flexibility of Floating Power. A handling ease beyond your dreams.

A Nationwide Demonstration of FLOATING POWER

Starting tomorrow and continuing throughout next week, thousands upon thousands of Canadian motorists will participate in the greatest and most spectacular of all automobile demonstrations —the Floating Power Ride.

Of course, you're invited. Cordially invited. You and your family and your friends.

Merely ask any Plymouth, DeSoto, Dodge or Chrysler dealer for a Floating Power Ride. Or, if you prefer, ride with a friend who owns a Floating Power car.

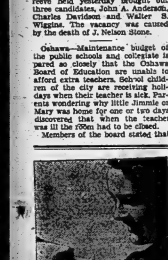
You can enjoy performance like this in only four cars—the Plymouth, the DeSoto, the Dodge and the Chrysler. Because Floating Power is exclusive.

Of course, competition is making lots of claims about riding smoothness. But can they prove their claims? Find out for yourself.

Ride in a Floating Power car. Then ride in any car without it. You'll find there's a world of difference.

I've said repeatedly that any car that hasn't Floating Power is out-of-date. I mean just that. I know you'll agree with me after you've ridden in one of our Floating Power automobiles.

So I urge you to take a Floating Power Ride during Floating Power Demonstration Week in Canada. Take the wheel of any Floating Power car as my guest. Ride for fifteen minutes and you'll want to ride for an hour. For a day. That's how Floating Power gets you. Just take a Floating Power Ride. You'll see.



• • • •

"I agree with Mr. Chrysler 100 per cent. And every Plymouth, DeSoto, Dodge and Chrysler dealer in Canada is ready to prove the truth of his statements. Take a Floating Power Ride —and discover things!"

Vancouver, May 6.—The Vancouver Sun published the following:

"Coming as the most significant development in the Vancouver grain season, confirmation was secured Thursday of the sale of 1,500,000 bushels of grain for shipment to Russia from this port.

"Five vessels have been chartered to carry it to Vladivostok. The Castlemoor, now loading here, is one. Names of the other four have not been disclosed.

"With Russia, three months ago regarded as the greatest menace to other wheat exporting countries now back in world markets as a buyer, Vancouver grain men believe possibly 10,000,000 bushels of wheat will move through Vancouver to Siberia in the next few months.

"The 40,000 tons of grain going out on these five ships to a consuming channel, undreamed of six weeks ago are generally understood to be supplies for Russian troops assembled in Siberia since the Manchurian border troubles with Japan.

"The London office of Kerr, Wilford & Co. — arranged four of the cargoes, it is understood."

Scholar Rolls on His Way to School

One young boy of this city has solved the transportation problem and always manages to get to school long before the bell rings.

While others fret and fume over bulky books, or trudge wearily along unassisted he calmly dons his roller skates, straps on his large collie dog and then ties a short length of rope to the dog's collar. With books under arm and shirt blouse bulging out behind under the pressure of the twenty-mile breeze the running collie drags him, he speeds to school. Arriving there he unties the rope, sends the dog home again and enters the class room long before the others get there.

It is claimed that the dog will call for the boy at noon and repeat the performance on the way to and from lunch and when school is out.

TOMATO OUTPUT STEADILY DROPS

Cobourg, May 5—Cobourg Canning factory will not handle tomatoes this year but will take peas and corn only, beginning operations toward the latter part of June. The price offered for peas this year will be around $20 a ton and they will be supplied through the threshing outfits at Port Hope, Grafton and Wicklow, Brighton canning factories, so disturbed over the present tomato outlook in the district. Many of the farmers have found it unprofitable to grow tomatoes for 25 cents a bushel and signs indicate that the crop for 1932 will be only half what it was last year. Figures show a considerable increase in Northumberland during the past few years. In 1930 there were 2,000 acres of tomatoes under cultivation. In 1931 it had dropped to 2,000 bushels and this year it promises to be near 1,000 Peas and corn show a corresponding decrease.

SIDNEY TOWNSHIP

Stirling

Stirling—Mr. Lorne Lanigan, of the Ridge Road, after a severe illness in which he put up a brave fight, passed away on Tuesday, May 3rd, leaving a sorrowing wife (nee Miss Lottie Sprague of Sutton) and two little children, a girl and a boy, an aged father, Mr. Robert Lanigan, one sister, Kathleen, (Mrs. Blair of Brockville) and a half-brother, Clarence of Rochester. Mr. Lanigan was a genial, kindly-hearted soul, a friend to everybody, a most devoted husband and father, and a most successful farmer, a Conservative, and an Anglican in religion. His passing at the early age of thirty-five is lamentable and the sympathy of the whole countryside is with the young widow and the other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Clapp, of Sidney, motored up to Mr. John Tanner's home on Sunday and Mrs. Tanner and Doris returned home with them to remain for a week or more.

Scripture lesson, taken from the 13th chapter of Romans was read by Fred Hulin. Mrs. Clifford Lanning led in prayer. Mrs. Charles Bennett (nee Irene Hulin) 1st Vice President was in charge of the remaining program. The main feature of the evening was an address by Rev. J. A. Doggett, of Frankford.

In a very masterful manner, Mr. Doggett delivered the address, which was a challenge to the youth of today. The speaker urged his hearers to accept Christ as their pattern and ideal, in a very convincing way he referred to three incidents in the life of Jesus, namely on the occasion at Caesarea Philippi when Christ questioned His disciples regarding the world's opinion of Himself—from this he taught His disciples and everyone who would follow Him that they must bear a cross. Christian service consists of a life of self-denial. The speaker showed the need of praying prayer which was power to serve. Mr. Doggett pled with the young, to accept the sacrificial life of Christ and thus become useful in His Kingdom. Maurice Bell and Kenneth Simpler favored the audience with a sacred mandolin duet entitled 'Calvary' accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Z. W. Rowland. Mrs. Rev. A. S. Doggett also delighted the audience with two vocal solos, the sacred solos entitled "The Heart of God" and "Have Thine Own Way". Mrs. C. Bennett put on a Further Question test. The Mizpah benediction closed this very interesting meeting.

Stirling—St. Paul's Woman's Association was "At Home" to Carmel W.A. on Thursday evening, May 3rd. After the opening prayer, the Scriptural lesson was read by Mrs. Wright. Hubble, Mesdames Brewer, Jr. and Sr., Miss Brown, Mrs. Ashley Brooks, Mrs. Ed. Fryer Helen and Gladys Fryer, Mrs. Hoard. This play was well acted and pleased the large gathering immensely. Mrs. H. The Carmel Orchestra rendered sweet music at intervals and while refreshments were being served. There were several contests put on by Mrs. Ashley Brooks.

The refreshments, were all that could be desired and the evening was a most enjoyable one.

The collection was $6.40.

You need good health to succeed. Many a man has seen his chances go because he was too sick to keep pace with competition. Often his poor health was due to constipation.

This ailment frequently causes headaches, loss of energy, sleeplessness. It takes the "punch" out of your day's work.

Try eating Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Science shows this delicious cereal supplies "bulk" to exercise the intestines and Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. Also iron for the blood.

Just "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that of lettuce. How much safer than using pills and drugs—so often habit-forming.

Two tablespoonfuls daily will correct most types of constipation.

If your intestinal trouble is not relieved this way, see your doctor.

In the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

field better. And stay there, too." shook her, a very little. "You can't care, do you, about his going? I see, I saw you at the Cherry Lemon tonight."

"Tom, you didn't! No, I don't care. I never want to see him again. Jen, were you really at the Cherry Lemon? You saw me?"

With these old eyes. "I was up supervising the broadcast. I looked down to town and went right back to work. I was crazy. I thought all sorts of things. Sarah headed me off. She questioned me on the hour. I sent me to find Bob and get the truth out of him; told me, in fact, to find out if he looked like a divorce. So I did. I came back to tell her. You could have knocked me over with a coupling pin when Bob came across, spilling the beans and good. Oh, Jen," he said hastily, as Lynn shivered, "I saw Dwight's car outside, spoke to his man. Came in and found you and Sarah. Boy, you're a corker," said Tom sincerely, "if it hadn't been for Sarah—Oh, poor Sarah!" said Lynn, remembering.

"Why? Here, not going to spill it again, are you?"

She would not tell him why. She never told him.

"Tom, can you ever forgive me for putting you into this mess?" she asked. "For telling David Dwight?" she said suddenly, in honest admission. "And I thought I was such good business woman, so close-headed, so loyal! But I had a heart, too, because I thought I could trust him."

Tom grinned. It didn't matter; nothing mattered. Lynn was his sister.

"But how can you trust me?" she called. "Tom, I'll go to Mr. Norton. I'll explain; I'll tell him everything."

"Fool, don't! He might offer me my job back," said Tom, "and I've crazy about my present one."

"Shall do you believe me for doubting you?"

"Sure I do," he said uncomfortably. "Anyone would have doubted you. Talk about circumstantial evidence! And it was a lot my fault, coming back and making you look suspicious. With a crisis necessary, treat 'em rough, that's my motto from now on. I'm good at that—and at making people see reason." He told her gaily and glaringly and kissed his bruised knuckles.

Lynn said, "Mr. Norton should know, Rawlson's there and—"

"Forget it!" ordered Tom. "How much do you love her?"

"So much that I'll marry you any time you want," she told him. "I'm not uncertain of retaining her affection," she trusted Sarah to see to that difficulty; and besides she took no longer talked of leaving married women employees go since business had grown better. "There's room for us both here till the least runs out. We'll go on working, both of us. And writing. And some day we'll get a place of our own."

"You're darned right we will. We'll get married tomorrow," he ordered, "and look here, Lynn, you needn't be worried about my job. I mean, I'm making good. They're going to let me take a crack at the research laboratories."

"I've got a keen slant on things, I think. I've been working on an idea. It has to do with sending out more than one program over the same wave. It would save 'em money. Gosh, I'll work! They're been gasbumbered deeply on one. The air's full of it; biz on anything that will make it for progress. And gosh, Lynn, how I love you!"

"I know you do. Sometimes, I think, more than I deserve."

"That's different," he said absently. "I've always been sorry for you, always shared him with his work; he had the creative mind, I had the talent to adapt and visionary. She thought proudly. I wouldn't have him any different.

CHAPTER XLII

"We'll get married, but not tomorrow! I have to wire home and see if they'll come on to New York. I'll want my mother and father, I mean. I couldn't be married without them," she told him.

"Then we'll wait," he agreed. "Just not long. Mother Patten, that sounds pretty darned good to me. They have a nice home, Lynn, and never have had you. And Sarah—she's family, too, and Hank and Dinah. They have a regular wedding party." He grinned at her. "Going to ask Dwight?"

She shook her head. "He wouldn't come," she said soberly. "Even if I did; as if I'd ask him, after everything!"

"I suppose he wouldn't. Wedding bells are ringing for you, Lynn, and for the Lynn-Dwight set," sang Tom, off key. "See here, you didn't fall for him a little bit, did you?"

She said, "Ph," definitely. "Jen added, rather hastily, that she was sorry. Then, after quarreled. I was lonely."

"Sure, I understand. But he was crazy about you. You needn't deny it."

She did not. She said nothing. She was in no mood to discuss on the subject of Dwight as long as she lived. Even when fear or hurt or more had passed, and Tom, picking up a newspaper, exclaimed, "Here's a devil of a note—your old boy friend Dwight gets himself married to an English show girl, aged nineteen. Peeling sort of low, Lynn!"

But that was still a year away.

"Tom, you must go," she said, now. "It's terribly late. What will people think?"

He rose, dumping her unceremoniously picking her up again to kiss her.

"I don't want to go, but I will. Now that I know I'm coming back pretty soon—to stay."

She said wistfully, "I wish Jennie could be with us when we get married."

"Jennie!" He frowned. "Don't worry your head about her. Slim, poor devil, he's sunk; drinks too much, smokes too much. He told me you'd seen him."

"He didn't understand," she said, low. "She didn't want him to. I'll tell you some day. No," reconsidering, "I can't tell even you. She'll have to believe, Tom, that it wasn't all Jennie's fault."

"I'll believe anything you say," he told her, "but we'll have old Slim over a lot, won't we, and try to cheer him up." He kissed her again.

"Tom, you've got to go," she said, and then, "I'm terribly happy, Sure, sure I'm forgiven?"

He was sure; he made her sure. Presently he was gone. Suddenly almost sick with fatigue, Lynn undressed and went to bed. Lying there in the darkness, she tried to think. But her thoughts were kaleidoscopic. Dwight, asking her to marry her in the spring, in England. She thought in utter astonishment. Is it possible that I was tempted even then? She thought wonderingly of Sarah—remembering how she had been her waiting, her face a mask of tragedy. She turned her tired mind from that scene which had followed. Then Tom—the bruise on his cheek; his collar torn . . .

Tom's arms, Tom's kiss, Tom's proven innocence; her own unconscious guilt, meaning, she discovered, so much less than his embrace.

"Sarah, if I can make it up to you, show you how grateful I am for what you did for me," she whispered.

The next morning Tom called for her, his hours, as it happened, more or less coinciding with hers. They drove uptown in the "new car."

"It runs," said Lynn, "like a dream."

"We'll go honeymooning it it."

"Yes, I can't get away."

"Neither can I," he admitted cheerfully, "but there'll be next summer—and vacations."

He parked in a garage not far from the Seacoast Building. They walked to breakfast and to work, together, from on the high stools. "Do you remember?" they asked each other clandestinely and their coffee cooled while the White Jacket attending their needs asked, "What so early in the morning?" but grinned in sympathy, nevertheless.

The great building hummed all around them.

"Jennie's gone," said Lynn, sitting there on the stool, "and Mary," she added, "and a mess of things."

Tom said bluntly, "We won't."

"Not as long as we love each other," agreed Lynn. "And that will be always."

The cafeteria was filled with clatter and bustle; people tripped in and out.

"Golly," said Lynn, gasping, "I'm late."

She fled to work. Miss Marple looked sourly. "Why the bright morning face? Someone left you a million?"

"Yes," Lynn told her solemnly.

Sarah. It would be hard to face Sarah, she thought. Yet somehow it was not. Later, she was forced to go to Sarah's desk on business. Sarah looked up. Lynn stared at her. Sarah, in black, white collar, white cuffs, her face serene.

"About this report of Mr. Johnson's?" Sarah asked, and picked up a blue card with a typewritten sheet attached to it.

Listening, Lynn's eyes were pulled against her will to the severe door of dark typist sat there, busy. She saw no one else.

Sarah smiled faintly. "I understand Mr. Rawlson is—ill," she said, hesitating.

Lynn laughed. "And how!" she agreed.

"I've been talking to Mr. Norton, said Sarah. "You know, Lynn, I'm worried, Lynn. He understands everything. And Rawlson will send in his resignation."

A moment later she watched Lynn leave the room, walking with her easy, light step. Sarah's eyes were heavy. She thought. It hadn't made any difference to her so far as I'm concerned. She won't speak of it again.

Yet she did so on her wedding day, her hand fast in Sarah's. "I don't know how to thank you," she murmured, "and I don't know how to tell you how grateful I am."

Sarah dropped and kissed her. Doctor Harding was talking to Tom in the living room of Sarah's apartment. Mrs. Harding, an older Lynn, was talking to the minister, wiping her eyes pretty often, crying.

"You can tell me by being happy always, Lynn," Sarah answered.

It was dusk. A little later Tom and Lynn would go away for their brief honeymoon—the end together.

Alone, after the Hardings had left, Sarah sat in the dusk, looked from her windows into the darkness of the city below. Quiet and peace; she should sail tonight . . .

She thought of the thing she had done, the loyalty she had shattered forever for another loyalty.

Though she had not had seen in David Dwight's eyes—a look of utter astonishment, then of intense grief for reproach. She had realized then that somehow she was an unacknowledged part of him; that he had counted upon her as the one stable thing in his shifting world. She had failed him for Lynn.

She was not sorry, yet now she wept. "I'll see him again," she thought.

She loved him without tenderness, without compassion, almost ardor, without honor or honoring. And she had been his enemy. Yet he was a scar that she must carry to her grave. There's my work, she thought; I've that much left.

Strange, to feel so empty and forlorn, as if something had been taken her when for so many years she had had nothing, nothing but work and memories and the hope that some day she might see recognition in eyes grown too accustomed to her as she now was. She had seen it last summer—Sarah, Sarita—for a blinding moment.

She turned from the window.

Standing on the deck of an ocean liner, Dwight was waiting for France at midnight. He stood there, cool and unperturbed, alone, watching the sky line. In the skyscrapers some of the windows were still lighted, pale gold against black.

People moved about in there, did their work, lolled through the night. Scrub women had their obscure, anonymous being. Night and day there were human beings, active as ants, going about their affairs, engaged in these aspiring, terrifying masses of stone and effort.

"Good to be getting away," commented a pale man, moving to that rail beside him, "from the incessant fever and fret of commerce and commercial people; good to be getting to landy that are still able to dream."

He was a poet, traveling first class because he had inherited money. Dwight turned; the light fell upon his worn face and brilliant eyes. Riven poets read marvelous things.

"I do beg your pardon. You're Dwight, aren't you? David Dwight?" Stupid, absurd, but a vague comfort. Dwight's cold heart warmed a little. He answered, smiling. "Yes. I'm Dwight—and it's good to be getting away."

"That's the Seacoast Building?—isn't it?" asked the poet. "It's lovely at night with those few windows lighted below and the tower glowing. It looks like a concrete embodiment of man's most magnificent dream. Seeing it from here, one forgets the toils, the imprisoned lives, the scramble for existence."

It was the Seacoast Building. From those tall towers the nets were woven — nets of speech, of music — and flung the wide world over. Dwight turned away.

"It hasn't passed the Supreme Court yet," he said laughing, "but I've something else to do. Care to join me?"

"Indeed, Mr. Dwight," said the poet, "the Seacoast Building will be just another monument to man's insatiable greed." He followed Dwight down the deck.

And on Monday, Lynn said sleepily, having arrived in town very late on Sunday night, "Tom, for goodness' sake, wake up. We'll be late!"

On Monday, they made a darkly breakfast in the little kitchenette and set off together for work. On Monday, they stopped in the street and looked up, as if somewhere beyond their craning necks there was a message for them.

Lynn said, a little awal, "It makes me feel dizzy; as dizzy as if I were flying."

"It's awful," said Tom contentedly. "I like being a part of it." He looked at Lynn, and especially your working 'way up in the tower and me working down below under the same roof."

"There's a lot of us under it, and darned lucky to be there," Tom said. The street was black with hurrying people. The wintry sky was clear and cold and blue, the sun pale golden-yellow. A plane passed overhead, casting its strange small shadow on the cool sides of the great building.

"Here, get going," said Tom. He smiled into her eyes. "It's great, being alive, having our jobs, being together."

They vanished with the hundreds of others into the spaces allotted them beyond the great bronze doors.

Skyscraper. Roots embedded in earth, towers reaching to the sky. Tom was right. Symbol of man's need for stability, for endurance, for progress, for aspiration. Skyscraper . . .

BRINGING UP FATHER

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 17.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs

The boy was half-frantic with despair. In the morning they would be discovered! Then the changes were they would drag him and Akut forth and hang them to the nearest tree. He had read of Akut hanging bodies in the far West of his mother's native land, America, and Africa was even worse and wilder than America! Was there no means of escape? A last hope! THAT would save them, for gold would do anything!

He searched for his bank roll through the pockets of his clothes. It was not there! Lighting the lamp he looked everywhere for it and at last turned himself to examine the body of Condom, for he now guessed the purpose for which the man had entered the room. The spe squatted in a corner watching his young companion. An hour after, he gave up the search. His money was GONE! And with it went hope.

For all his inherited size and strength, he was after all, but a youngster, a frightened homesick boy, who could think of but one thing—that they had killed a man and they were among savage strangers. Long he sat upon the bed, thinking—how long he did not know—but finally he was aroused by a noise coming from the floor below. Springing quickly to his feet he blew out the lamp and turned to the spe, his mind made up.

Last night he had determined to start for home and beg forgiveness from his parents for his mad adventure. Now he knew that he might never return to them. What if Akut HAD done the deed! Wouldn't everybody think it was his fault? "Come," he said in the language of the apes. Perspiful of the fact that he wore only his thin pajama suit, he led the way to the open window and paused a moment, listening attentively.

Reporter Finds Life Full of Interest Among Little Fishes

What He Sees as He Gazes Through Glass at Little Wonders

FISH RHAPSODY

Just east of this city a short distance, on the edge of the Bay of Quinte, stands a little building of corrugated iron and wood There are fourteen more like it in Ontario, all dedicated to the preservation of the fish which not only offer you a day's sport when you sally forth with rod pole and dip net, but the more plebian kinds which form part of your bill of fare during the long winter months.

Men labor there throughout the hours of the day and night, keeping the water at a certain temperature, changing over the screen wherein repose thousands of little live minnows; they keep the eggs in constant circulation in the waters which swirl through baffle and incubators, and the tanks full and brimming over for the larger minnows which are almost ready to be placed in the large cans and taken north where they will be liberated in some of the many beautiful lakes which dot that country. But they do not, even if they are busy, take time off to show you over the place, point out various features of the building and explain to you in confused terms just how it is that you will but take a few moments to visit them. They will be polite and courteous, but they regard their work as something not to be taken too lightly, as there is no time to tarry overlong or ply them with unfounded questions.

The Heart of the Plant

We enter through a boiler room where a large steam boiler is kept constantly fired up. It gives a cheery glow of red through its open ash pit. The gentle hiss of steam which escapes from the pipes and the wingles with the shrilland hiss of the running water and the pulsing hum of the electric motor which is kept ever busy pumping the water through the channels which are laboriously mapped out for it; the water which provides life and food for the thousands of little fish which swim within. The water also which hatches the eggs which swirl and tumble in the hundreds of over-sized glass bottles on the racks inside.

Passing through the boiler room we are aware of a damp smell. We enter the tank room. Here lie dozens of tanks running the full length of the room. Water drips from some of them onto the cement floor, to run off in little gullies set in the cement for that purpose. Long rows of racks greet the eye; tiers of them extend almost to the ceiling, and in those racks stand the hundreds of glass, elongated globes which hold the different eggs in process of incubation. Starting at one end they run the entire length of the tank, and then take a right angle turn and proceed almost to half the length of the other side. Water drips constantly. Sunlight plays through the windows, shining on the glass jars and magnifies the tiny creatures inside until they appear as gigantic serpents with protruding eyes—move a step or two, bend closer to the globes and you can see the tiny things inside just beginning to wriggle like eels, as hatching from the jelly like egg resembling nothing so much as a cooked tapioca placed inside giganic sealer—but floated in water.

All Eyes and Stomach

The eyes at this stage are all eyes and stomach. We observe the whitefish row where millions of tiny whitefish are being hatched. Long slender little shapes, they resemble tiny darting tadpoles or germs which might be visible, through some super-over microscope. At the bottom of the glass containers the tapioca-like eggs mass and separate as the pressure of the water swirl with the pressure of the water which constantly keeps them in motion so that the little fishes which are being hatched every minute may find their way through the net of eggs to clear water above. As they hatch they drop to the top and are gently pulled off with the overflowing current to other containers all along the line. They pass through dozens of them, getting cleaner and stronger all the time and eventually land up in one of the large tanks of wood which are reserved for them.

Meanwhile the same procedure is followed by the pickerel minnows. They, too, go through the same process of incubation, to hatch and ultimately emerge through the various water channels to their special tank. With the lake trout, the aristocrats of the hatchery and the streams, a great deal more care must be taken. Though a hardy fish once they attain some growth they are very hard to care for at the beginning; they are possessed with some of the failings most highly strung and aristocratic species of human and animal life possess—they can't stand life at all. They have to be nursed and coddled until they evolve from their translated balls of eggs into the peculiar little fish-bottomed minnows which cluster on the bottoms of the screens in the tanks at the west end of the building. Who are employed in the hatchery make it a point to regulate the screens slightly from the water and shake them gently to and fro to keep the little fishes from smothering they cluster so tightly. In shape the little trout resemble a small brown battened pea with a tail.

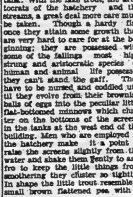
Trickling Water

Trickling water seeps from the tanks and into the long wooden troughs. A constant drip runs off the long tiers of glasses gleaming in the afternoon sunlight. Along the centre ridge, over the tanks stand a few varieties of strange looking birds or reptiles. Two of them are enormous pelicans which seem to emerge from the lake they had been stuffed and hatchery. Along one end is an albino deer stuffed, and standing with wide open jaws amid the greenery. An attendant hurries up and takes a peep at a glass thermometer which hangs in one of the tanks to see that the eggs are incubating, then he marks the result down in a little book and hurries on to another one. On the way he stops to pick up one of the screens out of the water with the little brown trout wiggling on the top of it. That seems to be a sort of perpetual habit because he comes back a few moments later and repeats the performance with another one. Along the bottom of another tank lies a thick, dark looking cloud of something. The man takes a small screen resembling a fly swatter and stirs the cloud up.....Thousands of tiny minnows, who have been lying so close together break their solid formations and swim around the tank.

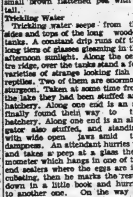
"It keeps them exercised up and prevents them from being smothered", explains the man.

"How many kinds of minnows are now being hatched here?"—a reporter asked.

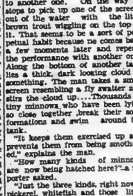
"Just the three kinds right now—pickerel, whitefish and those little trout you have just seen"



In the Lakes and Streams



Other hatcheries, it was learned, have their own special brands of minnows to raise and in the Province there are six stations where specified trout are raised almost exclusively, as well as one bass rearing station. When the minnows become large enough to feed for themselves they are taken in cans to their new locations and then dumped into the waters. Selfseeding after that comes instinctively. They become part of Nature itself. Pinny denizens of rock country lake and stream, shaded by cool avenues of over hanging trees; eating and being eaten.....while away their time until some attractive fly flips across the surface of the still water some night. Then—a strike! A commotion in the .....water swirls and the reel sings .....a taut line slackens. Maybe a small gerger of water shoots up, and there in the centre of it, with back arched and mouth agape, twists THE fish of all fish. A battle and the dashes become less spirited..... then a steady haul on the line. Next the gaff or perhaps a dip net..... wet scales flecked with bits of blood and glinting in the last rays of a setting sun.



A beauty! The grand-daddy of all the trout! Yes, and the chances are he swam as a tiny minnow in the tanks of the hatchery along the Bay shore just east of the city a few hundred yards or so. He was waiting for you. There are perhaps fifty thousand more in the same lake who are related to him. More are being hatched in the building all the time. Not forgetting a few of the many hundreds of thousands of white fish you may run from the Bay of Quinte when Lent rolls around again.

Three are Near Death More Victims May Lie in Fruit Plant Ruins

Gasoline Storage Tank Blamed For Terrific Blast

FIRE QUELLED

Check Up Begun to See if All Victims Have Been Found

London, Ont., May 6—An explosion which shook London, and was heard ten miles in the surrounding country, wrecked the east end of the Imperial Canning Company (Ailing) Canning Company (Ailing) Ltd., Fruit Products Division, Limited, Railway freight sheds, used as a fruit warehouse, on Balmut Street, and injured about a dozen persons, who were buried in the debris. One passerby was slightly hurt. All were rushed to Victoria Hospital in the ambulances, police autos, and the cars of the fire chief and his deputies.

Three hours later, Joe Mocullaki, aged 16, of 563 Ninth Street, died from injuries to the skull and body. Three others were in a critical condition, and fears for their recovery are entertained.

The list of dead and injured is as follows:

Dead

Alex. Polinsky, 16, 311 Ottaway Avenue, internal injuries, perhaps fatal.

John Moore, 18, of 163 Mount Pleasant Avenue, book-keeper for the Catalano Fruit Company; possibly fractured skull, deep lacerations on his neck; burns and bruises.

Peter Polinsky, aged 12, 311 Ottaway Avenue, broken arm and burns about face and head.

Angelo Favalaro, aged 16, of 272 Talbot Street; facial injuries; discharged from hospital after treatment.

Richard Catalano, manager of the company; contusions on face, cuts and burns; able to leave for his own home, 286 Victoria Street.

James Catalano, his brother, 309 Windsor Avenue; severely burned about the hands and face, many bruises and cuts.

John Kukik, aged 17, of 361 Hill Street; scalp wounds and broken left wrist.

At St. Joseph's Hospital

Joseph Catalano, burns about the face and neck.

Discharged from Victoria Hospital

Peter Lenehan, 111 Hamilton Rd., a passerby, knocked down and cut about hands and legs. Discharged after being treated at hospital.

Cause is Unexplained

The cause of the explosion is as yet a mystery, neither police, firemen nor owners of the property being able to explain it. The building wrecked was part of the Michigan Central Railway freight sheds, and was leased to C. Catalano and sons, wholesale fruit dealers.

Shortly before 5 o'clock W. E. Lane, a warehouseman, was about to step into his car at the side of the building and the other employees were getting ready to close up.

The explosion caught all before they got away, two boys, the victims injured the worst in the case, were not employees, but merely loitering about the place. They were young Mocullaki and his companion, Falcun, and were buried in debris from falling walls and roofing timbers.

Detective Sergeant William McCullough scoffed at a story that the explosion had been caused by a bomb. There was also a report that either was being used to quicken the ripening of green fruit and vegetables and that it had caught ignited in some way.

According to Detective McCullough there were a number of gas stores in the warehouse basement, used to protect the fruit and vegetables in the winter time and in some manner gas had escaped from these in sufficient quantities to wreck the building when ignited by a match or cigaret.

He stated that there was no possible reason for any one to plant a bomb, and that such a thing was an impossibility with the staff once and their employees on the premises.

Investigation showed that the door had been blown off the office safe, but it is surmised that it had been left open and that the explosion ripped it off. There were several hundred dollars in the safe, and this the police secured for the owners.

The explosion rocked houses and covered the district for a block either way with brick and timber debris, mixed with fruits and vegetables. The strongly constructed warehouse, used for many years by the Michigan Central Railroad as a freight shed, was levelled, and 2-by-12 joists were splintered into matchwood.

Police and firemen made record runs to the scene, and the police kept back, with great difficulty, the thousands of people who gathered.

PAIR POSE AS POLICEMEN TO ROB COUPLE

Queensville, Ont., May 6—Two well age pensioners, David Moore and his wife, both aged 84, were robbed of thirty dollars in money by two men who posed as provincial policemen and searched their home allegedly for liquor. Police are investigating.

MAY DISCONTINUE PARDON EFFORT

Advice of Clarence Darrow is to That Effect

Honolulu, May 6—(AP)—Lieut Thomas H. Massie, his mother-in-law, Mrs. Granville Fortescue and two navy men, may not seek a pardon for their conviction of manslaughter in the slaying of a Hawaiian.

The sentence of each, 10 years at hard labor, was commuted to one hour by Governor Lawrence M. Judd of Hawaii. They served that in custody of the Territorial High Sheriff and were not at any time confined in prison. Then came the announcement a full pardon would be sought for the four who were tried for lynching a native who allegedly had confessed participation in a criminal attack on a naval officer's wife, Mrs. Thalia Massie.

MEMORIAL IS NOW STARTED

No Arrangements Made as Yet For Bronze Top

Work on the monument at Memorial Park, corner of Bridge street and Cammiton Road, which started Monday last, is progressing with the foundation, as the work requires time and cannot be rushed. Sufficient cement has been laid successive layer of granite is affixed. The first or base slabs of stone are in place and the work will continue till the granite work is completed. As reported in this paper some weeks ago, the Campbell firm of West Bridge street, have the names of the Belleville men killed in the Great War, already affixed to the main panels of the shaft of the monument and this firm are doing the engraving at the park.

Speaking with Mr. R. J. Graham on his return to the city, the first of the week, a reporter of the Ontario Intelligencer learned that as yet, the bronze figure which will surmount the pedestal has not as yet been ordered or contracted for. Some time must elapse therefore before the completion of the monument is accomplished; and probably some new plans and arrangements made by the Belleville War Memorial committee in that connection.

Doukhobor Paraders Go to Penitentiary Verigin is Convicted

Followers in Manitoba Threaten to Quit Their Lands

SENTENCED SOON

Virtual Monarch of Doukhobors in Canada Since 1927

YORKTON, Sask., May 6.—(CP)—Chieftain of Canada's 15,000 Doukhobors, Peter Verigin, last night awaited sentence on a conviction of perjury, registered against him yesterday. More than 1,000 of his drably-dressed followers will hear Mr. Justice D. Macaulay pronounce sentence tomorrow morning.

A jury decided this afternoon that Verigin leader of the Doukhobor sect in Canada since September, 1927, swore falsely at the preliminary hearing last January of George Chutakoff, an independent Doukhobor, on a perjury charge. The case against Chutakoff was dismissed.

Following conviction J. A. M. Patrick, K.C., defence counsel, read a wire he received from Doukhobor settlers at Benoit, Manitoba, threatening to quit their lands if their leader was convicted, and asked Mr. Justice D. Maclean to take this into consideration when passing sentence.

Verigin was alleged to have sworn that he was in British Columbia for seven months prior to March, 1929. Evidence was given to disprove this statement by a doctor and nurse who attended him in Saskatchewan in the late fall of 1928.

The large crowd of Doukhobors who heard the decision against their leader made no demonstration. The trial started yesterday morning and each court session held in Yorkton court house, has been attended by throngs of Doukhobors.

Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the 1st Yorkton Regiment and Yorkton police have stood ready to deal with any disturbance that might occur.

Virtually a Monarch

Verigin, president of the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood, virtually a monarch to Doukhobors in Saskatchewan, British Columbia and Manitoba who have not strayed from the sect's main body was arrested at Verigin, Sask., on March 13. He was remanded for trial on bail of $10,000.

Chutakoff, on May 2 was broke away from the Doukhobor colonies and acquired land of his own, purchased a quarter section of land from the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood. Chutakoff said he paid Verigin or his officers $1,200 for the property, but Verigin denied the payment had been made and last November secured a civil action against Chutakoff.

Chief Justice T. C. Brown dismissed Verigin's action, on January 27 Verigin said a perjury charge against Chutakoff was justified at the hearing but again on the decision entered the independent Doukhobor. As he left the Yorkton court house Verigin was arrested and charged with having attempted to dissuade witnesses from giving evidence by threats. He was released on $18,000 bail and remanded for trial in May.

Two days after Verigin's arrest, Peter Kaloloff attempted to commit suicide by slashing his throat. Kaloloff, an uncle of Wasyl Konkin who had laid the charges against Verigin, later was committed to a mental hospital.

Head Since 1927

Verigin has been head of the Doukhobors since he arrived in Canada in September, 1927, from Russia. He succeeded his father, Peter Verigin 1st., who was killed on October 29, 1924, when a bomb wrecked a passenger train near Farron, B.C.

Except for what he was divulged about himself, little is known of Verigin's activities in Russia. What he gave evidence at Chutakoff's preliminary hearing, the Doukhobor leader told the court he was a fully elected Councillor. He said he had twice been sentenced to death in Russia, served two years' imprisonment and escaped the death penalty on condition he left the country.

Doukhobor settlers in Canada sent Verigin $18,000 with which to come to the Dominion, he said, and added he left 2,000 cattle behind which the Soviet Government confiscated. Verigin testified he had accumulated $ 20,000 since coming to Canada.

LIGHTS PLACED ON HORSESHOE COURTS

Daylight saving —or the lack of it— holds no grief or will act as no deterrent to local horseshoe pitching enthusiasts this year, and with recent improvements made to the court the ringing clink of the irons will probably be heard far into the night.

Yesterday one of the local champions, Mr. Ed. Gartley completed the work of installing a large floodlight at one side of the court behind the Arena, which will light the whole scene sufficiently so that even the barest "ringer" may be observed and measured with the closest scrutiny. With other lights at the side of the Arena the court promises to be one of the most brilliantly lighted spots in town.

Several recruits have this year been added to the ranks of the addicts and it is expected that out of the material some new champ may emerge.

POISON FOUND IN ROOMS OF ASSASSIN

France Votes in Grief Over Slain President

Differences Forgotten

Truce Declared on News of Attack on PRESIDENT

CRIME DETESTED

No Prediction as to Result of Assassination on Election

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Paris, May 7.—France will vote tomorrow in silence in common sorrow.

For the death of President Paul Doumer—venerable head of the Republic, from wounds suffered at the hands of a fanatic, has stilled all political differences, even turmoil. It is the eve of the critical second ballot of the general election in the Chamber of Deputies.

At the news of the attack—receive at first with incredulity and then with indignant horror—all political and group activities ceased. Meetings were abandoned, important speeches were hurriedly handed in notes to the press.

Parties Awaken

Today's papers contained little reflection of the political campaign that has been waging in every department of France for weeks.

Royalist and Socialist and Communist on the left, all French sentiment became, with one voice, a detestation of the crime committed by Paul Gorgulov. The accused left, instanced by the Communist organ L'Humanite, seized on Gorgulov's declaration that he was a Russian fascist to charge that the French government was responsible for "infection" of White Russians in Paris, where there is a large colony of them.

"For our part," writes Leon Blum, head of the important Socialist party, in his own population, "we should be ashamed to defend the declarations of a madman to stir up public opinion against the White Russians in Paris, whose military organizations have undergone a tolerance.

Menace of Mad Folk.

"For it is once more a question of one of those madmen without a straight jacket whose menace prowls around the heads of states and surprises even great precautions.

What effect the assassination will have on the result of the second ballot tomorrow no one will know till the returns come in. There are 619 seats in the chamber, 361 are still to be filled. Yet in his death Paul Doumer may have done more to still party differences in a time of world crisis than he was able to do even in life.

Simple Ways.

Doumer's simple and unassuming ways endeared him to Frenchmen and Frenchwomen in every degree. In the last cabinet crisis, when Premier Tardieu resigned Pierre Laval, he sought to secure for France a stable government, which would settle the moderate forces.

"Doumer's death has opened," comments Le Journal, "in the middle of grave external circumstances and in the midst of internal battle. Already the chiefs have declared a truce. It is not only a humanitair said there is some good in even the worst things. If misfortune brings together,in common affliction the men who are divided, it changes no pieces—may not Paul Doumer once more have served France in reconciling her children?

The cabinet met today under Premier Tardieu to discuss the whole situation, as well as to arrange funeral details in conjunction with Doumer's widow.

Scene at Exhibition as Gayety is Changed to Slaughter

BY JOSEPH E. SHARKEY
(Associated Press Staff Correspondent)

Paris, May 7.—The body of Paul Doumer, beloved and venerable 75-year-old president of France, lay in state today in the office of the Presidential Palace today, the victim of an assassin's gun, while France prun end to end, was bowed in sorrow and grief.

After lingering throughout the night in a coma and delirium, while a staff of physicians worked feverishly in a vain attempt to save his life, the president died at 4.37 a.m., just as the first light of dawn crept over the cold stone walls of Beaujon Hospital, where he was taken after the fatal shooting yesterday.

Funeral on Thursday

The funeral will be held Thursday, it was decided shortly before the noon cabinet was assembled in a room at the hospital next to that occupied by Mr. Doumer. At his bedside were his wife, his two daughters, Mesdames Eymery and Pourriger, and several of his physicians.

It was a pathetic death scene. M. Doumer lay on a simple iron bedstead in the huge, bare room. Throughout the night the physicians battled for his life. They gave him a number of transfusions of blood and used oxygen to spur his failing heart.

Hope for Time

For a time they hoped for his recovery was held. Shortly before midnight, after oxygen had been used and a narcotic was administered to soothe him, Dr. Louis Mourier, di-

Slayer Says He Wanted France to Declare War on Soviet

Monte Carlo, May 7.—A deadly poison in sufficient quantity to wipe out the whole population of Monaco was found by the police today in a search of the apartment which was the home of Paul Gorgulov, the man who killed President Doumer.

"The assassin's wife was arrested last night, but after hours of questioning police said they were convinced she knew little of her husband's plot. She remained in custody, however.

Wanted War With Russia

After a long and exhaustive period of questioning which lasted well into the night and included much rough handling, police were able to get out of the assassin, Dr. Gorgulov, the fact that he had no accomplices. I carried another plaol to kill myself because I failed to kill the president and cause France to declare war on Russia," he said.

"European states seemed favorable to such a move, but I failed," he declared, "so I decided to kill the president and cause France to declare war on Russia. I had no accomplices. I carried another plaol to kill myself because I failed to kill the president and cause France to declare war on Russia. I planned to kill myself because I failed to kill the president. At his

The crowd of several hundred had gathered in protest against alleged police brutality during a recent May Day —celebration and resisted all efforts of police and firemen to scatter it.

BOMB BLAMED IN BLAST IN HOUSE

Mrs. Mary Smuk Roman-io, Windsor Lies at Point of Death

Windsor, Ont., May 8—Mrs. Mary Smuk Romaniw, 22, lies at the point of death in the hospital as a result of an explosion believed by police to have been caused by a bomb of some sort.

The woman received severe injuries to her face, head and body and later died without regaining consciousness.

According to statements made to East Windsor police by Alexander Romaniw, husband of the victim, a package was left at the home by a man who knocked at the door. Romaniw says at first he thought it was dynamite and as the house filled with smoke he thought lightning had struck the house. Mrs. Romaniw carried his wife through a window and into the home of a neighbor a few yards away as he cried that she had been shot.

Romaniw was treated with a slight injury to his left hand.

WEATHER DUBIOUS FOR RACE DERBY

Tick On is Split Favorite and Race Promises to Be Thrilling

Louisville, Ky., May 7— Even though the tones were somewhat muffled by the flights of wagering on a less extravagant scale, the crowds neither so tumultuous nor numerous, this was Kentucky Derby Day, combining much color, interest and enthusiasm.

Even the favorite, Mrs Louis G. Stanton's Tick On, Col. Matt Winn declaimed nothing like the support accorded to Gallant Fox or Twenty Grand in the last two classics of the blue grass. But not even the absence of Whirlaway, the Calumet triennial flavor attached to this exciting struggle over the historic Kentucky Derby Day, combining much color, interest and enthusiasm.

After hearing the evidence Crown Attorney Reeve Armstrong, who testified, that the two women had come to him and the Rev. A. S. Doggett of Frankford for relief, he had procured them the necessary foodstuffs and then had followed them to Glen Ross where he found, that they lived. The two accused women later admitted that they did not live at Frankford and they had told the reeve, Zenice Judge also testified to the same fact, that although she had told Reeve Armstrong that she married this statement was not true. His Worship after hearing the evidence found the women guilty and enlarged the case until next Thursday for sentence.

BEARS HUNT GRUBS, HONEY

Capt. Watson Reports Numerous Bears in Vicinity of Gunter Lake

The wilder the country and the more ferocious beasts there are roaming the territory 'seeking whom they may devour' the better it is liked by Capt. John Watson of the Ontario Game Crime and a prominent leader in the activities of the Belleville Rod and Gun club.

Capt. Watson recently spent a short time at his summer cottage at Gunter Lake which is situated in Otahel township in the northern part of that township and he reports that bears are numerous there and that they have been very engaged in ripping to pieces the stumps of trees in search of the delicious grubs and honey. Bees, too, are considered to be a delicacy by the bears and they have been busy being stung severely upon the nose, if which the bear is very sensitive, as is fond of them.

It is clear that the bears will not 'fade from the landscape', when he goes into camp. Capt. Watson is taking a number of young pigs and placing them in a pen. He feels confident that they will prove to be so strong an attraction for the bears that he will have the opportunity of taking shots at them with his rifle from a safe and comfortable station for himself several beautiful bear skins; over which some young lady will spread upon the polished floor,he may perform acrobatic feats of jumping over it himself from falling when he trips thereon.

In the creeks near the camp, Capt. Watson says, the suckers are running in such great quantities that the inhabitants are wading in the water and catching them with their hands.

Gunter Lake is really a beautiful spot and troops 6 and 5 of the Boy Scouts greatly enjoyed the camp there last summer. This summer has been re-booked and Capt. Watson there again under the command of Capt. Watson.

DIRECT RELIEF PROVIDED FOR UNEMPLOYED

Financing Work For Jobless Abandoned, Says Premier Henry

NEW GOV'T POLICY

Premier Pays Tribute to Unemployed For Their Courage

Hamilton, Ont., May 7—Direct relief will henceforth be provided for Ontario unemployed and the system of financing public works to relieve the jobless will be abandoned. This statement was made here yesterday by Premier George S. Henry in a Canadian Press interview address.

"Everyone must be supplied with food, fuel and shelter," said the premier, "and throughout the history of the present economic depression and the effort to relieve it I have worked unstintedly with the Federal authorities to offset its effects.

Direct Relief Proposed

"The Ontario government now is inaugurate a policy of direct relief. It may seem like a step backward when we spend money without getting anything in the nature of an asset but we must meet the issue where we must curtail expenditure. We will provide unstinted relief out of employment, although the latter scheme is preferable."

MINE SHARES ARE STRONGER

Volume Light, Only 78,000 Shares Are Dealt in Saturday

Toronto, May 7.—Price action, while still confined to a relatively small portion of the list showed a definitely stronger tendency on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market in today's short session. Volume was light. Total sales of 78,000 shares compared with 103,000last Saturday.

Noranda, sometimes a more last night from the opening, came ahead in the last few minutes to record a 45-cent addition to recent recoveries. International Nickel was early around $8.15. Elder-do in a few transactions, slipped a couple of cents.

Hollinger featured higher priced golds, regaining about a point at $16. An odd lot of Lake Shore turned over at $125.50, up a Pioneer and B. C. was five higher. Teck-Hughes, Wright-Hargreaves and Dome were practically steady.

Among cheaper golds Kirkland Townsite, Kirkland Lake and Sylvanite Lake gold and Moss a cent apiece and Siscoe, Ventures, Howey, Wasa good, Kirkland and Townsite, Alexandra and Government Road Trust each eased a cent in the lower-priced oil section but Acme Gas and Petroleum were unchanged slightly higher, the latter in fair volume.

Stewart McClenaghan, Ottawa, is designated chief commissioner and Judge McNamara, deputy commissioner. The salary for both is fixed at $10,000 per annum.

Reconsiruction of the board will mean a saving in the $20,000 per annum paid to Sir Henry Drayton, prior to his recent retirement, and $5,000 a year paid to Col. E. Dingman, former chief of the permit division of the system's supernumerary.

Mother of Twelve Children Adopts Two Day Old Child

Quebec, May 7.—A mother of 12 children today adopted a baby only two days old, after numerous vain efforts had been made to secure foster parents for the infant.

Unwanted by its mother, a travelling salesman's wife, the baby was finally solved the problem when she got in touch with a woman who said she would care for the infant. The foster mother confided she and her husband already had 12 children, but there was no baby in the family, but there was

Communists Numbering at Least Eight Await Deportation

METHODS SCORED

Opposition in House Charge Gov't With Ignoring Justice

HALIFAX, May 7.—Arvo Vaara, editor of the Finnish daily Vapaus and Martin Parker, translator, who were arrested on Wednesday when police raided the newspaper office in Sudbury have swelled the unknown number of alleged Communists held in the Halifax immigration shed for deportation.

They arrived here last night, under guard of Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and were lodged in Holmes, Orton Wade and Conrad Cesinger of Winnipeg, and Steve Serbenek and Wladyslaw of Montreal who arrived here yesterday. They refused to discuss the situation, and would not reveal the number of prisoners, but, according to unofficial reports, there are at least eight men under guard.

Appeal Notice Filed

Lionel A. Ryan, Halifax barrister, who was retained by the Labor Defence Council to represent the men, appeared before the Immigration Tribunal held here yesterday, and filed notice of appeal, and may leave for Ottawa to present his case before the minister of immigration.

Appeals in favor of Holmes, Wade and Cesinger, previously lodged and heard by Chief Justice W. A. Mackenzie of Manitoba, at Winnipeg.

Protests against the methods of rounding up the men have been carried into the House of Commons at Ottawa, and it now appears that Halifax, which has been the clearing- house of Communists for several years, will become the centre of an authoritative investigation.

H. N. Munro of the Immigration Department at Ottawa arrived here early this week, and presided at the hearings on Wednesday. It is expected he will remain here as the Government's representative during the legal battle in the offing.

Sergeant John Leopold, Royal Canadian Mounted Police spy, who was instrumental in convicting eight members of the Communist Party at Toronto last November, arrived here a few days ago, and is presently in the hearing. Sergeant Leopold for eight years was with the Communist Party, posing under the alias of Comrade Zmelwain, and was chief of the Russian branch of the party.

Mother's Day Sunday May 8th

Tenth Annual Letter By W. H. Maybee

What a wealth of loving memories surround the word "Mother". How many and the recollections surround that dear name! Memories of Mother, we can't forget, for they are ever with us. The greatest gift that man or nations can have are noble Christian mothers.

A mother is ever imprinting her individual personality on her children. Motherhood has the greatest task which life can offer. It is a God-given responsibility, a sacred trust. Children learn by imitating which leads one to say, O, the power of a mother's example!

There is a mighty power in a mother's hand. There is more power in a mother's hand than there is in a king's sceptre. There is a mighty power in a mother's glas. It made Benjamin West, a painter, and the memory of it clung to him all through life. There is power in a mother's song. It is the best music the world has ever heard. A mother's responsibility is so great that I cannot see how any mother can fail to be a Christian and serve God. The ideal mother is a product of civilization that rises from the manger of Bethlehem. The greatest need of every country is good mothers, and a noble Christian mother will always adorn the garden in which she moves. Mothers can experience life's greatest job and she can always feel life's deepest sorrow.

What a touching picture to the early Christian was that when a devoted mother, as the receding shiloh of time left her entity and no blessings labor in a heathen land, kneels at the manger, and, with uplifted hands and streaming eyes, exclaimed: "O Jesus I do this for Thee."

Dear reader, the most sacred shrine to every individual is the memory of the hallowed ground our mothers and our mother's God.

The greatest forces in the world are not armies, nor wealth, but the moral forces of our mothers.

I think of the wonderful life of Olney Smith and what that life has meant to the multitude of people of two continents, and how he honored the memory of his mother by these words: "My mother's death made a wound in my heart which has never in this day been really healed, and even at this moment though I am over past middle life, I often feel my soul pining and yearning for my mother."

Mother has been broken off close to the ground and will need replacing. This is a considerable job as they are heavy timbers. Another one which becomes necessary to dig them up and install new ones.

ANIMAL DISPLAY ATTRACTS MANY

A wild animal display in the window of Hibbard Brothers, is attracting considerable attention in view of the animal picture "Tarzan The Ape Man" now showing at the Bella Theatre. Since the animals were placed in the window, curious spectators and interested children have viewed the display with enthusiasm and followed closely the antics of those dumb creatures. On display are an Armadilla and an alligator. The shots of wild animals in the picture are thrilling to say the least and many a gasp was heard as the actors barely escaped from the clutches of these frightened beasts.

ERIE, PA., RESIDENTS SLIGHTLY INJURED

About one o'clock Friday afternoon, Mr. J. L. Lowering of Erie, Pa., accompanied by Mrs. Lowering was driving in his motor car west on the highway, about one mile and a half west of Shannonville when he applied the brakes the car skidded and went into the north ditch, where it overturned.

The body of the car was quite badly damaged. Mr. Lowering received a nasty cut on the head and Mrs. Lowering received cuts on the limbs. Their injuries were attended to at Shannonville by Dr. H. R. Ketcalf.

The car was taken to Cook's garage at Shannonville.

Provincial Byrte of the Motor Cycle Patrol investigated the accident.

TWO MEN ARRESTED AT MARKET PLACE

Hamilton, Ont., May 7.—Two men were arrested here last night when alleged Communists attempted to hold a meeting at the central market place. They are Arthur Avery and Andrew Arucharchuk, both of Hamilton. Both are charged with disorderly conduct.

Avery, who was a candidate for the board of control at the last civic election, is said to have attempted to make a speech and it is claimed Arucharchuk distributed Communistic literature.

mother." His mother, while only a gipsy man's wife, uneducated, uninformed, still she loved her family, and when smallpox struck the family in their tents along the wayside, her constant care was for her children she loved so dearly, until at last she told them she would be taking away and beautiful to relate, one Sabbath day when she was a little girl and her folks were encamped a nearby, she followed some other little girls to the meeting house. During the meeting she heard them singing:

I have a Father in the promised land.
My God calls me, I must go to meet Him in the promised land.

That song she never forgot; it brought joy and peace to her in her last hours.

The tie that links mother and child is of such pure and immaculate strength as to be never violated, except by those whose failings are withered by the refining of vitiated society. Holy, simple and beautiful in its constraints, the emblem of all we can imagine of fidelity and truth, is the blessed tie whose value we feel in the cradle, and whose loss we lament on the verge of the tiny grave where our mother moulders in dust and ashes.

In all our trials, amidst all our afflictions, she is our friend. Let the world forsake us, she is still on our side. If we sin, she reproves more in sorrow than in anger, nor can she tear us from her bosom, nor forget we are dear children.

There is in every true mother's heart a spark of heavenly fire, which will torment in the broad daylight of prosperity, but which kindles up and beams and blazes in the darkness hour of adversity.

The queen that sits upon her throne of home, crowned and sceptred as none other ever can be, is mother. Her enthronement is complete; her reign unrivalled, and the moral basis of her empire are eternal. Her memory is sacred while she lives, and becomes a perpetual inspiration, even when bright flowers bloom above her sleeping chest.

I have the deepest sympathy for those children who never knew a mother's touch or a father's kindly smile; and also for those who lost their parents early in life, who had come to know and experience the dreaded love and care their parents had given to them. It is a loss we can never repair.

God bless the mothers of our land, who by their consecrated efforts help to make it a better place for the oncoming generations who will follow after them.

In writing these yearly letters, which has taken considerable time and labor, if they have been a help to lead someone to a deeper devotion to their mother, or if these letters have been the means of bringing joy and happiness to a mother's sorrowful heart then I shall feel happy in the service I have given to motherhood.

Obituary

MRS. CATHERINE J. ACKERMAN

Yesterday afternoon there passed away at her home in Camilton one of that community's oldest residents in the person of Mrs. Catherine Jane Ackerman, widow of Benjamin Ackerman. The deceased was born eighty-eight years ago at Plainfield, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Asselstine. She lived practically the whole of her life at Camilton where she took a great interest in the welfare of the village. She was a member of St. Columba's Church.

Two sons survive, William at home and John of Campbellford.

MRS. ANN ELIZABETH DOYLE

The death occurred yesterday afternoon at her late residence, 72 Alexander street of Mrs. Ann Elizabeth Doyle, widow of the late Alderman John Doyle, surrounded by all of many months duration. Mrs. Doyle was born in Ireland 68 years ago and was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Nevin. For sixty-one years she made her home in Belleville, and for many years was prominent in active upbuilder of the women's organizations of St. Michael's church of which congregation she was a devout member. The late deceased leaves a considerable number of years ago; two sons, Edward and Frank, the latter having died some years previous.

To mourn the loss of a devoted mother she has left a large number of immediate family are, one daughter Loretta, wife of Mr. Jas. Kelly of St. John St., of Brockton, N.Y.; Frank St. John, of Belleville; Mrs. Jas. Kelly, of St. Vincent of the city and William J., of Toronto.

The sympathy of the entire community is extended to those bereaved.

MISS JANE KERR

Miss Jane Kerr, of this city, passed away this morning at the Belleville General Hospital, pursuant to an illness of some length duration. Miss Kerr was born at Port Hope, the daughter of the late James and Jane Kerr, and for the six years ago, but had resided in Belleville nearly all her life-time; she was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church.

To mourn her loss remain two sisters, Mrs. Annie Thorpe and Mrs. Isabell Brown, of this city, and one brother, William, of Washington, D.C.

Best oil cheapest in home, says factory sup't.

"The last thing we'd try to economize on," says the superintendent of a large manufacturing plant in locating oil. By using cheap oil we could have thousands of dollars to each year—but it would cost us thousands of dollars for repairs, replacements and lessened efficiency of equipment."

The same is true in the home. If all housewives knew what factory men know about lubrication, few of them would use anything but 3-in-One Oil in their sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, electric fans, lawn mowers, washers, and other household devices. 3-in-One, a blend of mineral vegetable and animal oils, is the best for all household use, for it cleans and protects as well as lubricates.

Ask for the old reliable 3-in-One Oil at your good drug, grocery, hardware, department and general stores. For your protection look for the trade mark "3-in-One" printed in Red on every package.

ALL IS READY FOR BIG DANCE

Three Orchestras Have Donated Services For Occasion

A special meeting of the financial committee of the Belleville Baseball Club was held in the City Hall, last evening. After deliberating fully upon the subject of their annual baseball dance it was finally decided that they would add euchre and bridge. Russ Wotten was instrumental in introducing the idea of euchre and bridge as an evening's entertainment and H. G. Woodley was named as chairman of the bridge committee while Fred Wannamaker and A. G. Meagher will look after the euchre players. Chairman Claude D. Tice assured the meeting that liberal prizes will be awarded to the winners far beyond the average awarded at competitive card games. Chairman Ken Colling assured the meeting, that special prizes had been arranged for cards and dances while an extra special door prize would be a 4 seasons ticket for all league games played by the Nationals this summer. It was also thought advisable to decorate the hall in real baseball fashion and an artist will secure many trophies won by Nationals in previous years on display.

Chairman Floyd Martin reported, that Everett Sievers Canadian Dance Band, Ab Adam's Commanders and Chas. Goyer's Ron Tone orchestra will be ready to attend to their duties that night and they would supply all music gratis, for the evening. The idea of introducing three bands, playing for dances in one evening is a novelty alone and the committee in charge, under the direction of Dr. Jack Marshall, were of the opinion that with the acquisition of cards to their original plan of a baseball dance should assure one of the outstanding nights in the history of Belleville.

The probabilities of staging another monster boxing and wrestling show under the auspices of the Belleville Nationals on the eve of their opening baseball date of May 24th was also discussed and the matter will be fully decided upon at their next meeting to be held on Monday night.

"And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity."

MACHINERY OF U. S. ELECTION IS PONDEROUS

To Canadians With Simple System it is Amazing Spectacle

PRIMARIES 2 KINDS

Advocates Assert it Check and Limits Power

By KEN CLARK

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

WASHINGTON, D.C.—The ponderous mechanism, full of eccentrics, by which the people of the United States will elect a President, one-third of the Senate and an entire House of Representatives is already functioning. To the Canadian accustomed to the comparative simplicity of the British electoral system, it presents, with its variations in the forty-eight states, an amazing spectacle. . . .

Its advocates assert it has been evolved to check and limit the power of the federal government and is based on the principle that the government should be responsive to the will of the people rather than democratic. Occasionally, however, it has worked to destroy the will of the people.

About 70 per cent. of the population of the United States—that is a very large part—will choose this election, each state electing as many of these as it has senators and representatives in Congress. In all the previous presidential elections, excepting the first two when electors voted according to their own views, the electors will be instructed as to how to cast their votes.

The electoral college, first conceived as a group of well-informed and eminent citizens who would be able to cast a more intelligent vote than the private citizen in a remote corner of the country, is now vestigial. As Albert Hubbard said, it resembles the two hottest days in the coat-tails, once used to support a sword belt, but continuing after the belt was discarded.

Because a majority vote in any state makes it incumbent on all electors for that state to cast their votes for the one party, it has sometimes happened the candidate who received the largest country-wide vote has not received a majority of the electoral college votes. Thus the candidate of the majority may not become President.

At present the 48 states, each in his own time and according to its own methods, are choosing their delegations to the National Convention to be held in June at Chicago. Fifteen states hold both the Democratic and Republican primaries, permitting their citizens to express their preference by voting for a slate of delegates almost as in a regular election. Two states, Georgia and Florida, hold Democratic primaries, but choose their delegates to the Republican Convention by the older method of state convention. In 33 states both parties hold conventions.

The primaries are of two kinds, open and closed. There are objections to either. In the case of an open primary where it is not necessary the voter declares his allegiance to party, it is possible for Republicans to vote at the Democratic polls for the weakest Democratic candidate. Obviously, a closed primary makes necessary public announcement by the voter of his politics which destroys the secrecy of the ballot.

Every state sends to the National Convention two delegates for each representative in Congress and one for each senator, making a total of 1154. At the Democratic Convention a two thirds vote, 770, is necessary to nominate a candidate; a majority is sufficient at a Republican Convention.

Thirty-three senatorial seats will be filled in November by candidates selected by the population at large of the states where the vacancies occur. Normally one-third of the Senate is elected every two years but this year Senator Barbour of New Jersey having been appointed by the state governor upon the death of Dwight W. Morrow, must stand for election, thus making an extra contest. Each state has two representatives in the Senate.

Every state is entitled to at least one representative and two senators who make up the number of the House. Nevada, Wyoming, Delaware and Arizona have only one representative each. Naturally these four members are elected by their states at large. But in states with more than one representative members are elected for districts and a vote for the entire state.

This year there will be an increase in the number of members of the House because a reapportionment has occurred as a result of the 1930 census and states including New York and Missouri have not been able to agree to a rearrangement of their districts. Democrats believe this situation will result in their favor since in a number of states large city populations habitually vote Democratic and to candidates-at-large of that party goes the advantage.

Majesties Will Not Live in State

(By The Canadian Press)

LONDON—It is practically certain the King and Queen will not reside in state at Holyrood Palace, Edinburgh, during this summer, and the Scottish capital will not have a "Royal Season" this year. However, it is many years now since "seasons" have been held in Scotland in successive years.

Last year a court was held at Holyrood, which considerably lessened the pangs of debutantes who desired to be presented at the courts of both London. This year it is probable that many young aspirants for presentation will be denied, for the list of applications is already a very large one.

The United States now has more than half a million acres of orange groves.

LONDON AWAITS SUMMER SEASON

Galsworthy Plays Will Be Shown and Keen Interest

By Thos. T. Champion

Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON — Interesting features are promised for the summer theatrical season in London. A series of plays of John Galsworthy is to be produced at the Garrick Theatre. This playwright is perhaps the most "safest" amongst modern men of stagecraft for reproduction purposes for "Justice," "Loyalties" and "The Silver Box," to give only three examples, have withstood many presentations.

A new play by John van Druten, whose famous study of schoolboy life in "Young Woodley" created so much interest, is promised this month. The new piece will be concerned with the psychology of an unsolved crime, and the leading character will be played by Frank Lawton.

J. B. Priestly, whose novels "The Good Companions" and "Angel Pavement" have become world-famous, has written his first play direct for the stage, which is due for production almost at once. "Dangerous Corner" will be concerned with a group of people who listen to a broadcast of the wireless. The version of "The Good Companions" which Priestly has adapted for the stage with Edward Knoblock, was recently taken off after a run of no less than nine months.

Collins' music hall on Islington Green, one of the oldest houses of entertainment in London, which has recently endured a spell of hard times, has been revived with every prospect of a renewal of its one-time successful career. Collins's goes back to the Islington music hall entertainment, when there used to be a "chairman," who sat at a table with his back to the stage, and announced the turns. The chairman at such places of entertainment was a well-known figure in Edwardian voice and an unlimited capacity for imbibing strong waters. It used to be a great privilege to be invited to a seat at the chairman's table.

In later years Collins's gave the first opportunity to many a boy and woman who became famous on the vaudeville stage. Gracie Fields was one of the more important veterans of the old-time variety show, first came into fame at Collins's. Harry Lauder made his first appearance there. He once applied in face for the position of chairman. Albert Chevalier was also a famous figure at Issacs ah Collins's. Marie Lloyd, who was also a famous figure at this theatre. The theatre was crammed the other night for the reopening. Instead of the old-time chairman there was the Mayor of Islington, wearing his robe and chain, who recalled how he himself in his younger days used to frequent the "top shelf" or "this dear old music hall," and then declared to George Chirgwin and other famous folk, little thinking that he would be one day to receive from his blessing as chief municipal officer.

Legal Fraternity Will Be Pleased

(By The Canadian Press)

LONDON—Every Canadian lawyer who has appeared in recent years before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council will have heard with pleasure of the appointment of Geoffrey Lawrence, K.C., D.S.O., as a Judge of the King's Bench Division. For many years Mr. Lawrence, both as a "stuff governman" and as "silk", has appeared in practically every Canadian appeal of importance which has been heard by the Judicial Committee. His ability as a pleader and his charm of manner have rendered him a most acceptable colleague.

Mr. Lawrence, who is 51, was called to the Bar in 1906, and became a K.C. seven years ago. He is the youngest son of Lord Trevethin, who was for twelve months Lord Chancellor in Lloyd George's government. As Mr. Austin T. A. Lawrence, Lord Trevethin was a Judge of the High Court for seventeen years. He was known as the Judge who never lost his temper. His son, who is now also elevated to the Bench, possesses in a full measure his father's learning and urbanity.

In 1928 Geoffrey Lawrence was appointed Attorney-General to the Prince of Wales, an appointment principally concerned with the legal side of the prince's duties as a landowner. Since 1922 Mr. Lawrence has been counsel to the Jockey Club. In 1924 he was appointed Recorder of Oxford. At the outbreak of the war he served as a second lieutenant in the Essex Territorial Artillery, rising to Major in 1915 and Lt.-Col. in 1920. He was mentioned in despatches twice and was awarded the D.S.O. Mr. Lawrence, in his early days in the Bar, was a pupil of Sir John Simon and Sir William (now Lord) Pt. He is married, and has one son and three daughters.

FETE RETIRING OFFICER.

TORONTO—Miss Martha J. Carson, retiring long-distance chief operator at Toronto for the Bell Telephone Company, was the guest of honor at a delightful bridge and musicale given by her associates, the girls in the long distance department.

Miss Carson recalled the contrast between her first days in the long-distance department forty-two years ago and the present. Then there were only eight lines, and only two of them "metallic". That is, only over two of them could people hear clearly. Today there are 597 lines, the daily calls then averaged 100; today 8,600.

Millions Sold In U.S. And Abroad

University and endorsed by well known Laboratories and authorities of U. S. and abroad. Perfectly harmless. BEWARE OF IMITATIONS. Silver medal award.

Think of it—the quickest and slickest, closest and smoothest "shave" you ever had—without using a razor! A face so smooth you never knew you had such soft skin! And instead of shaving every day you need apply this delightful new discovery only every other day. Some use it less often! It "breaks" the whiskers off slightly below the skin while a razor cuts them off above the surface. You just cannot believe it till you try it for yourself.

Not a harsh chemical that eats off the hair. But a gentle compound that makes the beard so brittle it "breaks" off. Men with very tender skins now actually enjoy their morning glorification (which, by the way, may now be performed at night, because the beard barely grows overnight). In contrast with razor-shaving, SHAVIX greatly slows up the growth of the beard and makes it much lighter, thinner and softer.

WOMEN TOO ARE DELIGHTED with this new and gentle depilatory which may be used on face or limbs with great speed and complete freedom from pain or stench.

"Shavix" leaves your skin and complexion soft and smooth like a baby's. It performs the service you have ever known. Just think of it, men use it without a razor to take off their tough, stiff whiskers.

The latest fashion demands your legs, arms and armpits smooth and white. Hair on these parts of your body are considered ugly and superfluous. A $1 package is 4 times larger than most others.

MOTHER'S DAY.

Sunday will mark the observance of Mothers' Day which has won general attention in a large part of the civilized world. In Belleville and district the children of the red rose to signify the living mother and the white rose of purity that of the mother who has laid aside earthly cares to enjoy rest in the hereafter will be worn.

To observe the day is a graceful tribute to motherhood and the counsels of the mother in all the trials and tribulations of life and also in its joys and happiness.

What Mother endures may be guessed from the anguish of Mrs. Lindbergh who knows that somewhere her infant son in unkindly hands misses her. This is but a token of the cross that Mother has to carry.

But there are rewards greater than all sorrows in the satisfaction of seeing a noble family rise to high offices of service in their day and generation.

With all its pains and sorrows, mothers would not give up one iota of the burden they are called upon to bear, to escape the disagreeable, for mother love sanctifies pain and suffering and worry.

NEW BUILDINGS

Interest will focus on the attitude of the City council who are endeavoring to voice the will of the people in their treatment of the proposal of Alderman R. P. White to delay assessment on new buildings until after completion of the department of building operations. The matter comes before the council on Monday evening for decision.

In its suggestions of encouragement to the householder, whether contractor or the individual, building for himself, in the opportunity it offers of relief of unemployment, in the assistance it will bring to the waterworks and Hydro departments, in the support of the building trades' crafts and labor, and in the assurance it offers of assessable property (in the year 1934 for instance in the case of any property put up this year) the proposal of Mr. Hicks looks good to many people who have given some thought to the matter.

WHO PARK THE CARS?

It has been generally known but it took the recent survey by the police under the advice of Mayor Tice, to reveal the exact information as to who own the cars which fill up the parking space on Front and Bridge Streets. Merchants in over fifty cases out of each case of cars parking for unlimited time are the offenders.

The present condition cries for relief and it is believed that co-operation in the manner suggested by the mayor will be given by those whose motors are on the street for the greater part of the day.

Everyone realizes that merchants have need of their cars during the day and to expect them should or would not be deprived of this right which is theirs, but for the sake of the buying public it appears as if much of the complaint over inability to find parking space apparently on Saturday night when purchasers come to town or come downtown is justified because of the presence of these cars of which the police and Mayor Tice complain.

Unduly long parking of trucks is another matter to be dealt with.

Perhaps the Belleville blackbird or starling which advanced the time by the Belleville mill clock twelve minutes on Friday is now on the right knee or else he was doing and more likely he did not. Everyone believes his hint to the people of Belleville was unintentional for what should a blackbird know of daylight saving standard time, but if he did, then the people have something to think about.—What does the blackbird think of them?

Veteran of three campaigns and living to the age of one hundred and four years, a man declares he is through with fighting. Though he does not say so, he has doubtless quit fighting many years ago though there is no doubt some spunk in him yet if anyone dares to tread upon him.

The humble shirt which adorns man's manly bosom and makes him presentable without much of pressing is destined in today drawing more and more upon the world's attention with blackshirts, red shirts and all other sorts of shirts blazoned in politics. The shirt first came to heights of fame with Hood's "Song of the Shirt," then Garibaldi ordered shirts for his troops, after many years came Mussolini, and then Hitler. Time for everyone now to boast of his shirt, whatever color it is! The Irish Republicans have taken to a green shirt. Soon all the colors will be gone.

IF DUST COULD SPEAK
By Aline Michaelis

If it could speak, this dust whereon we tread,
Ah, who can guess the words that it might say!
The glimpse it might reveal of towns long dead,
Of fabled isles, of nations passed away?
One grain tossed hither down the years might be
A fragment of a petal of a rose
That gleamed on Helen's breast in rivalry
With the fair Trojan's bosom's stainless snows;
Another fleck might be from that curst gold
Which Judas gained in pay for Paradise,
And still another memories might unfold
Of lotus blooms on Cleopatra's eyes.
What would it tell of happiness and tears,
If it could speak, this dust blown down the years?

NAKINKA, HORNEPAYNE, KIRKLAND LAKE, St. Joseph's Island, Lion's Head, Longheart Lake, Atikokan, are names not familiar to everyone, but they are outposts of Ontario where hardy pioneers, men and women, are extending the community life in the province, the newer Ontario linking up with the older Ontario. Life in these lonely outposts of civilization is not one long round of dull, long lazy sweet dream of contentment—life on the frontier calls for courage, faith, and self-reliance, all these and more must the pioneers have who established our most post hospitals where are treated the casualties of the battle with the wilderness. There's some figures of Red Cross Outpost Hospital work which speak for themselves; 571 births, 469 of which took place in the outpost hospitals and 102 in surrounding districts attended by Red Cross nurses; 1609 operations performed in the hospitals; 3,677 out patients treated; 44 clinics held at which 1,993 children were treated; 2,631 patients admitted to outpost hospitals and given 29,180 collective hospital days' care. That is just one year's record of Red Cross work. Wherever there is a calamity of any kind involving suffering to a number of humans the Red Cross is the first to reach the afflicted with skilled medical assistance, and the kindly sympathy which has marked Red Cross work in war and peace for sixty-eight years. Next week is Red Cross week and all of us can take part in Red Cross activities by contributing twenty-five cents, twenty-five dollars or a thousand, according to the measure with which we have been blessed by the Giver of All Good. No man can live unto himself alone, woman either, and our happiness in this life of hope of reward in the next depends largely on just how thoughtful and kind and unselfish we are to others.

"You know, Pat," said the Scot, "some time ago we dug the ruins of a fourteenth century castle in Scotland and found a lot of wire. This proves that telegraphs and telephones were used in Scotland already in the fourteenth century."

"Begorra!" answered Pat, "in Ireland we made a more wonderful discovery. We dug up a prehistoric dwelling, and found no wire at all. That proves that our Irish ancestors in prehistoric times used wireless."

HOW LONG?

In the year 1930 there was a dropping off to the extent of 10,000 in the number of divorces granted in United States, and it is reported that 1931 figures, when completed, will show a similar trend. What times is the reason given.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

STARS AND NATURE

Asking "Can it be entirely accident that the birthplaces of great ideas have been so largely spots where skies are clear?" the St. Catharines Standard says that one of the disadvantages of the cities is that they bar man from the stars. "City smoke and city lights are the enemies of astronomy. No country boy, sleeping out of doors on a clear and frosty night, can make the knowledge of other worlds than ours. For him there less intimacy, and nothing forces them to look higher than the lanterns of the skyscrapers."

There are many other beauties of natures from which lessons can be learned. Jesus Christ's last few years associated with were spent in teaching, and most of his illustrations were drawn from nature. He walked with His disciples through the fields and showed them of the grain of what which would abide alone unless it fell unto the ground and die. Without the vine tree, He said that a tree is known by its fruits. A sermon on the little sparrow was cited by our Lord to teach His companions lessons in faith.

The wonders of nature have much to teach us, and the study of it can be said that a man who lives close to nature's heart, on the outskirts edge of the stars, and trees, and flowers lives a very empty life.—Lindsay Post.

FARM FIRE PROBLEM

Ratepayers in Southern Hartwich will on May the 18th vote upon a bylaw which is designed to put up-to-date fire protection for the farms of that district. The bylaw is to provide fire fighting apparatus in Elmhelm, which will be available in the event of rural fires breaking out in the neighborhood.

The bylaw will be watched with interest by farmers in other parts of the county. Last autumn Reeve Jeckell suggested that the solution of the problem of farm fire losses, lies in some sense of the character. At present the fire departments of cities and towns are frequently called upon to go out in the country distances to help extinguish fires that unfortunately visited by fire. While the people of the urban centres are glad to display the neighborly spirit, it often means that serious risk is run, though usually leaving city and town improperly protected while their fire fighters are away from regular duty.—Chatham News.

SCIENCE AND THE LAUNDRY

The jagged-edge collar, torn shirts and missing buttons are to become things of the past in the laundry business, when science gets through with them. It has been a long been a fertile field for wisecracks, but the laundry industry, though for our part we have long been of the opinion that it deserves more credit than justification. It is a marvel that some of the articles are returned as well as they are, however, there is evidently some room for improvement, and the Industrial Research Council of Canada would not have authorized the $10,000 research into the "problems of the laundry industry" by Dr. O. M. Monge, if the Canadian Laundry Owners' Association is a co-operative one. The association has emphasized "the importance of combining a study of the technical side with those of textile manufacture, since these are intimately related." — Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

Turn Idle Into Gardening Class

(By The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL—A Community Garden League has been formed to cope with the most recent project in aid of the unemployed to be undertaken by the Montreal Council of Social Agencies. A citizens' committee to further this undertaking has been formally constituted after careful study of the matter by a sub-committee of the committee of the council. The organization will follow closely the plan of the Montreal Garden Committee which for the past few years, when hundreds of garden plots were made available for returned soldiers and others.

LUMBER TRADE WILL SOON BENEFIT

(By The Canadian Press)

VICTORIA—The cessation of hostilities in the Orient will create a demand for lumber from which Canada is sure to benefit to a considerable extent, according to exporters here who are largely engaged in specialized in trans-Pacific trade.

Last year, approximately 2,000,000 feet of lumber from British Columbia mills went to China, and more recently Japan represented the backbone of British Columbia's lumber export business.

During the present confusion neither Japan nor China are buying lumber in large volume.

PERPLEXING PROBLEM OF BALD-HEADED

Scalp is Functioning Organ With Functions of Own

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Hygiene and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

Baldness is a problem that confronts many, and is a most distressing to those afflicted with what is termed baldness". That is, loss of hair when young. In old age, of course, the hair loss naturally falls out, and "does" not worry us.

Baldness may appear in women as well as in men, but the latter worry about it more. It is one reason it "shows" more. Another reason is the thought of a bald head in women. Complete absence of hair on the top of the head is indeed rare among women.

Loss of hair, whether rapid or slow, usually begins with one or more of several causes. When the hair falls out a lot, if it comes out when combing it, two out of the problem should be thought of at once. First is the condition purely a local one? Second, is there a constitutional disorder somewhere within the body which is indirectly responsible?

In all cases of threatening baldness the individual concerned should ask himself whether his health is up to the standard, whether all his bodily functions are working with sufficiency. Gout, diabetes, kidney disease, tuberculosis, an anemic condition, and many other disturbances, which have a devitalizing effect, should be considered to allow the waste and poisonous products normally carried off by the body to be eliminated, all affect the scalp.

You must remember that scalp is really a functioning organ, too. It has duties to perform in health in general, and so has eliminating duties to perform. Every hair root within it fat glands and hair roots which must be nourished. We then have to supply it with blood and nerve supply in the proper way, and when it is the path of efficiency, baldness need not worry us.

We know, too, that certain specific diseases such as typhoid and tuberculosis are influences in their wake.

Certain nervous disorders, too, interfere with the nutrition of the scalp, have similar effects. Grenzy rapid, but of a less obvious sort, such as chronic constipation, overeating, alcoholic excess, lack of exercise, worry, too little sleep and other conditions which the individual can be responsible for badness.

Then there comes dandruff, and usually it is declared to be a "germ disease." It is not a germ to, indicating that the scalp is in poor condition, perhaps actually diseased. It is not a germ disease of dead, superficial skin cells. It is a combination of oily matter produced by the fat or sebaceous glands, of the diseased scalp that causes both the dandruff and the baldness.

The dandruff is present the scalp is usually itchy, scaly and sometimes quite tender. It may be greasy or it may be dry. In some cases there is a actual form infection of the scalp, and in such cases dandruff germs may be carried on dressing to another through the medium of trying on hats in men's shops and hairdressing establishments.

If baldness has reached the stage where the hair roots are dead, practically nothing can be done to grow new hair! In the earlier stages, however, much can be done to check the progress and treatment of the scalp. In all cases it should be thoroughly and regularly through massage with the finger tips. Massage with the Care must be taken, however, to move the scalp, not merely to rub and break off delicate hairs. For a dry scalp an oily lotion should be rubbed in, and for an oily scalp a stimulating one, containing a mild astringent, for instance.

But, in every case the general health should be improved. In certain cases even the glandular system must be attended to. Often the use of ultra-violet rays is helpful, too.

An interesting case was tried in division court this morning before His Honor Judge Prudhomme, K.C., of a local medical practitioner against a citizen from whom he desired to recover $400 in assignment for a professional call which was rendered by him between one and two o'clock in the dark hours of a stormy night in April. The call had come from the home of a prominent Belleville resident, and a number of men are said to have been in on the April Fool joke rather such it was intended to be—the call was a trumped up one. There being no one requiring medical attention at the place mentioned. When the evidence of the doctor was heard and also that of a witness for the prosecution, the lawyer for the defendant, said that his client admitted the $5.00 account, but asked that $5.00 acknowledged by the doctor as due for medicine have been and transferred to the defendant, should be applied against the bill. Consent to do this was given. This is said to have been a test case, and that a court order had been served on the doctor, a subpoena was issued, but when the officer searched about the place, but could not find the intruder.

PIRATES LOSE EIGHT OF LAST NINE GAMES

Feel Loss of Heine Meine Who Has Refused to Report

CUBS LEAD

Yanks Also Jump From Fourth to Second Place By Winning

BY GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Heine Meine's failure to sign a Pittsburgh contract and his subsequent suspension from organized ball is proving costly to the Pirates as they flounder deeper into the National League cellar.

Defeated in eight of their last nine games, chiefly because of poor pitching, the Pirates could find lots of use for the right hand ace, who won 18 games while toting arms for a fifth place club last year.

As mature stand, Manager Geo. Gibson has only one curver, who has shown any signs of dependability. Steve Swetonic, who was mostly just another thrower last season, has turned in two straight three-hit performances, but the remainder of his staff is full of holes where fast.

In their last nine games, the Pirate hurlers have granted an average of more than five runs per game, and to make things worse, the team's offense has been weak. Paul Waner and Gus Suhr alone were hitting over .300 through yesterday's games, but Waner's batting stars absorbed a 4 to 2 beating from the Phillies.

Cubs Back in Lead

The Chicago Cubs climbed back to the league lead when they squared their series with Brooklyn, 3 to 2, while the Boston Braves were dropping a second straight to Cincinnati, 14 to 4. Guy Bush, Cub seven Dodger hits scattered while his mates grouped their eight off Van Mungo, Shaute and Quinn. Woody Jackson of the Cub line-up to hit a triple and score the winning run in the eighth.

"Red" Lucas pitched a four-hit game for the Reds and didn't permit a Boston runner past the initial sack until the ninth. Heath and Gilbert led a 15-hit attack against Manager Mckechnie's lingers.

Tight relief pitching by Clarence Mitchell, who held the Cardinals scoreless after relieving young Harold Schumacher in the sixth featured the Giants' second straight over the world champions, 5 to 4.

American League

Joe McCarthy's Yankees of York Yanvaulted from fourth place to second in the American League when George Pipgras set the Detroit Tigers down 3 to 1 in the opening clash. Pipgras allowed only five hits and struck out seven. Gehrig's double and Ben Chapman's single in the second inning defeated Earl Whitehill.

Al Simmons and Roger Cramer provided the punch as the Athletics tripped Cleveland again, 3 to 2. Simmons knocked in three runs with a triple and a single and Simmons' brace of doubles accounted for other two. Max Schaffer held the Indians to five blows.

Chicago's White Sox broke a seven game losing streak and opened their eastern invasion successfully by trimming the league leading Washington Senators 3 to 2. It was the first loss in five starts for Monte Weaver, big Washington rookie.

Fred Marberry's home run in the seventh with Jim Levey on base gave the Browns a thrilling 3 to 2 second victory over the Boston Red Sox, 6 to 5.

Yesterday's Stars

Roger Cramer, Athletics—Drove in three runs against Indians with triple and single.

George Pipgras, Yankees— Held Tigers to five singles, struck out 7 and won 1-0.

Fred Marberry, Browns—His home run with one on in the seventh provided winning margin against the Red Sox.

Jim Elliott, Phillies—Held Pirates safe with seven hits, collected safe hits himself, driving in one run and scoring one.

AMERICA'S MOST HISTORIC TURF CLASSIC

Less than three week remain for the 45 eligible thoroughbreds to get themselves into shape for the 73rd renewal of the King's Plate at Woodbine Park, Toronto, America's most historic racing classic. ECKERT NEW HURLING STAR

Fast Two Wins For Rochester Show Promise

Albert George Eckert, whose career in organized baseball began with Utica in 1928, rapidly is developing into the sensation of the Rochester Redwings' pitching staff.

Obtained during the off season from the Cincinnati Reds, Eckert was not given a starting assignment until last Sunday, when he allowed the Baltimore Orioles only five hits and beat them 7-2.

Yesterday, in the fifth game of the season, Eckert settled down and was touched for only one hit in the last six frames. George Claney's home run gave the Redwings their two runs. George Puccinelli and Paul Florence collected homers for the champions.

Ottawa Defeats Weird Hitless.

Buffalo Bisons finally managed to check Buzz Arlett's bat as a result, they took the Baltimore Orioles, 9-8, and broke a four-game losing streak. Arlett, who had batted .567 in the first three games of the series, went hitless. Frankie Parker's single in the eighth and ten runs but these fell short. Buffalo tied the score with two runs in the eighth and won out in the ninth.

The Montreal Royals hung up their fifth victory in succession as they turned back the Reading Keys, 5-2. Henry's single in the ninth drove home the winning run. Reading outhit the Canadians, 11 to 8, but could not reach either Clarence Fisher or Orvell Claset in the pinches. Vince Barton and Jay Partridge each had three hits for the Royals.

The Newark-Toronto game was postponed on account of rain.

T. J. Hurley Elected President of Belleville Lawn Bowlers

Drive Will Be Made to Secure 40 New Members

NEW GREENS

Club Will Move Quarters to Fair Grounds For Season's Sport

T. J. Hurley was unanimously chosen as president of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Association at their annual meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce last night. A large number of enthusiastic lawn bowlers were present at the annual meeting and all voiced their sentiments by saying the annual meet with the acquisition of their new bowling green, recently completed at the Belleville Exhibition Park, a new outlook faces Lawn bowling in Belleville. The optimistic feeling, which prevailed at last night's meeting, was but a forerunner of the coming officers and a banner year is predicted for the lawn bowlers during 1932.

The meeting opened with President Geo. T. Woodley in the chair and after thanking the members of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club for their excellent co-operation during the season of 1931 and assuring them, that it had been a pleasure to work in conjunction with such the calibre of sportsmen who graced the Belleville Lawn Bowling Green, called upon Secretary-Treasurer W. A. Walshe to read the minutes of the previous meeting. After these minutes had been read and approved by Mr. Walshe presented correspondence, the secretary of the Central Ontario Lawn Bowling Association, that the Belleville Club had been affiliated with that organization and that the Club was entitled to C.O.L.B.A. meets in Belleville were to be held on the first Monday and last Monday in June. The C.O.L.B.A. takes in all bowling clubs from Oshawa to Cobalt in the west to Belleville in the east and as far north as Peterboro including Campbellford. It was also pointed out, that the local club was affiliated with the Ontario Lawn Bowler's Association and Whilst the latter body controls the former. Mr. Walsh also brought the annual Treasurer's report and balance sheet before the meeting and the report was adopted and many votes of thanks were tendered in favour of last year's executive.

Fees For New Members

The next order of business was perhaps the most important of the evening when it was decided by unanimously carried that the membership fees for 1932 would be $5.00 per annum for new and associate members, and the annual membership fee for present members be $10. Mr. R. J. Dewar moved this proposition which, he said, in his opinion would be the objective of the meeting. In order to get in future years the membership would be subscribers at the end of the annual membership fees to be $5.00. The members present to a man were of the opinion, that if enough pressure were applied, that at least 40 new members could be secured for the present roster each year and that number would be reached by 1932.

Mr. R. J. Wray reported to the meeting, on behalf of the executive committee, all matters in regards to the proposed move of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club from their old quarters on Victoria Park to their new and spacious playing grounds at the Exhibition Park. Mr. Wray explained, that at the new grounds, members would be playing on the finest playing greens in Ontario and that it boasted of twelve greens right on the grounds and also two auxiliary greens. The old bowling greens on Victoria st. boasted of but nine greens. " " ray pointed out, however, that the city had also erected a new club house at the present, that project was at present in the making, and would shortly have been present of the fact, that the Parks Committee had also promised to let the lawn bowlers use the present office of the Park Board and that their intentions of adding a sun porch to the north end of the building over-looking the playing greens. NEW GREENS

Club Will Move Quarters to Fair Grounds For Season's Sport

T. J. Hurley was unanimously chosen as president of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Association at their annual meeting held in the Chamber of Commerce last night. A large number of enthusiastic lawn bowlers were present at the annual meeting and all voiced their sentiments by saying the annual meet with the acquisition of their new bowling green, recently completed at the Belleville Exhibition Park, a new outlook faces Lawn bowling in Belleville. The optimistic feeling, which prevailed at last night's meeting, was but a forerunner of the coming officers and a banner year is predicted for the lawn bowlers during 1932.

The meeting opened with President Geo. T. Woodley in the chair and after thanking the members of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club for their excellent co-operation during the season of 1931 and assuring them, that it had been a pleasure to work in conjunction with such the calibre of sportsmen who graced the Belleville Lawn Bowling Green, called upon Secretary-Treasurer W. A. Walshe to read the minutes of the previous meeting. After these minutes had been read and approved by Mr. Walsh presented correspondence, the secretary of the Central Ontario Lawn Bowling Association, that the Belleville Club had been affiliated with that organization and that the Club was entitled to C.O.L.B.A. meets in Belleville were to be held on the first Monday and last Monday in June. The C.O.L.B.A. takes in all bowling clubs from Oshawa to Cobalt in the west to Belleville in the east and as far north as Peterboro including Campbellford. It was also pointed out, that the local club was affiliated with the Ontario Lawn Bowler's Association and Whilst the latter body controls the former. Mr. Walsh also brought the annual Treasurer's report and balance sheet before the meeting and the report was adopted and many votes of thanks were tendered in favour of last year's executive.

Fees For New Members

The next order of business was perhaps the most important of the evening when it was decided by unanimously carried that the membership fees for 1932 would be $5.00 per annum for new and associate members, and the annual membership fee for present members be $10. Mr. R. J. Dewar moved this proposition which, he said, in his opinion would be the objective of the meeting. In order to get in future years the membership would be subscribers at the end of the annual membership fees to be $5.00. The members present to a man were of the opinion, that if enough pressure were applied, that at least 40 new members could be secured for the present roster each year and that number would be reached by 1932.

Mr. R. J. Wray reported to the meeting, on behalf of the executive committee, all matters in regards to the proposed move of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club from their old quarters on Victoria Park to their new and spacious playing grounds at the Exhibition Park. Mr. Wray explained, that at the new grounds, members would be playing on the finest playing greens in Ontario and that it boasted of twelve greens right on the grounds and also two auxiliary greens. The old bowling greens on Victoria st. boasted of but nine greens. " " ray pointed out, however, that the city had also erected a new club house at the present, that project was at present in the making, and would shortly have been present of the fact, that the Parks Committee had also promised to let the lawn bowlers use the present office of the Park Board and that their intentions of adding a sun porch to the north end of the building over-looking the playing greens. Current Sport

By The Observer

Today is Old Timers Day with us, and we intend dictating more upon the subject than a history of baseball. There are a few old time sporting fans left on the city, who remember the days of "bare knuckle" fighters and when baseball players vaccited about without the use of gloves. Fielders gloves, anyway the game was built on the English game of Rounders and was played by a team from Brooklyn, N.Y., by an Englishman, Alfred Henry Chadwick, sometimes referred to as the "Father of Baseball" which is not exactly right as there had been the game of "Town Ball" played many years previous. Chadwick did, however, help to popularize and popularize the game.

"A Fillie—later in about 1939 Abner Doubleday, of Cooperstown, N.Y., evolved the "Diamond" shaped field for the "square" and fixed the distance between bases, which have remained to this day.

In those pioneer days the team that made 21 runs first were the winners. The game was nationalistically then, no matter how many innings it took to get a decision. Among the rules at that time was the following peculiar yet, for example: 1. A ball knocked outside the limits of the field and third base shall be considered a foul; 2. If three balls be pitched at and missed, the last being caught, it is considered (now known as a strikeout). If not caught, it is considered a fair ball and the striker is privileged to run to the base; 3. A running player may be put out by being thrown by a ball in the hands of an adversary from catching or getting to the base before he can touch it in a handoot (out); 4. three hand outs, side to go in. The ball was and the scoring of a played on a hit on which the batsman reached first base only a first base does not count; a players runs on to second base. Those fundamental rules were in force when baseball was first played, and remained only to elaborate on them to provide for for events arising from plays.

Uniforms were introduced in 1851 and the first baseball was printed in the New York Knickerbocker Club, the name opposite the name of each player "nom" and "de" plume.

In 1857 a governing body was formed for the rapidly increasing teams and the idea of championships originated. This was put into force with the option of challenge by the holders, by mutual consent with provision made for extra matches.

At the time of the making of rules 21 runs or 25 outs were represented and was sweeping the country. Baseball clubs sprang up in all parts of the United States. The Athletic Club of Philadelphia had a team in 1875, Chicago one in 1876 and as early as 1875 a "scandal" was unearthed involving 7 players mentioned Boston, Chicago and Devlin, and they were expelled, which brought about the formation of the National League in 1876. The rest is history.

The Intercounty Senior O. R.A.A. League gets under way this afternoon when the champion Leaf Trevors entertain the Hallamilton Oakies. The Trevors have a big family to draw from and should be able to get the call for opening game. Tomorrow they are staging a grand parade with bands and that go to make up the "opening day" for a baseball season.

An executive meeting of the Belleville Intermediate "A" will be called for Monday night at the Y.M.C.A. when arrangements will be made for the opening game scheduled for Belleville on May 24th when the champion Kingston Frontenacs come to town.

FRANCE VOTES

rector of public health, said the president's condition was slightly improved.

At 12.45 a.m., however, Francois Flotri, minister of the budget, announced that the chief was resting as well as he had been. At 1.30 a.m. Premier Andre Tardieu arrived at the Elysee Palace. He left with an air an indication that the president's condition had taken a grave turn. A minute later the physicians issued a bulletin saying his condition was becoming more and more grave. A German delegation were arriving," the bulletin said, "and the tension at the base of the cranium is becoming more marked."

Is Told of Car Accident

A short time later the Procurator General, a number of police officers, Dr. Paul Doumer, official medical expert, arrived at the hospital and this was taken by the waiting crowd to mean that the end was near. A man was leaving the room, and said that some time before midnight a Paris car driver caused astonishment at finding himself in a hospital bed and he was told:

"You have had an accident accident."

At 3.45 a.m. Pierre Cathala, one of the cabinet undersecretaries, announced that the President had lapsed into a coma and had suffered a period of delirium. His pulse had grown imperceptible and his breathing was spasmodic. Hope was given up.

Effort to Bid Farewell

At 4.45 a.m. he succumbed in the next room to that in which M. Doumer lay, a few hours later the presidents of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies arrived.

A few minutes before 4.37 a.m. M. Doumer came out of the room where Madame Lebrun's family were. He made a pathetic effort to bid them farewell. His face was drawn with pain and fell back exhausted. A moment later he died.

The body was taken immediately to the Elysee Palace, and placed in the green salon, where it was to lie in state until after the French people would have chosen the opportunity to look upon the kindly, fatherly face of the man who was one of France's most democratic presidents. Sprung from poverty, the son of a railway employee, he became "chief executive of the Republic.

Cerebral Complications

M. Petit-Jean's physician declared died from cerebral complications, which set in rapidly after midnight.

The cabinet ministers remained at the Elysee Palace after the meeting laid out and before they left President Lebrun's room, according to 11.30 a.m. today.

Under the constitution the senate and Chamber of Deputies should be summoned to elect a new president within 15 days, but it was believed that under present extraordinary circumstances the period for election for members of Parliament to be held during the state of emergency session would be postponed.

Albert Le Brun, president of the Senate, was prominently mentioned as a possible successor to the president. He, himself, was augusted as a candidate for the presidency last year and he followed Mt. Doumer in the office of Minister of Finance, the latter was finally chosen president to the chief executive.

Various eye-witnesses of the shooting yesterday agreed that the assassin, Dr. Paul Gorgulov, made no attempt to conceal his gun.

They also told of the gayety of the opening day of the exhibition of the former soldier authors, which had just terminated in a scene of horror by the tragedy.

"All the authors were in the countries," Mme. Phillipe Giavardin, a writer, "assisted by a number of beautiful women, were present at the spring gowns. The tragedy fell like a bolt from heaven. President Doumer, exactly on time according to his habits, had arrived at the first salon when the series of shots burst out like the cracking of a whip.

"Dr. Gorgulov had shot the president from the middle of the crowd, firing over and under the arms of the people who stood around him.

Attempt to Save Doumer

"The athletic Claude Farrere, noted author, tried to save the president and received a bullet himself. The president had fallen on the floor, his white shirt front with blood.

The assassin was captured and dragged outside. There was neither panic, nor hysteria. Everybody seemed crushed with horror. An ambulance took the body of a man who unanimously respected and revered for his goodness of heart and his devotion to his country seemed impossible.

Sacrificed for France

"With tender precaution, as a soldier would be carried from a battlefield, the president was carried to the car. Mme. Doumer, who gave four sons for France during the war, fainted, seeing her own blood. By a cruel fate he was struck down by the bullet of one of soldiers, among whom, at least, he might have thought himself secure.

Messages of sympathy from many countries arrived early last night. They came from Chancellor Brunning of Germany, from the Hungarian regent, Admiral Horthy, from Washington, and from Pope Pius XI, at Vatican City, through Monsignor Pizzardi, Papal undersecretary of state.

information in connection with it.

Lionel A. Ryan, acting for the defense in conjunction with M. J. Franklin, Montreal attorney, asked that the accused men be given the privilege of leaving the country voluntarily, pending final enforcement of deportation to their native countries might prove embarrassing to them on their arrival. He submitted, also, that, in view of certain evidence, it was probable the men of the Ukrainian Party did not know of their organization's complicity with the Communist Party.

Worobek is Secretary-Treasurer of the Ukrainian Labor Temple Association and both he and Maryniuk are said to be influential figures in the Ukrainian movement in Canada. Their dwellings and offices were searched by police, and all documents were seized before the two men were placed on the Halifax-bound train.

All the prisoners have been charged under Section 41 of the Immigration Act, which deals with aliens who have advocated the forcible overthrow of the government.

Protests in Parliament

Ottawa, May 7.—Arrest of alleged Communists in Sudbury and Montreal provoked a stormy hour in the House of Commons last night, with Labor, Liberal and Progressive members protesting against the methods employed in "deporting Russia."

J. S. Woodsworth (Labor, Winnipeg), A. W. Neve (Liberal, Hagel), and other members endeavoured before the orders of the day to have why the alleged offenders against Canadian laws should be arrested in this manner, away, some of them 2,000 miles, for trial.

Little information was forthcoming from the government benches. Hon. Hugh Guthrie ventured the opinion that a story in the Winnipeg Free Press yesterday, that they had been gathered in by the Mounted Police and sent on the train was erroneous. It was reported the Communists were next heard from in Halifax, 2,000 miles away from their families and friends, where deportation proceedings were useless, it was stated.

The matter was ventilated further last night during consideration of the Mounted Police estimates. Liberals and Labor members demanding to know what charges had been preferred and protesting that the elementary principles of British justice had been outraged.

The North Centre Winnipeg member lodged a most vigorous protest, arguing particularly against removal of people from home for an inquiry looking to deportation.

Even S. J. Garland of Bow River, who is one of the most frequent contributors to these debates, declared that the procedure was one that would fail to bring in describing it. To all of which the reply of Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, and Hon. W. A. Gordon, Acting Minister of Immigration, was that the law was being followed in all particulars and that the accused would be given a fair trial.

A Board of Inquiry as provided by the Immigration Act will inquire into the activities of the alleged Communists arrested this week at Winnipeg and Sudbury, and on the evidence adduced before this body a decision will be made by the Minister of Immigration as to whether these men should or should not be deported. This Board of Inquiry will sit at Halifax.

Mr. Gordon said that the action of the Government involved no change in policy. When the Minister omitted to say under whose authority the action was taken Mr. Woodsworth pressed him, and finally adding the question and proceeded to repeat the question. This was cut short by the speaker.

One man, Mr. Woodsworth, had been in Canada 34 years and had married a Canadian girl and had lived here here 20 years. Why take them to Halifax? Mr. Gordon did not answer.

"Why are these men to be tried away from their homes and not instead of Winnipeg, where they were arrested?" Mr. Woodsworth demanded Mr. Brown. No answer.

Right Hon. Mr. King said how it came about that the case was not to be reviewed in Winnipeg, and Mr. Gordon insisted that there was nothing unusual about that. "They were not arrested in the ordinary sense. The Board of Inquiry is a judicial tribunal," he quiry, in cases "where we are positively certain a man is illegally in Canada" had sat before at the port nearest the country of the man's origin.

The story of an Austrian princess, daughter of Francis I and Maria Theresa who became Napoleon's second Empress is told by E. M. Oddie (Eleanor O'Donoghue) in her book Marie Louise, Empress of France, Duchess of Parma. With the banishment of Napoleon to Elba, his Empress seems to have faded from the European scene. Miss Oddie shows, however, that such was not the case but that she became the Duchess of Parma with a view to making her son "King of Rome" The book begins with a sketch of the year 1790 where the future Empress Francis, Neipperg, Napoleon, Josephine, and the baby Marie Louise are described in various parts of the world, unconscious of the fate which is to throw them together. Portraits of many of the contemporary personalities of the time are included in the volume, which is one of human rather than historical interest.

An historical account of the New Poland which was re-established after the Great War as one of the major states of the continent, is given in the book, "Poland 1916-1931" by Robert Machray. Q. B. C. NOTES

Examination of the register of attendance at Ontario Business College for the fifteen months since February 1, 1931, shows that students from the following thirty-seven places in Ontario have attended the college during that brief period: Amalisburg, Bancroft, Belleville, Bloomfield, Brighton, Campbellford, Cobourg, Coe Hill, Consecon, Crookston, Demorestville, Elgin, Eldorado, Foxboro, Frankford, Greenview, Kingston, Lake, Madoc, Marmora, Napanee, Ottawa, Perth, Point Anne, Redgerville, Shannonville, Sombra, Springbrook, Stirling, Sudbury, Tamworth, Tichborne, Trenton, Tweed, Veronorville and Verona. As would be expected, Belleville supplied the largest number—179—etc.

During the same fifteen months Quebec was represented at O. B. C. by a large number of students, who came from nineteen different towns and cities in that province, namely: East Broughton, Gaspe, Grandes Piles, Lachine, Montreal, New Richmond, Ormstown, Quebec City, St. Eustache, St. Narcisse, Sawyerville, Sherbrooke, Sorel, Stayner ville, Thetford Mines, Three Rivers, Victoria Junction, Victoriaville and Westmount.

In the same period students were at the college from the following places outside of Canada, viz.: N. J.; Hamilton, Bermuda; St. Anne's Bay, Jamaica; Bridgetown, Barbados; St. John's, Antigua; Georgetown, British Guiana, and England.

No other business college in Canada attracts so many students from so many distant places as does O. B. C. The reason for this is that O. B. C. courses and the success of its graduates are the reasons for the popularity of this institution.

Women's Interest In The Home

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Use Astringent Masks For Coarse Pores

If any beauty ill justifies tantrums, it is the skin that is of coarse texture and which has an oil gushing complex. One can lay all the blame on one's ancestors since the trouble is handed on from one generation to the next. One may, though, one wouldn't, pass a verdict of guilty on mama who making fed daintie on foods too rich and so threw sebaceous glands into a state of riot and disorder.

At any rate, there it is a comfortable fact, and like a pin cushion dented with pin holes. It is hateful. That like cause of recognition, is growing a new face of velvet smooth tens, is a worthy ambition nobody will doubt and the campaigner should go at the business tooth and nail. The victory won't be easy because skin texture isn't easily changed. But it will improve and by the aid of subtle artifices used nowadays the epidermis can be made presentable.

There is first the matter of groceries. Fats and oils must be cut down. Fruit juices are to be included in the daily diet. One small head of lettuce a day and vegetables that grow above ground are essential. Broiled meats are to be substituted for those that are fried or boiled. Still more important is the water drinking rule no fewer than six glasses a day being absolutely necessary to assist the skin to function properly. Some day we'll have special diets for all beauty ills and what will the beauticians do then, poor things?

Be faithful in treatment. It's the girl who sticks to her beautifying schedule who wins her case.

"Not to the drug store and buy a few ounces of kaolin, which is Fuller's earth, clean and sterilized. Mix with witch hazel to form a thin paste, spread over a clean skin surface, let remain on until the application flakes off. Lave with tepid water, rub in a small amount of cream and, while the cream remains on, indulge in an ironing with an ice cube. If direct applications give you the shivers, wrap the cube in gauze. The kaolin pack is to be used practically every night. It is effective in combating blackheads, and the witch hazel has a stimulating influence on circulation.

On one night a week substitute the white of egg mask. Egg while is whipped slightly, so that it is manageable. It is spread on in a thin filmm, left to do its puckering up work and then laved away. Cream and ice follow.

If the color of the complexion is good, coarse texture is not so noticeable. It is when the skin is coarse and sallow that the effect is productive of lasting shame and despair. Sallowness is nearly always the result of digestive disturbances or constipation.

There will be no magic change in a single week, but within a month's time the complexion will fresh under this treatment, and the mirror will deliver an encouraging report. Where conditions have been present for years and y'ars, you can't expect them to do a quick turn-about.

Weddings

CURL—WHEELER

At Ronaka, Alberta, on April 6, 12 p.m. a very pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's parents, when Helen Pearl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. T. Wheeler, of Ronaka, was united in hold matrimony to Thurman William, son of Mrs. and E. Curl, of Ronaka, Rev. T. R. Davies officiating.

The bride entered the decorated room and was led to an arch of evergreen on the arm of her father, while Miss Olive Wheeler played the wedding march. The bride looked very charming in a gown of white crepe and chantchilles lace with a bridal veil worn in the bonnet style and in place by a bunch of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations and lilies tied with white ribbons. Miss Mona Wheeler, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and looked dainty in a dress of pale green flowered georgette.

Mr. Arthur Perry assisted the groom.

While the register was being signed Olive Wheeler played very softly strains of "I Love You Truly."

After the ceremony a sumptuous dinner was served, then the happy couple left on their honeymoon for Edmonton.

The bride travelled in a brown and sand tweed suit, brown hat and accessories to match.

On their return the happy couple will make their home in the Concord district of Ronaka.

TABERNACLE W.M.S.

The May meeting of the Tabernacle United Church Women's Association was held in the church parlor on Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Lent presiding.

During the devotional period, Hymns No. 384, "What a Friend We Have in Jesus" and 308 "Take Me Oh Thou Great Jehovah" were sung. Mrs. L. Alexander read the Bible Lesson and the president and Mrs. Proala led in prayer.

Reports of the various committees were received and adopted.

Mrs. Lent gave a hearty welcome to the visitors present.

The following program was given under the auspices of Group No. 1.

A reading entitled "Mother" was given by Mrs. Shoesmith and a reading, "Mrs. O'Dell and the Conductor" was splendidly rendered by Mrs. Campbell. Mrs. Proala was responsible for a dialogue on "The Bible," cleverly given by Misses Emma Dafoe and Ruth Newson, which contained a lesson for all. Mrs. Fisher read some verses paying high tribute to "Mother", this was followed by that beautiful duet "Wonderful Mother of Mine," sung by Mrs. Duff and Mrs. Miller, with Miss Barlow at the piano. COMFORT for COLICKY BABIES with Castoria's gentle regulation

"The best way to cure colic," says a famous doctor, "is to prevent it." And the best way to prevent it is to avoid gas in stomach and bowels by keeping the entire intestinal tract open, free from waste.

But there's one thing to remember here. A tiny baby's tender organs cannot stand harsh treatment. They must be gently urged.

This is just the place Castoria comes to a mother's aid. Castoria, you know, is made specially for the delicate needs of babies and children. It is a pure vegetable preparation which is absolutely harmless. It contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics.

Children never fight Castoria. They like its taste and the relaxed comfort its gentle regulation brings.

For many years it has helped mothers through trying ordeals with colicky babies, with children suffering from digestive upsets, colds and other little ailments. Keep it on hand for your children. You can always tell genuine Castoria by the name Chas. H. Fletcher.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Bradshaw Presented With Chest of Silver

A very pleasant evening was spent on Monday last, when the friends and neighbors of the surrounding community gathered at the home of Mr. Wesley Bradshaw to extend their best wishes to their youngest son, Arthur and present him with a chest of silver.

The following address was read by Miss A. Brown:

Dear Arthur:

We, your friends and neighbours, have gathered tonight to extend to you a hearty welcome in our community and our church. You are launching out into the sea of life together with very prospect of a happy and useful life. God has given to you both, talents and endowments which will enable you to make your life a real blessing and help to all you may associated with.

We are glad Arthur that you are to remain in this, your childhood home and have brought your young bride to be one with us whom we gladly welcome tonight and extend congratulations and best wishes for a happy and successful life.

Immediately after dismissal the members of Group 1 conducted a successful sale of home cooking.

Mispah Benediction brought to a close a very interesting and enjoyable meeting.

Quebec Premier Expresses Sympathy

Quebec, May 7. — Premier A. Taschereau has sent a cablegram to Hon. Paul Painleve in Paris asking the Canadian Minister to extend to the French Government and the family of the late President Doumer, the sympathy of the Quebec Government.

The cable reads: "Please extend to the Government of the French Republic and to the family of M. Doumer our very deepest sympathy."

France has removed quota restrictions for certain household articles.

"FATIGUE?

I just postpone it!"

"No, I don't have 'nerves.' You can't have them, and hold this sort of attention. My head used to throb around three o'clock, and certain days, of course, were worse than others.

"Then I learned to rely on Aspirin."

The sure cure for any headache is real. But sometimes we must postpone it. That's when Aspirin saves the day. Two tablets, and the nagging pain is gone until you are home. And soon you are convinced the pain seldom returns!

Keep Aspirin handy. Don't put it away, or put off taking it. Fighting a headache to finish the day may be heroic, but it is also a little foolish. So is sacrificing a night's sleep because you've an annoying cold, or irritated throat, or grumbling tooth, neuralgia, neuritis. These tablets always relieve. They don't depress the heart, and may be taken freely. That is medical opinion. It is a fact established by the last twenty years of medical practice.

The only caution to be observed is when you are buying Aspirin. Don't take a substitute because it will not act the same. Aspirin is made in Canada.

FINANCIAL NEWS

CLOSING TONE MUCH EASIER

Maintained Fairly Good Undertone But Some Profit Taking

NEW YORK, May 7.—The stock market paused to get its bearings to upturn.

The list maintained a fairly good undertone, but further rallies attracted week-end selling and profit taking, and there were numerous small gains largely fractions to a point—at the finish. The turnover approximated 600,000 shares and the closing tone was easy.

Rails and oils acted best, but were unable to make persistent headway. The week end brought little in the way of business or political news of a character further to stimulate the market.

Attention still converged upon Washington as bankers and others looked for further signs of congressional determination to balance the budget with equitable taxation and economies. In the meantime, forces still showed some slight concern over the United States dollar, which again surged in the Foreign Exchange market.

In the Metal Section, Pe closed about a point higher, and Delaware and Hudson rose more than three points. Among the specialties, American "B" was again a firm spot in the oils, rising more than two points. As a further reflection of the purchase of a foreign property by a subsidiary of N.J. The fact was by standard of N.J. that the properties in the Near East were valued on the basis of "book value" rather than the seventy dollars per share basis contracted attention.

U. S. Steel common closed a major fraction lower, and miscellaneous issues off a point or less. Utilities were irregular. Public Service of N.J. National Power and Light, Woolworth, Consolidated Gas, American Tobacco B. Eastman, American Telephone and a few others. The list opened steady, suggesting a little in the first hour, stiffened a little then eased off in the last 15 minutes.

JOHNSON—In loving memory of our dear grandmother, Mrs. W. J. Johnson, who departed from us on May 9th, 1928.

We shall meet to part no more.

Eggs Remain Stationary While Poultry is Plentiful

Despite the adverse weather conditions, which prevailed locally on Saturday, Belleville's market was largely attended by vendors and purchasers alike.

The prevailing prices, which has been in vogue of late remained quite stationary, when at the Bridge market eggs sold from 13 to 14 cents a dozen, with pullet's eggs remaining at 10 cents a dozen. Butter sold at 22 to 23 cents a pound, found plenty of buyers. The variation in prices of chickens was noticed, when they retailed at from 65c. to $1.10 according to their size and quality. Plenty of home cooking was observed and the citizens took advantage not by the eager purchasers who desired fresh vegetables. Plenty of young plants were seen with pansies at 25c, snapdragons at 20c and cabbage plants at 2 boxes for 25c being offered to the purchasers.

The feature of the outside market was the decline in price of potatoes per bag, which on Saturday's prices, when plenty of potatoes were sold at 50 cents a bag.

Seasonable apples were in evidence and sold at the prevailing prices of the day.

Good wood still into store lengths brought from $5.00 to $6.00 per load, according to its size. Young porker sold from 8½ to 9½ cents a lb.

Belleville's market is today reported as one of the largest and finest market's in Ontario. This fact has been duly exemplified of late when the Bridge market has been filled to over flowing each Saturday.

Anti Soviet Fanatic Kills Doumer Hoping to Kindle War with Moscow Police Save Him from Mob's Clutch

End Comes at 5 a.m. as High Officials Stand at Bedside—All Europe Mourns His Death —Author Wounded Attempting Rescue

PHYSICIANS STRIVE DESPERATELY

Blood Transfusions, Trepanning, Other Methods Taken to Save Life—Went Into Coma After Shooting—Severe Hemorrhage

Paris, May 7 (AP)—President Paul Doumer of France died this morning from two bullet wounds inflicted by a "white" Russian fanatic who shot him down as he was attending a war veterans' charity exhibition yesterday afternoon.

Death came at 4.40 a.m., almost exactly 12 hours after the venerable President was shot. While members of his family and high Government officials stood at the President's bedside in the public hospital to which he was removed after the shooting.

The end came peacefully as Doumer long since had fallen into a coma from the loss of blood.

Thousands Wait Word

News that their beloved "Pere" was gone passed quickly to the tens of thousands of his countrymen who had anxiously awaited any vigil in the streets outside the hospital. Some of them knelt in prayer. Others bared their heads and walked slowly away.

Within a few hours of the end Doumer astonished physicians by his amazing resistance. At 2.30 a.m. they detected the cerebral, hemorrhages that caused them to abandon hope.

The first rays of dawn were breaking over the city as an automobile hearse carried the body to the presidential palace.

Premier Andre Tardieu remained at the hospital comforting the president's widow. Others at the bedside when Doumer died were his daughter, Mrs. Emery; Andre Francois Pietri, Minister of National Defence, and Albert Sarraut, Minister of the Interior.

It was announced that as a result of the president's death, his apparently insane assasin, Dr. Paul Gorulov, would be charged with first degree murder.

Le Brun Likely Successor

In accordance with the constitution the national assembly will meet at Versailles within eight days to elect a successor to Doumer.

It is likely that Albert Le Brun, president of the Senate, will be named first citizen of the Republic. He has been a member of Parliament since 1900 and a Senator since 1920.

Hoped to Start War

The assassin confessed that his purpose in shooting the president was to kindle a war between France and Russia to end the Soviet domination of his country.

Doumer, he said, personified his imperialism.

A hand-written autobiography in his pocket read: "My confession before God; France, Europe, listen to me! I prepared the Doumer attempt single-handed.

"I am not French, nor a bandit, nor crazy. I shot alone. The members of my association had nothing to do with the attempt. I have no confidence in them."

HOPED TO END SOVIETISM BY ASSASSINATION

Had Vial of Poison to Take After Dastardly Act Was Committed

PARIS, May 7.—Paul Gorgulov told the police last night after a willing surrender—a story of questioning that he tried to kill President Paul Doumer that Prance might declare war on Russia.

"European states seemed favorable to Bolshevism," the police finally declared, "so I decided to kill the president and cause France to declare war on Russia.

"I had no accomplices. I carried another pistol and a vial of poison in my pocket.

"I planned to kill myself because I knew my life had been finished." The assassin said he was born in 1895 at Braviacula, Russia, in the Caucasus, and was raised as a Cossack. He said he served with the Czar's army on the Austrian front and was educated in medicine at Prague.

This medical education presumably was after the war, and it was explained he had lived in several European cities including Paris until 1931. He was expelled twice from France for practicing medicine without a license.

Then with his family, Gorgulov went to Monaco, where he organized what he called a party of "Russian Fascist Democrats and Anti-Monarchists." There were about 40 members of the party, he said.

The Russian journalist, Arkadi Borman, said he knew the assassin as a writer (he used the name of Paul Brad), Gorgulov advocated what he called "the green conservatism" as a means of saving Russia.

The idea was that Russia should be placed in the hands of peasants, process of salt making.

and green represented the color of the forests.

Gorgulov admitted he admired Mussolini and Hitler, but said he had no connection with them.

"Where did you get the money to live in Paris?" he was asked.

He waved an airy hand. "It will be would say."

The assassin was roughly handled in an effort to get information from him.

"I am a great Russian patriot," he said. "I know you will kill me, but my duty to Russia I have done. I did."

As the prisoner was transferred from the preliminary hearing to a cell, a great crowd gathered threatening. Police reserves were on hand.

Someone shouted "kill him," and the crowd surged forward but the reserves controlled it.

The police said they had recently received information that an anarchist group was organizing in France, but neither the President nor the assassin had been linked with such information.

The assassin is a powerfully built man, and it took several men to subdue him when he fired on the President.

He emerged from Chargo de Rothschild salon, where the attack occurred, with a badly battered face from the blows of a cameraman's box and his clothing was torn.

Paul Guichard, director of the Paris police, was credited with saving others from serious injury in the melee in the hall ending with King Alfonso XIII, of Spain, in Paris in 1905, the anarchist Sauvet shot at but missed President Millerand in Paris in 1922.

The late Georges Clemenceau, wartime Premier, was twice wounded by an assasin and the famous Socialist leader, Jean Jaures was killed on the eve of the World War in 1914.

The death of Doumer compels the summoning of a national assembly (Congress essentially). There is no vice-president and a successor must be elected by a new vote. Theodore Steeg, Senate President; Albert Lebrun and Chamber President Fernand Bouisson are the most likely candidates at present.

Motorists in Runford, Me., who drive their cars through mud puddles, splashing pedestrians, are subject to prosecution on an assault and battery charge.

DOUMER HELD MANY OFFICES IN HIS CAREER

Enjoyed More Honors During 44 Years Than Other Frenchmen

FOUR SONS KILLED

First Cabinet Portfolio Was Minister of Finance in 1895

Paris, May 7—(UP)—Paul Doumer the second French president to die by assasination enjoyed more honors and suffered greater tragedy during the 44 years of his political career than perhaps any other distinguished Frenchman.

A quiet sagacious politician, Doumer first entered parliament in 1888 and for the rest of his life with brief exceptions held political positions.

The story of his sacrifice of four sons in the World War is tragic even in France where every family felt some deep, aching armistice day wound.

His first son, a young artillery officer died in the early days of warfare. Two died together in the trenches and, when they had been gravely wounded, volunteered for the hazardous task. Both won the rank of captain and both fell in the last desperate days of 1918.

The fourth son, a major, died a few days after the armistice of the effects of gas inhaled while caring for wounded comrades.

Doumer died on March 22, 1857, at Aurillac, department of Cantal. He became a teacher, then a journalist and finally entered politics. He was chief of staff of Le Temps, then president of the chamber.

He was appointed governor of Indo-China from 1897 to 1902 and, after serving as Parliamentary and elected president of the Chamber of Deputies in 1906.

It was in that year that he was defeated as candidate for the presidency and was defeated by M. Fallieres. In 1912 he entered the Senate, representing Corsica and was returned in 1921. He was frequently a cabinet minister, serving chiefly as Minister of Finance under the late Aristide Briand. Later he became president of the Senate.

His election to the presidency was something of a surprise last June. Briand was slated for the post, but served for only four years of service at the Quai D'Orsay. He appeared in his silk hat and frock coat in his chauffeur carrying the formal clothes required, appeared at Versailles to accept the presidency.

The national assembly, composed of both Houses of Parliament contained many foes of Briand and at last the presidency was a wild revolt against him. Doumer was elected.

Oldest Man to Lead Government.

Doumer was the oldest man ever elected to the presidency. His age and his appearance gave him dignity and authority to bolster his political skill. His clothes were always meticulously correct and in the early days of his administration he was criticized for his extreme attention to details of dress and his information on all occasions as had once been the case with Woodrow Wilson.

He rose early, often at 5 a.m. and was a teetotaler. He married at the age of 21 and had nine children.

The only other French president ever assassinated was Sadi Carnot, who was slain in June, 1894, but his other presidents had been attacked. Loubet escaped death when a bomb exploded near his carriage in which he was riding with King Alfonso XIII, of Spain, in Paris in 1905, the anarchist Sauvet shot at but missed President Millerand in Paris in 1922.

The late Georges Clemenceau, wartime Premier, was twice wounded by an assasin and the famous Socialist leader, Jean Jaures was killed on the eve of the World War in 1914.

The death of Doumer compels the summoning of a national assembly (Congress essentially). There is no vice-president and a successor must be elected by a new vote. Theodore Steeg, Senate President; Albert Lebrun and Chamber President Fernand Bouisson are the most likely candidates at present.

HARDY WRITE AND MAN THEME OF PROF. CLARKE

Address to Reading Group Dealt With Poet-Novelist

REMINISCENCES

Members of the Reading Club of the city who have followed with much pleasure the series of lectures conducted here by Professor Clarke of Queen's University during the past season attended in large numbers the final address last evening. From his opening and most comprehensive lecture on "What is Literature" and throughout his intimate and instructive talks, Professor Clarke has held his audience in vivid pictures of contemporary writers as well, as scholarly analyses of their works.

Last evening's talk devoted chiefly to a discussion of Thomas Hardy the writer, and Hardy, the man, introduced, however, many personal glimpses of other great men of England, with whom he had close friendship with Hardy. Professor Clarke has during his sojourn spent much time in England interviewing for treatises he was preparing; leading novelists' visits to and during his lectures have been enriched by personal reminiscences of the subjects of his lectures.

Man of Great Charm

Thomas Hardy, the speaker said, was a man of great charm. "One could not fail of impress all with whom he came in contact. He was not touched with "literary affectation and was relatively indifferent to fame. Hardy, the speaker said, was a poetic medium. He preferred reading as well as writing poetry, and confessed that it was hard work for him to revise even the best novel.

His youthful writing of poetry was definitely discouraged by his father who told him that poetry was produced by until after his novel. Jude the Obscure, roused public wrath and condemnation by the English public. Hardy was amazed and amused by bitter attacks made upon him, the effect of which was to cause him to write more forcefully.

Frustrated Scholar

Jude the Obscure, a novel of contrasts, is a classic example of the frustrated scholar. The hero's failure was dreadful but it had its own dignity, while that of Sue was tragedy with degradation in the end. Hardy did not seek to solve moral issues but to present a realistic picture of a dilemma in which youth suffered. Hardy was also representing on the criticism with which it was received he said that the work of the imaginative writer is attacked frequently as propaganda when it is meant to be an artistic.

In his novels Hardy related universal experience, returning to characters not uncommon. He thought that novels should have a definite plot, interestingly presented. Style should be, preferably, tragedies the worthy encompassed by the inevitable.

Love Poetry Theme

Love was the chief theme of his poetry, as well as death and bereavement. His tolerant and sympathetic attitude toward the fallen and the clergy, and his sympathy with children, animals, the birds and the trees, are reflected in his writings. Hardy had little regard for poetry as a means of self expression as in all strictness a wrong which should be placed in the mouth of a story as when it was practised on mankind. War, he viewed, as a damning flaw in the character of man and never hesitated to condemn war.

In his lecture last evening, Professor Clarke gave a searching analysis of the colossal drama, "The Dynasts", of which the true hero was neither Napoleon nor Napoleon as many thought but humanity itself.

The appreciation of the Club for Professor Clarke's lectures was aptly expressed by Mr. F. A. C. Downe, who has been the very valuable chairman of the organization for the past year.

ROSES LED IN FLOWER SALES

There was no shortage of flowers in the city Saturday when the florist shop, taking the occasion of Mother's Day, had made lengthy preparations and attractive displays of their beautiful stocks during the past few days, and the corner store room found many of them with almost bare shelves and windows.

Roses were the flowers which were called for by the greatest number. These were selling throughout the city at 50c per dozen, and as the stocks of them were large they found it none too large for the amount which was sold. Other flowers including potted plants, suitable for hospitals were also called for and bought up quickly.

While the Belleville General Hospital reported no excessive influx of the bouquets or buds this morning, it is expected that before the day is finished by florists of all kinds in profusion. Today there were a few in the morning but not in great; as numbers as in other years. Out of town patients received several beautiful bouquets by telegraph through local shops.

Thurlow Conservative Club Hold Tumour Night to Hear Two Interesting Addresses

Dr. G. D. Stanley and Gen. G. S. Stewart Both of West Speak

MEMBERS WELCOMED

South Hastings Member Thanked Association For Remembrance

A fine attendance of the Conservatives of Thurlow, answered the invitation of the most active political organization in Central Ontario, last night at the Orange Hall, Canniffton, when the Thurlow Conservative Club, at their regular monthly meeting had for speakers, Dr. G. D. Stanley, M.P., Calgary East, a running mate of Premier R. B. Bennett there, Gen. G. S. Stewart, M.P., Lethbridge, and the ever popular member to Ottawa from Hastings South. W. E. Tummon spoke most briefly and his speech from the west proved to be versatile and entertaining, dealing with political subjects in a general way, emphasizing more particularly western conditions both political and financial. Bruce Martin, vice-president of the club, in the absence, through illness of the president, Mrs. Ben Clarke, occupied the chair and most capably handled the evening's proceedings.

Orchestra Present.

The six piece Belleville orchestra were present and dispensed intermittent selections throughout the evening and their playing was appreciated by all present. Mrs. Lesley Sprung, well rendered solos with encores, and the Misses Hill in piano duets also pleased the audience and responded to the well merited applause with further selections.

Mr. Tummon was the first speaker and his remarks were brief. He appreciated that the club had set aside evening and Tuesday night and regretted his unavoidable absence at the April meeting. He had that night a hasty summons from the Minister of Agriculture and had to be at Ottawa, there was news coming soon from that department though the press that would be of interest to all. He extended to the western guests the welcome of himself and of the Thurlow Conservative Club. Belleville had had provincial parliamentary experience in Alberta before coming to Ottawa. He then introduced Gen. Stewart.

First Ontario Appearance.

Gen. Stewart said he had gone west from Ontario thirty-two years and this was the first time he had addressed a political gathering in Ontario. He had been anxious to have that opportunity and since the changes here, how they reacted on him, and the effect of what he said had on his hearers. He had known Dr. Stanley for thirty years socially and for twenty years they had been together in Conservative ranks of Alberta. People of the east had considered the west were all or mostly all free traders or low protectionists. The last election had shown the farmers there, now appreciated the necessity of protection for themselves. He spoke of various industries in the province, pictures of races there and yet how in all occasions they were turning to the Conservatives for leadership.

Dr. Stanley in taking the floor first tendered the laudations of Gen. Stewart and himself to the representative of South Hastings in the House of Commons. It was not the ones alone that could only speak on the floor of the house, who rank high in the estimation of party leaders, but those who could give valuable assistance in other ways when needed, who were sought out and placed high in their esteem. Belleville and district interests in agricultural matters was unequalled by any constituency in the Government side of the House.

He had been in Ontario and as his forebears had seen the development of Ontario, so he had seen the unfoldment of the great building of the west. The troubled times that there were now prevailed, but the reciprocative power of nations of the world would indubitable will to win through lived for. Dr. Stanley in a forceful manner he depicted the troubles of the Dominion today, and those of other countries of the world. The Canadas are hard hit, but not to the degree that those of the world-wide depression has assailed other nations.

5th Commercial Nation

Canada today was the small population of ten million was the 5th commercial nation of the world, and the present Conservative government was holding her in that position. The financial depression of the county was colossal, when Premier Bennett came into power, but Canada's credit had been maintained and was today at the top of nations of the world's credit. Money had to be found to cope with the unemployment problems, in maintaining the credit of certain provincial governments of the west, in looking after a vast number of western farmers, in the upkeep of the O.N.R. and its huge obligations and many other problems, yet through all this the present administration had steered a course that had maintained and even strengthened the country's credit and in the times of and strain had been living up to its obligations.

Canada Fortunate

Canada was fortunate to have as its premier today, a type of man such as the Hon. R. B. Bennett. At the coming Imperial Economic Conference, his statesmanship, tact and influence would count much in the making of those meetings toward the unity and advancement of the British Empire. He was recognized the Empire over and held in high regard.

In a limited way Dr. Stanley paid his regards to the Liberal party, the federal and provincial leaders and referred to the dormancy of both in the matter of the Beauharnois deal, and the recent exposure of certain of their members of the Senate.

Terminating his masterly address, the doctor called for the upholding of the high national character and worthy citizenship, that Canada had attained based on the foundation laid down by the pioneers of old; to build up the great nation which was destined to become.

Following the vote of thanks to the speakers and the singing and the singing of the national anthem, the ladies of the club, served refreshments. In all it was another of the many successful evenings in the Thurlow Conservative Club's history.

May Stop Sailing of Thalia Massie

Honolulu, T.H., May 7.—Prosecutor John Kelley announced last night he will try to hold Thalia Massie in Honolulu as a material witness in the retrial of four islanders accused of attacking her last September.

To serve a subpoena on her if I could get a police officer through the gates to Pearl Harbor naval reservation, Kelley told the United Press.

While Mrs. Massie is on the naval reservation, she cannot be cited by territorial authorities. She plans to sail Sunday for the mainland.

He was anxious to re-try the attack case. Other high officials, it was believed, were willing that it be dropped, in order to bring to an end a case that has led to political upheavals, violence and a navy boycott of Honolulu merchants.

The Hungarian partridge nests twice a year, and hatches twenty eggs at each sitting.

Economy Begins at Home

—at the Tickell and Browne Funeral Home

WE DON'T LIKE THE WORD "CHEAP"!

Economy? Certainly! No one is too proud to admit the value of economy in these times. But who cares to advertise to the world that he is purchasing something CHEAP?

We don't believe in cheapness. We won't tolerate it. We can and do render economical funeral service—fine service for decidedly less than one would be asked to pay elsewhere—but it isn't CHEAP service.

So Tickell and Browne service will ever be THEAP. That's a point worth remembering!

UNEARTHING LARGE BONES

Miners Find Skeletons of Mammoth Animals in B. C.

(By The Canadian Press)

VICTORIA, B.C.—Bones of mammoth animals which roamed the north in the prehistoric ages are being unearthed by miners in the gold fields of Alaska, according to John D. Harlan, manager at Nome for the United States Smelting and Refining Company, who was here recently in conference with British Columbia mining officials.

"These glacial age specimens are being dug up every season in the gold-bearing gravels of the company's property near Nome," Harlan said Mr. Harlan. "Scientific societies have become interested in the discoveries and are sending their agents into the field to arrange for preservation of specimens. Some of the finds are probably anywhere from 15,000 to 50,000 years old, but they will preserved, but widely scattered."

TRIBUTES TO GEORGE PAYNE

Judge Huycke Recalls Student Days With Late Magistrate

"It came as a shock to me when I drove into the town and saw the flags at half-mast and later learned that Mr. Payne had passed away", His Honor said. "The late Mr. Payne he stated, was an honorable and careful man at his practice, and although as a magistrate for many years he dealt out justice evenly and fairly he will be remembered longer, as a practitioner of law. He was a man of many friends. I have known him since his days as a student at Toronto before he located in Campbellford and I wish to offer the members of the Campbellford bar in tender my deepest sympathy to the bereaved family.

"We must remember" Judge Huycke said, "that Mr. Payne did his work well. Life's task was well done and then came rest and it was our duty to carry on the principles he endeavored to establish upon us."

Mr. Lynch drew the attention of the court to the loss in the ranks of the Campbellford bar in the death of the late Mr. Payne, addressing the court which all were heard.

He wished he said, to express the bar's deepest sympathy and regret at the departure by death of one of their members, a man who had served the town many years as magistrate and carried on his profession to the satisfaction of the community and with efficiency and loyalty. The widow and family, he stated, would receive the condolence of the community, who all held the late Mr. Payne in the deepest respect."

Mr. MacColl associated with Mr. Lynch his sorrow at the loss the community has sustained with the death of Mr. Payne and the loss of the community his death brings. He had come here as a student he said, and had always worked for the welfare of the town. "It impresses me that his life was so woven with the town that it was a part of it," he declared.

"He had played a great part in the growth and development of Campbellford and had always taken an active part in the meeting, as an active part in the meeting, as a faithful minded magistrate, Mr. Payne had been always willing to help and assist to be of service" declared Mr. MacColl and the family would have the deepest sympathy of the town and district in their loss."

Carrying Place

Carrying Place—Spring in all its rather doubtful glory is upon us, and winter is gone at last (we hope). The pleasant sunshine, the cheering of roosters, the tinkling of carpet-beaters, and the interesting antics of the children, all have a very positive proof that summer is on the way. Bare windows now do not necessarily mean that the larders are vacant, or are going to be; it is housekeeping time. Flowing, seeding, planting, weeding, in fact almost all the domestic operations except harvesting, are in progress, and it progises to be a busy season and a good one, and the potato-bug.

The Guild met in the Parish Hall last Wednesday afternoon, and with about a dozen ladies in attendance a very profitable afternoon was spent sewing and quilting. Mrs. Chase entertained after the conclusion of the meeting, and the fresh maple syrup that she provided was much appreciated.

Miss Lavina Weese returned to her home here after spending the brief visit at the home of her sister, Mrs. Ira Hewton, at Brighton. While in Brighton Miss Weese took part in the presentation of the Wellington A.Y.P.A. play, "Miss Temple's Telegram", which they have several times given in Carrying Place, Wellington and in Milford recently. The play was given in Brighton town Hall on Friday evening before a large crowd, and got a very satisfactory sum realized.

Rev. A. E. Tavener of this circuit was ordained to the ministry on Sunday at Kingston. Accordingly there was no preaching appointment Sunday School was held as usual.

The boys are to be taking a keen interest in softball every night in order to turn out a working team in time for the opening of the league schedule on May 17th. Mr. J. James has offered his services as coach, and the boys are practicing faithfully under his guidance. At a recent meeting Mr. Bill Hamilton was chosen to act as treasurer, but the position of captain is as yet vacant.

Mr. Arnold Weese spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Simpson at Wooler.

Miss Audrey Barker who has been for some time at the Ontario Training School in Toronto, is spending a two-weeks holiday at her home here.

Mr. Harry Ham of Coe Hill spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hanthorn.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Laiour spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Miller in Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Weese, Miss Lavina Weese, and Master Norman Weese took dinner on Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Hewton in Wellington, and later in the day called on Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bristol in Picton.

A vast improvement may be noted in the condition of the Trenton road since a power-grader was put on it last week. It has been smoothed out and levelled, and very few traces remain of the mud holes which caused so much difficulty only a short time ago.

Mrs. M. Weese spent a few days at Clemora last week visiting Mr. and Mrs. Bert McGillary and Miss Leona Weese.

At the organization meeting of the Ameliasburg Softball League held in Consecon recently, it was arranged that the schedule should commence on May 17th. Since then time, however, others have requested that the opening date be moved up to May 12th. No definite information is available at present, but a new schedule may be published in a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Dusenbury, after a pleasant trip to Detroit a week ago, returned last Saturday evening to their home here. Mr. Arlie Tompkins who took Mr. Dusenbury's mail route during his absence, is remaining for a few days.

Miss Gertrude Kemp of O.B.C. and her friend, Miss Edn Tutts of Tweed, spent Saturday and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Wagnasmaker.

Miss Black and Mr. and Mrs. Norrington attended a meeting of the Murray Teachers Association at Miss Monroe's school at York Sunday Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Neil Wood, Mr. Ernest Drury, and Mr. Colin Lain, all of Wellington, spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Weese and family.

On Sunday, May 1st, the bus began its regular summer Sunday schedule. From now until the last of November Mr. Hogle will be driving each Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Morton Mitchell are planning to move to Trenton in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Campbell and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hall motored to Trenton spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. H. Herrington.

Mr. W. E. Weese spent the week-end at home.

Mr. Bill Laiour is remodelling the east half of the Laiour home; has been busy this last week with plastering, painting, papering, and carpentering.

Cannifton

W. Huntingdon

West Huntingdon — Mrs. James Wilson and Mrs. Vera and Elmer were admitted for the first time to the new hundred mail facility on Friday last. They were much pleased with his condition and appearance, the fact that he was very weak bodily, he conversed with them very intelligently about everything and everybody, and while he would necessarily be obliged to go home, yet he felt the change had done him much good and most highly of all that was being done for him.

It is not expected that his stay will be very prolonged and many friends will be glad to welcome him home.

Mrs. George Post spent Saturday with her daughter, Mrs. A. McCurdy who was very ill on Friday.

The name of the minister performing the marriage ceremony uniting Mary Elliott and Rachel Johnston was incorrectly printed in last week's news. The name of Rev. W. H. Truscott should be put in instead of the Rev W. E. Merrick.

The Hymn 546 and the Benediction brought the meeting to a close, after which a promenade took place with those participating adorned with fake face and a prize on their backs. GEORGE A. PAYNE LAID TO REST

Hundreds Attend Funeral Service of Campbell ford's P. M.

Campbellford, May 7—With all business suspended and flags at half-mast, the late George Alfred Payne, prominent Campbellford lawyer and Police Magistrate, was laid to rest Friday afternoon in Mount Pleasant cemetery, here. The funeral services were conducted in the family residence, Frank Street, by the Rev. A. E. Tait, assisted by Rev. A. L. Sanderson, Whitby, and Rev. H. S. Kenny-Osneson, former pastor of St. John's Church.

That the whole district knew and loved the deceased who was one of the pioneers of the county, side, was evident by the large number that attended the funeral. Many legal dignitaries from all over the province were there as well as members of the Campbellford Bar, the Town Council, the Seymour Township Council and other civic bodies. The number of floral tributes was testified to that esteem held for the deceased.

The tribute was borne by all officers of the Ontario Provincial Police Force, headed by Provincial-pail-bearers being Dr. H. O. Richardson, A. Kingston, Col. H. Davidson, A. Saunders Free, R. McKelvie T. L. Diamond and John Frederick, K.C., all old friends and neighbors of Mr. Payne.

The death occurred suddenly on Tuesday at his Campbellford home, through a heart attack. Deceased had been at his office all day, and arrived home about noon. He raked the lawn, carried in some wood and listened to the radio awhile. A little later, however, he had a heart seizure and was treated by Dr. H. St. George, but died about nine o'clock the fatal attack took him.

Police Magistrate Payne was in his 73rd year, having been born in Asbury, July 3, 1859, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. L. Payne, Old Country pioneers. He was educated in Victoria College, later taking a law course in Osgoode Hall, Toronto, where he graduated. He came to Campbellford in 1888 and built up an extensive law practice throughout the latter northern section of Northumberland County. He was for twenty years Reeve for the Town of Campbellford and for Seymour Township. Twenty-seven years he was appointed Police Magistrate which office he held to the time of his death.

Weekly Crop Report!

WEEKLY CROP ... .

Crop conditions vary considerably from county to county. In some cases seeding is completed while in other instances farmers are just commencing to work the land. The season is from ten days to two weeks later than last year. Favourable reports about the condition of the fall wheat crop continue to arrive. Alfalfa and red clover in most cases have come through the winter in excellent condition but every clover has heaved a great deal. Rains during the past week have helped the meadows considerably. Prospects for the hay crop are excellent.

ALGOMA — Seeding conditions have been favourable throughout the week and considerable seeding is done. We are having a nice warm rain today which will give the grain a start.

BRANT — Fall wheat generally looks exceptionally well, practically no winter killing. Stands on old meadows fairly good, some new seeding has been plowed up. Orchards are coming on very nicely with fair appearance of fruit buds. A considerable amount of grain has been sown. Many of the gardeners have early potatoes in, etc., planted.

BRUCE—Growth has started and most fields of wheat look decidedly promising. The only winter killing noticed is near the lake. Many fields of alfalfa and clover are showing considerable heaving and a number will have to be plowed up. Considerable sweet clover, too, has heaved badly. It may seem unusual but this office during the past month has received a single application either for men looking for work or for farmers requiring help. The weather during the past two weeks has been decidedly favorable for seeding and many farmers have finished seeding of their grain crop.

DUFFERIN—Fall wheat which is now turning quite green is very promising. Today's rain will do much for reviving the new seeding. Seeding has only started but should be in full swing in a few days. A few early potatoes have already been planted in Garafraxa. There will be a general decrease in the planting of early potatoes, it is believed.

DUNDAS—Orchards look well, although blossom time will be much later than last year. A large number of old orchards are being trimmed up and put in shape and will be sprayed this season for the first time in several years. Prospects are for a good crop in well handled orchards. Tillage operations have commenced on a few high fields. Frost was slow in coming out and the land is still cold and unfit for working on most farms.

DURHAM—Pruning of orchards is practically completed and growers have been busy this week applying nitrate fertilizer. Orchards in the Port Hope district purchased a carload of ammonia sulphate to supply nitrate requirements. Rain during the seeding has progressed favorably but very little has been done on account of the excellent rain. A few farmers are seeding while high crops are excellent.

Rain during the seeding has progressed favorably but very little has been done on account of the excellent rain. A few farmers are seeding while high crops are excellent.

ELGIN—Fall wheat is looking fine and clovers also look healthy. A rain now would give young clovers the necessary good start. Seeding in the south end of the county is about 1/3 completed, many farmers having 2/3 of their grain in. Further north seeding is just getting under way.

ESSEX—Warm weather and rains have improved the condition of fall wheat and clover and it is looking very good. Well over 50% of spring grain has been sown, some seedings being finished, while others are just nicely started. Indications point toward considerable late annual pasture crops for the coming season.

FERTH—Fall wheat and clovers will be greatly helped with the rain. Spring crop seeding is well advanced and between 60 and 75% of seeding is completed.

PETERBOROUGH—Most of the fall wheat is in splendid shape but there is considerable damage to clover reported chiefly among young seedings. Considerable amount of seeding was done this week but the work is not nicely started as yet.

PRESCOTT & RUSSELL—Meadows and clover fields are apparently in fair shape. No damage for heaving has been reported lately. Great shortage of seed oats, and I think a shortage in clover seed in this district, though little has been done.

RENFREW—Alfalfa and clover came through winter 80 to 100% satisfactorily. Practically all farmers on the land at present time, cold and wet. Up to the end of the week delayed spring cultivating and seeding to some extent. Demand for hay about the same as last year. Interest seems to be centering around having special poultry for sale in the Fall. Shortage in clover seed in this district, though little has been done.

NORTH SIMCOE—From all reports fall wheat is more than fair where and alfalfa and red clover have come through the winter exceptionally well. On heavy land sweet clover suffered greatly through heaving. Seeding has been delayed badly. Little exists in many sections, result of which many farmers are not able to sow a lower quality of seed than they would like. Prospects for seeding done to date as the land is working fine. Cold and damp. Barley planting is being interrupted badly.

SUDBURY—Fall wheat is in good shape. Clover fields are reported in satisfactory shape. Many farmers are applying for seed grain. Agent, Mr. Dev. Branch. Seeding operations are well advanced in large parts of county.

WELLAND—Fall wheat in excellent condition and has made good growth. Clover looks healthy. Barley, wheat and oats about half seeded.

WELLINGTON—Fall wheat has never looked better for years than at present. Fields are today the last day of April. Last week we reported 12000 acres of corn and alfalfa for this county. Probably 9000 acres of this has been seeded to date. This seed had been treated with alfalfa culture. Over New Year's quite a few of the better quality feeders have sold some fat stock under one year old for over $70.00 per pair. I believe $80 was accordingly well finished and fed for the last 30 conditioning, heifer, deep, thick and smooth and showing considerable breeding, all of pure bred sires. Farmers and dairymen selling day old chicks, are being sold out a little ahead of time, to his great surprise. At the Ja. Watt sale this spring, several beef bulls sold for from $70.00 to $100.00 and Long I believe for nearer $300.00. The whole sale was a good sign of more optimism among beef cattle men. Several stocking calves going at $5.00 each or more and prices ranged generally 10% higher than the audience had expected.

WENTWORTH — Fall wheat throughout Wentworth looks unusually well. There are many good fields of alfalfa and clover but in other cases it is a total failure. There was a large demand for good seed grain in this county which we have ever seen. This is due, we think, to the campaign carried on in the county about one-quarter in the south. Early potatoes are being planted.

YORK—Practically 100% of wheat sown reasonably early has wintered well. Good seed is exceptionally scarce. Farmers possessing good seed should find that they could have sold three or four times the amount they had on hand. Growth in alfalfa and clover is fair commencing. Many lands seedings are in good condition. Some of lower lands is badly heaved and stands will probably be injured to a considerable extent.

FRONT OF THURLOW

Front of Thurlow—The Front Road Ladies' Aid met at the home of Mrs. R. Bell on Thursday afternoon with an attendance of twenty two ladies as well as several children. A number of estimates were received for re-decorating the church, the Ladies' Aid has shouldered the responsibility of carrying out this work, and two decorators were also present to quote. Considerable time was taken up in discussing the requirements and tenders submitted. A Hobby Show is to be held, and the ladies taking until the first of next week to decide whether or not to have the church wired for electric lights was also discussed, but for the present no definite steps were taken along this line.

A quilt was quilted for Mrs. Bell and a short meeting held, presided over by the President, Mrs. S. Snider. The meeting opened by singing "I love to tell the story" The Lord's Prayer was repeated, minutes of last meeting read and approved and correspondence from John Hughes read by Mrs. N. Brown.

Mrs. Ethel Bradshaw invited the aid to meet at her home for the June meeting, the refreshment committee for that month being Mrs. R. Reid, Mrs. S. Snider, Mrs. F. Purdy and Mrs. Clark. After collection and the Mispah benediction, Mrs. Bell served a very tempting lunch assisted by Mrs. C. Grass, Mrs. N. Brown, Mrs. C. R. Leveque and Mrs. T. J. Brown.

"THREE WOMEN"

By FAITH BALDWIN

COPYRIGHT BY FAITH BALDWIN — DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

FOREWORD

THREE WOMEN of different generations, of different ideals of life, of totally dissimilar attitudes, of violently opposed ideas, are living, doing most important to them although to the world at large, the type who ruled so many households in the eighties and nineties, and the modern, sensible daughter-in-law—a Gibson girl type to common in the early part of the twentieth era. . . . The third—gay flower of the other two—poet-wife of today and modern mine: How each sought to mould the other—according or conflicting—makes the drama of THREE WOMEN, which opens in a prosperous New York home of the middle 80's — almost half a century ago — (and fully as far in customs) before the present.

CHAPTER ONE

The sewing-room windows admitted the late spring sunlight with salutations. Mrs. Stanley Sheldon received the pale flickering upon the brown hair that in those days Henrietta Van Dusen rose from her rheumatic knees and arranged more superfluous pins into the cushion which hung daily at the elbow of Mrs. Sheldon's anxious face was reddened by her late exertions, she grew breathy and stout (although not that her cousin and employer might ever hear) and the lines in and about the great cheval glass.

Indeed, Fennie Sheldon nodded unintelligently to her reflection. She was a tall woman, in her early thirties. The crown of green broadcloth fitted her to perfection, the velvet sleeves stopped long, thin arms, the high collar encircled a slender throat, the tight bascque enhanced a tiny waist and the yards and yards of looped skirt were billowed over an enormous bustle—in back.

Louise saw an oval face, healthily pale, dark eyes, a little veiled, a long, firm upper lip, a straight, narrow lower one. And a mass of curious brown hair, piled and fringed above the high narrow forehead and drooping in a heavy chump, to the base of the long neck.

"It will do nicely," she commented, setting her thin hand to the constricted waist.

Henrietta sighed with relief. She got to her knees again, sat back on her rump-sore heels and pricked the skirt this way and that. Then she brushed her face with rough-red fingers. Louise was satisfied, and upon Louise satisfaction depended Henrietta's roof, her bread and butter indeed. Second cousin to the impecunious Mrs. Sheldon, Henrietta had found a home with her, had sold her services for food and some trivial spending money—a knitted purse at Christmas, perhaps, with pastel coins in it.

In return Henrietta made herself useful. She ran errands, sewed and darned fluttered about the big house on Washington Square, a witch-like figure of a woman, whose badly fitting false teeth clacked in a miniature panic when she was addressed abruptly.

Mrs. Sheldon glanced at the ormy clock on the marble-topped dresser. She said, in her cold, unhurried voice:

"I think it is time that Lennox came in!"

Her heavy eyebrows drew together. Henrietta answered, flutteringly, unable to hear any one blamed.

"It is early, Louise," soothed Nanna thought the additional time in the fresh air might benefit him.

Mrs. Sheldon made a restrained gesture.

"Hanna has her instructions," she said, with finality, and raised her hand to the hooks and eyes of her own.

Henrietta rose and made haste to help her cousin from the new gown. She laid it aside and turned to pick up the heavier morning frock which lay across a chair. Mrs. Sheldon walked, with severe patience, in her voluminous petticoats, her high, shaped corset, her straight, high legs, in their fine lisle stockings.

When the final, unflattering dress had settled about her, she walked toward the door, said, briefly, "I shall be in my room," and vanished.

Left alone, Henrietta put the new gown away and proceeded to pick up scattered pins and bits of thread. Her rusty black silk, made in the earlier fashion than that of 1885, creaked about her as she moved, stiffly and wearily about her duties.

The sewing room was cluttered with materials of silk and satin and mohair in the darker colors with muslins and linens in white. There was very little furniture and what there was had all the appearance of refugees of relegated things. Henrietta thought with longing of her narrow bed in the hall bedroom on the floor which had been assigned to her, to which she had come at the time of Louise's marriage, three years ago. If she could go up there now and lie down for a little while; Henrietta had sewed late the night before, Louise dared be dress.

But Louise disliked that any in her household should be idle.

Henrietta thought—the baby will be coming in soon—she was never noise—and, so thinking, slipped out of the door and up the stairs in a guilty creature, forty years as burdensome as sixty upon her thin, bent shoulders.

In her own bedroom Mrs. Sheldon sat in a Boston rocker and read a chapter in the Old Testament. The bedroom was very large. It was filled with massive furniture, the windows were curtained with heavy white lace, draped over lace curtains. On the papered walls were steel engravings and some colored prints of twenty years earlier. The house to which her husband had brought her from her home in Boston had altered little in the center of the room loomed the appallingly hideous double bed, bolstered and counterpanned whitely, from the angry, imperious mouth of the straight corners of her mouth.

She read her chapter, but not with perfect concentration. Her head turned frequently to any one of the three gilt or marble clocks which ticked serenely in the room, each marking a slight difference in time. She frowned, her slippered foot tapped impatiently upon the draggett footstool. Then the frown ceased and deep lines of apprehension etched themselves suddenly, from the sharp, imperious nose to the straight corners of her mouth.

Louise Sheldon married Lennox Sheldon, Stanley Sheldon's only son. Now, Emmaline was dead in childbirth, her laughing eyes closed, her white hands rendered to dust.

Louise managed his household perfectly, she gave him duty, she had borne him a son.

The street door closed again. Nanna panted up the stairs, her arms laden. They could hear her baby-like cooing.

"Such a beauty boy....such an armful. Poor old Nanna! Well, never mind, it won't be long before he trots up on his own two legs, bless his little heart."

Louise sat still. George went to her knee. She said:

"Bring Lennox in here, Nanna."

Asks For Follow-Up Conference

(By The Canadian Press)

LONDON—The importance of an Empire Manufacturers' Conference to follow up the work of the Imperial Conference at Ottawa is urged by the Canadian Chamber of Commerce in Great Britain.

"It is recognized that this is but the first of a series of conferences extending into the distant future," it is stated, "and at once the question arises of a Secretariat, for an Inter-Empire League can no more perform its duties satisfactorily in the absence of a permanent staff and habitation than can a League of Nations. This country contributes handsomely towards the upkeep of the League of Nations machinery. Money would be at least as well spent on an establishment of our own."

THE SON OF TARZAN—No. 18.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

A single tree grew a few feet from the window. Nimbly, the lad sprang for it—clinging callous for an instant to a branch before he jumped quietly to the ground. Close behind him came the great ape. Two hundred yards away a spur of the jungle ran close to the straggling town. Towards this he led the way. None saw them. A moment later the jungle swallowed them and the future Lord Greystoke passed from the eyes and the knowledge of men.

Beneath a palm tree in a little desert oasis, Captain Armand Jeast of the Foreign Legion reclined at his ease, well content with this day's work. Near him his sun-tanned men prepared to eat after a twelve-hour ride. But that trip over the burning sands had not been in vain, for each of the soldiers, silent and taciturn, squatted white-robed Arabs, securely bound and under heavy guard. No wonder the broad-shouldered captain felt well satisfied.

For a long month, he and his little troop had pursued the desert for this sin-stained band of marauders charged with the thefts of camels, horses and goats, and enough murders to have sent the whole unsavory gang to the guillotine several times over. At last he had come upon them. During a short fight he had lost two of his men and six of the Arabs had perished. But five were his prisoners now and safely roped, while the broad-shouldered captain felt well satisfied.

From the prisoners the captain's mind wandered to the little garrison, where, in one more day, he should find awaiting him, with eager welcome, his wife and little daughter. His eyes softened to the memory of them. Even now he could see the beauty of the mother reflected in the childish lines of little Jeanne's face. He fancied already he could feel the soft velvet of her rosy cheek as he held her in a loving embrace—tomorrow!

JAMES CAGNEY IN "TAXI"
A DINNERWARE GIFT MONDAY

Each lady attending the Capitol on Monday night will be presented with a further article of Wedgewood Dinnerware with the management's compliments.

Young Jim Cagney's silliness of manner will be glad to know that he has been elevated to stardom, and that he will be seen at the Capitol Theatre Monday and Tuesday.

"Taxi" is said to be an outstanding example of the new action type picture which has supplanted the gangster-sophisticated-crime style on the screen.

Loretta Young, who plays the feminine lead, shines more brilliantly here than in any role she ever has portrayed. Always beautiful, she positively radiates charm in a ship technique which won high many world's records is amply demonstrated in the vivid swimming sequences.

Effective Backgrounds

Most African adventure pictures succeed only in being fantastic but Merian C. Cooper's latest accident they established with "Trader Horn" and have succeeded in faithfully transferring to the screen all the breath-taking thrills of the widely read Edgar Rice Burroughs story. The authentic atmosphere of the original locale in the region surrounding Lake Alberta and the Mountain of Ape Moon provides an effective background for the production.

The plot of the Burroughs' novel is closely followed. The English man raised by the apes as one of their own kidnaps an English girl who is a member of an ivory-hunting safari. They are subsequently involved in a series of amazing incidents which rise to a thrilling climax when Tarzan rescues the safari from a horrible death in a man-eating gorilla pit.

In the role of a young adventurer who accompanies the safari, Neil Hamilton gives a fine performance. Usually seen in drawing room roles, Hamilton goes capably into the production and is able to look comfortable in a pair of British khaki shorts which is a credit to any player. Maureen O'Sullivan serves as the heroine who finally falls in love with Tarzan. C. Aubrey Smith gives a rugged characterization as the head of the safari and praiseworthy performances are contributed also by Doris Lloyd, Forrester Harvey and Ivory Williams.

Director Van Dyke has handled the many exciting jungle episodes in 1932.

"TARZAN THE APE MAN"
THRILLS BELLE FILM-GOERS

"Tarzan The Ape Man," latest Jungle adventure picture which opened last night before two capacity audiences, is a thrilling successor to "Trader Horn." Both productions were masterly directed by W. S. Van Dyke, the famous explorer-director.

An interesting portrayal in the picture is that of Johnny Weissmuller, world's champion swimmer, chosen for the title role because of his tremendous physical build. His terrific muscular drive, developed by years of swimming, seemed to be a great aid to him in swinging through jungle trees at dizzy heights. The champion-ship technique which won high many world's records is amply demonstrated in the vivid swimming sequences.

BURNS RANKS DEMPSEY BEST

Proved to Be Most Aggressive Rugged and Hardest Puncher

(By The Canadian Press)

NEW YORK—Despite the growing crop of contenders from the younger generation, Jack Dempsey, who lost his title several years ago to Gene Tunney, is ranked as the foremost heavyweight of the present day, by Tommy Burns, Canadian born former heavyweight champion himself and the only man Dempsey feared in the ring that exalted station.

Burns, who succeeded to the title when Tommy Gibbons was beaten by Jack Dempsey, has followed the retirement of the great Jim Jeffries, was in a reminiscent mood as he sat among his trophies of past days in the modest night club he now operates. "To keep him occupied" as he puts it.

Burns, whose real name is Noah Brousseau, is 51 years old now and is little more robust than in the days of his ring campaigns, but he is no longer younger. He carries few of the scars of battle which rigors of the ring generally leave upon its devotees. There is no flattened nose, no cauliflower ear, no disfigurement.

The huge fists which delivered "KO" punches to many opponents in decisions, may be a bit knotted, but the fingers are straight and show through scores of gruelling battles, is still lithe; and he possesses the quickness of the paw that won some of his major victories.

Burns says Dempsey is the best heavyweight of the present day, but he qualifies that statement: "Well, because he has proved himself—to me, that is—the most aggressive, rugged and hardest punch-er the game has seen in some years. He is an excellent defensive fighter when such is called for in addition to the ring generalship and experience, which are necessary requisites of any title holder.

"But really think Dempsey could whip any one of the present crop of heavies, if he got down to serious business," he continued. "As the height of his career I think he could have easily taken Jack Johnson at his best, and the latter was probably one of the best heavyweights of the ring ever produced."

Referring to the fight in Sydney, Australia, on December 26, 1908, when he lost his title to Jack Johnson, Burns gave the following story:

"Jack sure gave me a pretty bad lacing, as matter of fact he had me flattened me in the first round with a sledge-hammer punch on the left, which I ward off with my feet, saw the crowd moving in dizzy circles before my eyes. I had not sufficient sense to cling to Jack, like a drowning man clinging to a floating spar.

"As a rule I kept mumbling to Johnson to let me go and when my head had cleared a bit, even appealed to the referee to break the clinch hold. All the time I was holding on for dear life and a crowbar wouldn't have separated us. It worked alright and when I had completely recovered my senses I waded into Johnson and knocked him out cold. Had I not been so rushed the actual condition I was in, he could have finished me right there."

Burns insisted, however, that if the police had not stopped the fight in the fourteenth round, he would have had a chance to win. Despite the fact he weighed only 167 pounds against Johnson's 209 and the disparity in height and reach, Tommy said he never feared his towering opponent.

"I felt as fresh as a daisy after the fight, and my car and twenty miles to my home and shaved myself," he said. "Johnson on the other hand was taken to hospital where it was found he had two broken ribs, and other injuries. This was in the fight I had with Fireman Jim Flynn in Los Angeles back in 1909. Without a doubt he was the toughest and gamest fighter ever met. I finally took the count in the fifteenth round and for twenty minutes his handlers worked on him before they brought him to. As for myself I was pretty bad shape and collapsed when I got home. Furthermore I was glad to remain in bed all the next day."

And as a parting shot he observed: "Even if there are no outstanding heavyweights in the horizon today, don't let anybody tell you the fighting game is in eclipse and that the boys of today can't compare with the old-time fighter. There is no parallel to be drawn, such comparisons can be settled satisfactory and take it from me a real champion will ultimately emerge who will be a credit to the game and the idol of the fans."

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Jerry Goes With Paddy

By Thornton W. Burgess

Each has some bleating all his own. Though sometimes it to himself unknown.

—Old Mother Nature.

"Yes" replied Jerry Muskrat to Paddy the Beaver, "I wish I had a tail like your. I've always been satisfied with my own tail, but since I've seen your tail it seems as if it is the very thing for which you have any need."

"But I can't use my tail for a support and I can't sit on it, and I can't squirm on the ground with it because it does not make noise enough, and you can do all those things with your tail," protested Jerry.

And when would you ever want to do any of those things," demanded Paddy. "All you have to do is to cut trees and so need my tail for a prop, and you don't want to cut trees and so don't have to sit up as I do. I have to have my balance from the water to do some of my work and so does Mrs. Paddy; my need seems to be the signal. You don't have any such need. If we should separate I'm afraid you have very little use for yours because it is too small and too flat to make noise, although just suited to you. You would have little use for me myself because it is too big and heavy and the wrong shape for you. While we go out together you find that I also got over envying other people what they have, which is a waste of time and a foolish habit. Suppose we go up to the upper pond and I'll show you where I get my bark to eat."

This suited Jerry and he followed Paddy. He had to swim his best to keep up. When they reached the pond Jerry had thought Paddy intended to cut that tree. It was too big for Jerry to even dream of such a thing. So you can imagine how surprised Jerry was when Paddy opened his mouth and drove his great front cutting teeth into the trunk of little Jerry and then pried out a big chip. Jerry thought at first that Paddy had cut that chip out to eat, but Paddy paid no attention whatever to that chip. Instead he cut out another.

"What are you doing that for?" asked Jerry.

"Why, I'm cutting down this tree," explained Paddy in some surprise at the question.

"Do you mean that you think you can cut down that big tree?" cried Jerry in a tone of unbelief.

"Watch me," replied Paddy. "I not only think I can; I know I can. I have cut trees twice as big as this one." He drove in his teeth and pried out another chip.

Meanwhile Jerry was growing more and more uneasy. He didn't like being so far from the water. He didn't quite like Paddy or show that he was afraid, but he was. Paddy didn't appear to notice and went on with his work. Jerry climbed to a log over on the other side of the pond where sounded a sharp report. Instantly Paddy dropped to all four feet and dashed for the water as fast as he could go Jerry being smaller and lighter could run faster and reached the pond first.

"What was that?" he panted as Paddy slipped into the water.

"That was Mrs. Paddy signalling danger," replied Paddy. "It was just a warning. You didn't hear her plunge after it. She has seen some enemy and was letting me know. We were not in any real danger, but we might have been without that warning. That is all."

IS TRANSFERRED TO HALIBURTON

William Austin, Tweed, to Leave Shortly to Assume New Duties

Tweed, May 7 By Mail— Master Jack Arendene, nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Arendene, was taken to the hospital at Belleville on Wednesday where he was successfully operated on for appendicitis. Jack is the fourth Boy of Tweed Consolidated school to be operated on for this trouble during the past three months. He is progressing favorably.

Mr. William Austin assistant agent at the Canadian National Railway station has been notified that he has been appointed agent at Haliburton, to which place he will be transferred in a short time. Mr. Austin was elected president of the local Horticultural Society at the annual meeting held some days ago, and is also secretary-treasurer of flowers and supporter of the so-called "Tweed Tigers" baseball team. Austin and the family will continue to reside in Tweed until the close of the school year.

The Deaneries of Tweed and Trenton held their annual meeting at St. Carthagh's Roman Catholic Church on Monday. Twenty-five priests were in attendance at this important convention, including His Excellency Archbishop O'Brien, Kingston, Rt. Rev. J. E. Nicholson, Belleville, Rev. Dr. Hinan, Secretary of the Deanery of Kingston, Very Rev. J. J. O'Reilly, Trenton, and others.

The visitors were entertained at Shuyck's Hotel at dinner.

The local Oddfellows attended Divine Service at John Street Church on Sunday, May 1st, to mark the 113th anniversary of the founding of the Order.

On Tuesday evening Messrs. Howard Smith, Stanley Lee, Wm. Courtney and A. C. Blakely, local Oddfellows, motored to Enterprise to attend a meeting of the I.O.O.F. degree, when Harrowsmith Degree Team exemplified one of the degrees.

The congregation of the Anglican Church at Plainton assembled at the factory to bid farewell to Captain D. Hester on Thursday evening. An address was read by Miss Lois Campbell and a purse was presented to Captain Hester by Miss Mae Aherne. The address follows

Dear Captain Hester:

The time has come when we must say good bye to you, and it is with deep regret that we, as members of your parish have assembled here tonight on this occasion.

We heard a short time ago that you were about to leave us to take charge of your labours in a new field. You will be missed very much from the community but what is our loss will be others' gain.

The Sabbath services have been a wonderful inspiration for us. We have been lifted to higher ideals of life and duty. The quiet power of a sacrificial life as exemplified in the life of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ, has been set before us.

We have always found you to be a man of cheerful disposition and always ready to help in time of need. You will always find a hearty welcome in our homes.

We now ask you, on behalf of St. Paul's congregation to accept this gift as a slight remembrance of the many kindnesses you have paid. With it we extend to you our very best wishes for health and prosperity in your new field of labor. May God bless you.

Signed on behalf of your many friends in Plainton: L. Campbell, E. Hubbs, Wardens.

Captain Hester made a suitable reply in which he expressed his love and esteem in which he was held by the congregation and all parishioners. Refreshments served by the Ladies' Guild.

RADIO REPORT FAVORS NATIONALIZATION

Sweezey on Stand Tells of $125,000 Gift Towards Campaign

Five 50,000 Watt Stations with Lesser Stations are Advocated National Chain First Essential

Five Per Cent of Time To Be Allowed For Advertising According to Report Handed Out By Commission

REPORT TO GO BEFORE HOUSE

System Must Be Self Sustaining—Present Revenue of $1,500,000 From Set Licenses — Commission of Three Favored

Ottawa, May 9 (By The Canadian Press)—Canada will have a nationally owned radio broadcasting system if the report tabled in the House of Commons this afternoon is implemented by Parliament. The report, presented by Hon. Dr. Raymond Morand, (Cons. Essex East), and bearing the endorsement of the entire committee of nine members, recommends the establishment of a chain of five 50,000 watt stations, to direct the operations of the proposed new system, and the gradual acquisition or erection of such stations as will be necessary for complete, coverage of all Canada.

The report, which was brief and left the working out of details to the commission, pays tribute to the present radio broadcasting stations in the following words: "They entered as pioneers in a field of service in the art of radio, and, under trying handicaps and sacrifices, worthily kept pace with a science fraught with ever changing improvements and developments, and rendered this service under handicaps, which is most praiseworthy."

Present System Inadequate

The committee expressed the belief, however, "that the present system, excellent as it is in certain respects, does not meet the requirements in quality and scope of broadcasting, to ensure its maximum benefits.

Introduces Bill

Dr. Morand will move concurrence of the report on Wednesday next and a bill based on it will be introduced. Hon. Alfred Duranleau, Minister of Marine, under whose department radio is administered.

"Your committee was seized from the inception, of the national importance and international character of radio broadcasting, and the evidence submitted has served to further accentuate the importance, the far-reaching scope and benefits of proper, well-regulated broadcasting services throughout Canada, as a medium of education, a means for cultural development, and fostering of Canadian ideals and culture; entertainment, news service and publicity and of this country and its products, as well as auxiliary to religious and educational teaching; also as one of the most effective means for developing a greater national and Empire consciousness, and the British Commonwealth of nations.

Five 50,000 Watt Stations.

"Your committee recommends that consideration be given to the use of five 50,000 watt stations, one in each of the following areas: Province of Canada, British Columbia, Manitoba, Ontario, Quebec, and in the Maritime Provinces, three 500 watt stations, one for each station, as may be determined by the commission, in Saskatchewan and Alberta, we suggest two 5,000 watt stations in each province, broadcasting on the same common channel. Further, a 10,000 watt station in Montreal, and a 5,000 watt station at, or near, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec.

Control of Stations.

"Your committee further recommends the number of stations, of 100 watt power and under, operating on shared channels, located where required:

(A) To serve areas not satisfactorily covered by the national stations.

(B) For secondary stations in areas where there is a demand for several channels of broadcasting at the same time.

(C) For educational purposes.

(D) For legitimate experimental work.

(E) For local broadcasting of community interest.

"Your committee further recommends that the cost of radio broadcasting be self-sustaining, that only the money available from transmitters and receiving licenses, and advertising income, be expended, and that the question of the amount of receiving license fees be left entirely in the hands of the government in council.

Your committee further recommends that a commission be vested with the necessary powers to carry on the business of broadcasting in the Dominion of Canada, such powers to extend to the following matters:

Board Favored.

(A) To regulate and control all broadcasting in Canada including programme and station control.

(B) To own, build and operate transmitting or receiving stations in Canada.

(C) To acquire by lease, purchase, expropriation, or otherwise, any or all existing broadcasting stations.

(D) To enter into operating agreements with privately-owned stations.

(E) To purchase programmes, and secure outside programmes by purchase or exchange, and to make the arrangements necessary for their transmission.

Immigrants Location.

(F) To determine the number, location and power of all broadcasting stations required in Canada.

(G) To control the issuing or cancellation of licenses to broadcasting stations.

(H) To cancel the allotments of channels to any stations, or to make substitution of channels.

Prevent Private Chains.

(I) To prohibit the establishment of privately-operated chains of stations in Canada.

(J) Subject to the approval of the parliament of Canada, to take over existing broadcasting in Canada.

(K) To be vested with all other powers necessary or incidental to the fulfilment of the objects of the commission.

Your committee recommends:

(A) That one of the chief duties of the commission be the establishment of trans-Canada chain broadcasting facilities, and the control of necessary land-lines as soon as possible.

Nationally Owned.

(B) That a nationally-owned system of radio broadcasting be instituted, and that all stations required for the national service be owned nationally acquired, same to be financed by the issue of bonds secured on the business of broad) sting, without recourse to the public treasury through the public treasury. All stations, 100 watt and under, are required for national system, normally, under private ownership, but be regulated as to programs and advertising, by the rules of the commission.

(C) That all revenues obtained from license fees, sale of advertising, and commercial announcements accessory to the business of broadcasting, be used by the commission in the interests of radio.

5% Time Advertising.

(D) That advertising be limited to not more than 5 per cent, of each broadcasting period.

Continued On Page Seven

Highlights of Report

High lights of the report are as follows:

Appointment of a Federal Commission of three, with assistant commissioners for each province, "to carry on the business of broadcasting."

First Duty is Chain

Establishment of trans-Canada chain broadcasting as "one of the first duties" of the commission.

Advertising to be limited to not more than five per cent. of each program period.

Location, where required and under private ownership if desired, of many stations of 100 watts or under as may be deemed necessary for complete coverage.

All revenues from license fees and advertising to be expended in the interests of radio, and license fees to be fixed by the Governor-in-Council.

There are now 45 inmates at the shelter.

Coast Asks Retaliation If U. S. Excludes Coal

Victoria, May 9.—Possibility that British Columbia would seek retaliatory tariff measures if the United States imposed prohibitive duties on coal, copper and lumber imports, was seen here yesterday when Attorney-General R. H. Pooley, Acting Premier, intimated such a program was under consideration. The proposal briefly before the United States Congress include a 25-per-cent. ad-valorem duty on lumber, and duties on coal and copper, which would seek export of these commodities from Canada. If the United States almost impossible. If these tariff increases go into effect, Acting Premier Pooley, intimated, the British Columbia cabinet and the Dominion Government to impose a similar export duty on nickel and asbestos—two commodities which the United States must import—and an import duty of 45 per ton on all coal entering Canada. In addition, the British Columbia Government, acting within its own jurisdiction, would probably impose an individual inspection fee on all citrus fruits apples and vegetables imported into the Province.

Delighted with Happy Days Repeat 'Em Merchants Ask

Concensus of Opinion Gleaned By Reporters in Business Area Unanimously in Support of Such Excellent Idea—Comments By Number of Business Men.

"Belleville's Happy Days went over! They went over with the biggest bang that has been heard around these parts for some time. They gave a stimulus to trade that was felt all over the city. They brought old wrinkled dollars out of the woollen sock hidden behind the clock, and brand new, crinkly dollars out of cash drawers in the banks. The only complaints I have heard about the Happy Days were from the clerks who were so busy they couldn't get time to look sideways," declared Mr. Harold Hewitt-Sawyer of the Walker Stores, when approached this morning on the subject of the Happy Days campaign which finished in this city Saturday evening. "It all meant hard work for a few of us who tried so hard to pull it across, but it was worth it, and I know I can state the feeling of the public at large when I say that they enjoyed it as much as we did. Every one who participated in the thing deserves the highest praise; from the casual shopper to the newspaper which also did its share in helping things along, I have nothing but thanks," finished Mr. Hewitt.

Short Cut in Diagnosis of Cancer Promises More Hope

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE.
Associated Press Science Editor.

New Orleans, May 9.—A short cut in cancer diagnosis promising hope for the lives of many malignant cases was shown to the American Medical Association today.

This new method enables an expert, with a microscope to see at almost one glance whether a cancer can be identified by melanin. About one third of all cancers are helped by radium while the other two thirds are not.

The very malignant growths fall largely in the radium class and they are the fastest spreading the time saving is therefore also the most valuable.

A special committee on cancers showed the radium work at the scientific exhibit where the latest developments in medicine are on display for several thousand physicians attending the first days' annual meeting of the association.

The high accuracy diagnosis is the result of ten years' study by several physicians including A. C. Broders, M. D., of the Mayo Clinic, and Max Cutler, M.D., of the Michael Reese Hospital, Chicago.

MAY BE NAMED TO BISHOPRIC

Rev. G. Marshall is Supported For High Office

There is every possibility that another minister of the Protestant Churches of Belleville will be shortly elevated and honored by a bishopric. Rev. G. Marshall, rector of the Emmanuel church of this city, has been suggested by Bishop Farthing of the Diocesan Episcopal Church of England, and supported by the Archbishop of Canterbury in England to be Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, Northern Canada. The meeting of the synod is being held in Ontario Wednesday and Thursday of this week when the final selection will be made in which he was driving with Ian B. Crowe, of Toronto, was badly smashed in a collision with a Quebec car, driven by Romeo Denis of Montreal. McGowan and Crowe, the latter driving, were returning to Toronto from Kingston and Deseronto with four friends, was on his way to Montreal. Denis said he had turned out to pass a car in front of him and could not stop quick enough when the other car appeared in sight.

Rev. G. Marshall during his years of residence in Belleville has made a host of friends among all creeds and classes, and all join in wishing that this honor may be bestowed upon him.

Child Strangles Self With Skipping Rope

Boston, May 9.—Mary C. Troy, 7, was strangled to death last night when skipping with rope at her home here.

The child had tied one end of the rope to a fence. Police believe she was attempting a difficult step, when the cord became wrapped about her neck and she fell. Firemen and police worked over the body with a pulmotor for an hour without success and the tragedy had been discovered.

Gunmen Resent Being Chased and Spray Detectives

Chicago, May 9.—Five gunmen resented being chased by a pair of detectives across the west side early today and they had had recognized the plain clothes men and jumped into their car. The exchanging of bullets while revolvers barked back and forth. A half hour later they came back to the Keys Hotel at which the detectives stayed to get their revenge. They had a machine gun with them and sprayed lead over the police car and the restaurant. Neither the detectives nor anyone else was injured in the shooting. The policemen and four gunmen in the automobile dropped to the floor and missed death.

They put in a request for permission to carry revolvers or rifles from now on. Heretofore, they said, were not much help in a boulevard battle.

NEW TURN IN BABY HUNT

Negotiators Have Abandoned Yacht and Taken to Plane

Norfolk, Va., May 9.—Some new turn in negotiations for the recovery of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., was indicated today by the cessation of activities about the seagoing yacht Marcon and a supposed week-end plane trip by the negotiators.

The plane flight was presumably made by John Hughes Curtis, the principal negotiator, and Lieutenant George L. Rihard, naval officer, since Friday night when the Marcon left Norfolk for Cape Henry and headed to sea. Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh was also believed to have left the naval base by plane.

AIR LINER IS DISABLED BUT LANDS SAFELY

Croydon, Eng., May 9.—The imperial Airways liner Horatius, bound through the rain for Paris with thirteen passengers, was struck by lightning today over the town of Tonbridge, but the pilot turned around and landed here safely.

The bolt blew out the cockpit windows, disabled the wireless serial and damaged two of the three propellers. The uninjured passengers were transferred to another plane and took off again immediately.

SWEEZEY SAYS $125,000 PAID TOWARDS FUND

President of Beauharnois Corp. Takes Stand in Hydro Inquiry

TODAY'S INTEREST

Ferguson Was Never Told Nor Any Member of Government

Toronto, May 9 (By The Canadian Press) — Reiteration of his statement made to the Parliamentary Committee investigating the Beauharnois Power Corporation, that $125,000 was paid to John Aird Jr., of Toronto as a contribution to the campaign fund of the Conservative Party in Ontario featured testimony of R. O. Sweezey, head of the Beauharnois Corporation, before the Royal Commission here today.

(By The Canadian Press)

The commission is investigation certain phases of the affairs of the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission, including the Aird payments of $135,000.

Aird Denies

A. O. Slaght, K.C., Independent Counsel, was ruled out of order by Mr. Justice F. Latchford upon his intimated the Beauharnois Corporation had bought nearly $ 400,000 worth of Government bonds , in March, 1930, as further campaign fund contributions. "I cannot see what they has to do with the $125,000 paid towards Mr. Aird," said Sir Lyndon Lordship. "This commission is investigating Hydro and I do not see how cannot hold a general fishing expedition into the affairs of the Beauharnois Corporation."

Objection Raised

Mr. Slaght objected to His Lordship's ruling, declaring he wished to show that more than the $125,000 was "intended for the Conservative Party." However, His Lordship refused to allow further questioning along this line and ruled Mr. Slaght out of order.

The matters being investigated by the commission are the $125,000 payment to Aird for "The Conservative Party;" The $400,000 payment by the Hydro to Aird for his part in negotiating the Hydro-Beauharnois deal; the payment of $22,000.- 000 by the Hydro for the Dominion Power & Transmission Co. Limited Hamilton.

Mr. Sweezey was on the witness stand all morning and resumed his examination this afternoon. The Griffiths, SecretaryTreasurer of the Corporation, is also expected to be called before the end of the week.

According to Mr. Sweezey, Aird had assured "we contribute everything—which I took to mean a contribution to the Conservative party."

Mr. Aird, witness said, had first suggested "$1.50 per horsepower" as the contribution. He told Aird this figure was too high, and eventually they agreed on $1 bonds and 5 cash.

Ferguson Not Told

Payment of the money had never been mentioned to O. Howard Ferguson, then Premier of Ontario, nor to any member of the government. The Corporation's attention, witness said, had been made to keep the payment a secret because "if felt now this thing was all over we could make the contribution to Mr. Aird or his party". No receipt had been given for the bonds.

Happy Days' Program Proves Entire Success

Mr. Editor,—

Please allow me space on behalf of those merchants who co-operated in this sale to express my hearty thanks to the citizens of Belleville and Hungerford Bridge and Mr. James Clark for complimentary services at our shopping parade and dance and to Mr. Herbert Morton and Mr. Bert Boyce for providing a lunch for the band when they had completed their program and to all the committees who gave all the co-operation that could be desired. Also to the fire brigade and police department. Thanks to the Shoppers who lent their assistance.

The merchants involved put up over $350.00 in cash prizes, which were keenly contested and in conclusion allow me to express our appreciation to Mayor Geo. Tice for his co-operation and assistance.

Parties of Left Secure Majority of 22 Over All Herriot Likely Premier

Election Quiet as France Mourns President, But Expected Swing to Right Does Not Mater iaIize

LE BRUIN AND PAINLEVE FOR PRESIDENT

Government is Expected to Resign on Tuesday and Decks Will Be Cleared For Election of President to Succed Late Paul Doumer

By GEORGE HAMBLETON.
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

Paris, May 9.—(CP Cable)—The government of Premier Andre Tardieu was defeated at the polls yesterday.

The parties of the Left, which have not been in power—except for a few days—under the famous "Left Cartel" was established under Edouard Herriot following the 1924 general election, swept away the Republican majority in the second ballot of the 1928 general election and are the Chamber of Deputies.

With the Premier everywhere dipped in mourning, France voted hastily to day in the second and vital ballot. Forecasts were made everywhere that the assassination of President Paul Doumer would probably arrest the swing to the Left already evident in the first ballot a week ago. The contrary was the case.

Tardieu Majority Disappears.

The results from the second ballot, held this morning, with 538 constituencies, sadly showed the swing to the Left Wing parties in their intensity. The Radical - Socialists headed by Herriot, and the more extreme Socialists headed by Leon Blum, gained rapidly. The parties and groups on which Premier Tardieu had depended for his majority at least after the first ballot, at midnight the Tardieu majority virtually disappeared.

It is now expected that when the new president, to be elected by the National Assembly on Tuesday, is installed in office, the Cabinet of Premier Tardieu will submit its resignation. It went into office on February 21 last, after the downfall of the second Laval government. The Chamber of Deputies has a life of five years, of the Left had any considerable majority in the Chamber, General Tardieu would have only four days—February 21 to February 25, 1930.

With 510 seats out of 615 reported, the official opposition to the Tardieu government—the Radical Socialists, the Socialists, and the various brands of Communists—together hold 240 seats in the new Chamber with Communists limited to total la 22 more than the 308 necessary to secure control of the chamber.

Virtually all the seats are accounted for. Of the remaining five, one return is delayed, two are only taken by a few votes and two others do not vote until May 15.

Paris, May 9.—Paul Painleve, the veteran "savour of the franc" and leader of the national cabinet in 1917, was the choice of the French yesterday to succeed the late President Paul Doumer.

It was learned that he was in communication with Edouard Herriot, leader of the Radical Socialist (Liberals), and that friends were saying Herriot had promised his support.

The former premier however, was delaying his answer until he could consult with advisers.

Meanwhile Albert Lebrun, the president of the Senate, who has been mentioned as the only likely choice for president, yesterday formally presented his candidacy.

The election will be held jointly by the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate at Versailles on Tuesday.

Thousands of Parisians filed past the presidential palace yesterday in tribute to the venerable leader. The public will be admitted to the palace today.

After lying in state until Thursday morning, the body will be taken to Notre Dame Cathedral for funeral services and then conveyed to the Pantheon for burial, with Doumer's successor, whoever he may be, leading the nation in mourning.

Sympathy at Soviet Government

The sympathy of the Russian Government for France as a result of the assassination of President Doumer was extended to Premier Herriot in Yardieu through the Russian ambassador, Valerian Dovgolevsky.

A letter forwarded to M. Tardieu said the Soviet union had been "deeply affected by the abominable outrage" and conveyed the condolences of the Ambassador personally.

"This crime provoked unanimous indignation," the letter said, "and the U.S.S.R. I am sure to be the interpreter of my government in expressing you that the tragic death of Paul Doumer is deeply felt by the government and public opinion in my country."

Pleads Guilty and Sentence Suspended

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., May 9. (Of the Canadian Press)—Charged with distributing seditious literature Dominico Butilol and John Kuzmenko, members of the Communist police court today, pleaded guilty and elected summary trial. Sentence was suspended at the request of their counsel for the defense.

After evidence had been entitled the name of "Kennedy" was called from the back of the courtroom and the man who has been named as the head of the Communist organization entered the court. Kuzmedy was questioned by Provincial Constable Ross of Niagara Falls, Ont., with counsel present, and was then allowed to go.

CYCLISTS SPEND DAY IN DISTRICT

Belleville over the week end played host to scores of cyclists who converged on this city on their motorcycles from all points of the compass and for distances as far east as Kingston. Arriving in Belleville in the afternoon, many of them immediately made their way to the northern lakes for a day's outing and spent the day along the shores. A few of the machines carried small tents wrapped up and carried on the rear end of the machines; small parties divided themselves and had took possession of these tents when they were pitched. Many others took trips throughout the country surrounding this city and called on old friends who belonged to the club.

Late Sunday evening the homeward trek began from in front of the city hall where they had collected. Fully thirty of the machines were seen parked at the curb at one time, many of them carrying pennied notes and exchanged experiences with each other. Nearly all of the cyclists were members of the Quinte Motor Cycle Club whose headquarters have been established in this city. This has been a weekly feature of the club.

FLOWERS PLACED IN CEMETERY

Gray skies and a hint of rain Sunday did not deter scores of residents of the city, who took the occasion to make pilgrimages to the cemeteries near the city to lay flowers at the head of wives and embered graves and every cemetery presented a scene of animation with the floral offerings which were carried in and deposited on the plots. The woods surrounding the city claimed many more of the younger set who sought for May flowers which have begun to bloom in the sheltered sections. Long streams of motor cars on every highway also testified to the pulling power of the May days which have begun to empty the homes.

GENTLE RAIN FALLS OVER WEEKEND

No marked variations were noticed in the registration of temperatures over the week-end. Yesterday's temperatures were high and low, while the mercury only dropped to 48 last night and had soured to but 37 at noon today. Rain registered over the week-end was .56 inches.

ALBERT GRADUATE TAKES SCHOLARSHIP

TOOLS ARE STOLEN FROM CITY QUARRY

Petty thieves broke into the quarry outbuildings over the week-end and helped themselves to a number of tools which had been stored in the tool house. Included in the loot were a number of picks and shovels. These are city owned tools and are easily identifiable so there will be little chance for the thieves to use the tools in the city. "Anyhow", asks the foreman of public works, "what do they want to steal tools for? They haven't got jobs to use them on."

More damage was perpetrated by some of the boys who hang around the quarry when a few of them made all the banked fire out of the boiler, which is kept fired up over night. When the firemen arrived on the job this morning the grates were bare and the fireboxes was stone cold. It took some time for him to get steam up again.

Police are investigating the thefts.

The manager of the McColl Frontenac service station on South Front Street, reported to the city police department Monday morning that during the week end the tank at the station were interfered with and between fifteen and twenty gallons of gasoline were stolen.

FAKE MESSAGES OF AWARDS ARE NOT APPRECIATED

In a spirit of fun someone perpetrated a joke with ball tossons on Saturday which caused some disappointment and annoyance and embarrassment to shopkeepers, when balloons were dropped on the street bearing fictitious messages, promising a prize of more or less value to the person who secured it. Needless to say there was jubilation at first which led to surprise and embarrassment with dealers who had to admit themselves nonplussed by the fake promises of awards. It was a joke rather difficult to which to see the fun because of the risk of misunderstandings which were certain to ensue and did ensue.

Women are getting bigger and better feet, so the shoes manufacturers say. The change from the cute little Cinderellas to proper sizes is due to the growing popularity of outdoor sports. Well, the sisters are stepping forward, more credit to them. Some day the fragile spined heel will disappear completely and then there will be reason for a real celebration.

BENJ. SAYERS DIES AGED 65

Former Councillor and Well Known Thurlow Citizen

There passed away at his late residence in the ninth concession of Thurlow on Saturday night last, a well known and highly respected member of that community, in the person of Benjamin Sayers, as a result of an illness of some duration. The late Mr. Sayers was in his sixty-sixth year, he was born in Huntingdon, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Sayers, but had lived the last forty years in Thurlow. He was a member of the Union Church and at the time of his death was an elder of the Bethel United Church. He was a councillor for the township of Thurlow for three years and at last year's election dropped out owing to impaired health. He was for many years cheese maker at the Consecon Cheese Factory. A man of fairness in his dealings with others, and a leader of activity in the community life of Thurlow, he will be sadly missed in that section of the county.

The immediate family remaining to mourn his loss are the widow and a son, Earl, at home; one brother, Walker, of Peterboro, and two sisters, Mrs. John Green, of Belleville, and Mrs. Wesley Parks, of Plainfield. To those bereaved is extended the sympathy of a large circle of friends and acquaintances.

LEGAL BATTLE AT NAPANEE

R. D. Ponton, K.C., Represents New Brunswick Solicitor

R. D. Ponton, K.C., is today acting as counsel for the plaintiff in the case to be heard in the Non-Jury Sittings of the County Court of the County of Lennox-Addington at Napanee. The court is sitting under Justice Cartwright and the point in question arose out of an action entered by Mr. Ponton in recent Spring Assizes in Belleville and laid over until the present court sittings in Napanee.

The case, Neill vs. Clowes, is an action brought by Neill against Clowes on a promissory note as the result of which Neill's car which was first drawn up in the city of Moncton, N.B., where both men resided at the time. Since then, however, Clowes has moved to Cherry Valley, Ont., and therefore the action will be heard in this section of the province. Mr. Ponton is representing Mr. H. B. Hanson, K.C., of St. John, who was counsel in the case but as he is a resident of New Brunswick it was necessary to argue this case in Ontario courts. Mr. Hanson addressed the court in the Local Conservative Club in Belleville about ten years ago. Mr. Hanson represents York County, N. B. in the Federal government.

Mr. Neill, the plaintiff in the case, is at present a resident of Belleville, and it is said has quite a number of witnesses from the city to testify in his behalf. The case in the case will be quite high due to the fact that numerous witnesses will be called from distant points.

When R. D. Ponton, K.C. of Belleville, represents the plaintiff, Neill, and Mr. Hanson, K.C., appearing for the accused.

2 TRAINMEN ARE INJURED

Locomotive Explodes Blowing Two Men Out of Engine Cab

St. Thomas, May 9.—A premonition of impending disaster is said to have saved D. P. Proper, railway brakeman, from serious injury or death Saturday noon when one of the crack freight locomotives of the super type, in service on the Canadian division of the Michigan Central Railway, exploded about a quarter of a mile south of the village of Dutton.

The engineer, Thomas Howe, aged 50, and the fireman, Walter O. Wilkie, aged 43, were critically injured. Brakeman Proper was in the cab when, he said, he sensed something wrong with the locomotive. The whistle began to sound and there was a rumbling somewhere, he said. He started back over the 120-car train and had reached the fifteenth car when the locomotive exploded.

The engineer and the fireman were thrown through the windows of their cab, the engineer being hurled down the embankment on the south side of the tracks, while the fireman struck the ballast on the north side, close to a string of freight cars on a siding. Both men are terribly burned about the face and body and are also suffering from severe cuts and bruises. Mr. Wilkie's condition is the more serious. Neither has been able to make a statement regarding the unusual accident, but divisional officials who investigated expressed doubt about the locomotive having given warning of the explosion.

M. R. Benson, divisional master mechanic, expressed the belief that the explosion was caused by defective circulation of the water in the boiler. Other members of the crew reported that water was taken at West Lorne, seven miles west of Dutton. The water tank was full after the explosion. The disabled locomotive was brought to the local shops last night, where it will be held for investigation by explosion experts from Ottawa.

Non-Nudist Doukhobor Girl Finds Her Romance Blasted

Mother Refuses Permission to Marry as Command Disobeyed

Nelson, B.C., May 7.—(CP)—Because she refused to take off her clothes at Sunday mode demonstration at Thrums, 18-year-old Annie Sinnett, Doukhobor girl, has been refused permission to marry by her mother. Another reason for the refusal was that the prospective groom was a member of the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood, with whom the nudist Sons of Freedom are in disagreement.

Perhaps the whole affair is indicative of a change in the trend of thought among the new generation of Doukhobors, for the initial efforts to hold them to the old ways.

Annie Sinnett wished to get married last Thursday, but she was not of age, and her mother, from whom she must obtain consent, was in jail awaiting trial for parading in the nude.

Annie appealed to Staff-Sergeant A. T. Stephenson of the British Columbia provincial police. He offered his office in the jail as the place for the wedding and took the girl to her mother's cell. They explained the situation and Annie told her mother's permission to marry. But she was refused on the two grounds, that she had refused her mother on Sunday by refusing to disrobe, and because she intended to marry a Doukhobor not of her own sect. So Annie departed with her romance blasted for the time being.

The mother was among those sentenced to three years in penitentiary yesterday.

VISCOUNT BYNG NOW IN TORONTO

Health Much Improved But No Details Available of His Visit

Toronto, May 9—Nearing the end of an extensive tour of the West-ern Dominion, Viscount Byng arrived here today from Winnipeg. The former Canadian Governor General was accompanied by Lady Byng.

Ruddy of complexion, Lord Byng appeared to have greatly benefited from his lengthy holiday undertaken in an effort to fully recover from a lingering illness.

The visitors were welcomed to Toronto by a civic reception committee and Canadian Legion officials. Details of Lord Byng's stay were not revealed.

WE'RE SORRY
Please Excuse Us This Time
Mother's Day brought a great rush for Laura Secord's Chocolates, those delicious sweetmeats which every mother likes so well, and with FIVE HUNDRED BOXES ordered special for Mother's Day we thought we were sitting pretty with plenty to supply the demand.
WE WERE MISTAKEN—The demand began early in person and by telephone and steadily increased in volume until early in the evening every box was sold, and the demand still unsatisfied.
WE BEG TO APOLOGIZE to those who were unable to get Laura Secord's for Mother—next time we will double the order so that everybody will be able to get their favorite confection.

NELSON JAIL IS CRAMMED

Police Round Up 209 More Nude Doukhobors Over Weekend

Nelson, B.C., May 9.(CP)—Nelson jail is crammed to the doors today following the biggest roundup of nude Doukhobors engaged by police in years. The jail population was increased by 209 today and this number, added to the 118 already under sentence following the past week's arrests, has taxed the capacity of the jail to the limit.

Those arrested yesterday were found parading in the same orchard at Thrums where the clash between nudists and police occurred a week ago. Of the prisoners, 86 were men, 53 were women and 67 were children under 14 years of age. All will be charged with appearing in the nude in a public place.

The Doukhobors submitted to arrest without protest. Police simply surrounded them in the orchard and sent for trucks to take them to Nelson. As the trucks arrived the nudists scrambled aboard voluntarily and rode away after truck load set off for the jail.

Mrs. Massie Foils the Police Ignoring Detaining Subpoena

Prosecutor's Plan For Holding Her as Witness Fails

Honolulu, T.H., May 9—(UP)—Mrs. Thalia Massie, only key figure in the "Ala Moana" attack case, sailed to the mainland with her mother and husband yesterday despite a dramatic attempt of Honolulu civil authorities to keep her here.

The young wife of Naval Lieut. Thomas J. Massie, sailed aboard the liner Matsonia after a subpoena which would have held her on the Islands to testify as the re-trial of four half-caste youths accused of attacking her, was served.

But before the liner sailed, she was served with a subpoena, but it was an empty victory. She passed the be-ribboned document which was tossed into the great sea of the territory of Hawaii.

Heavy-jowled Honolulu detectives chased the nimble young woman through the pantry and around companionways of the steamer Makiolo in vain efforts to subpoena her as a witness at the re-trial of Horace Ida, Ben Ahakuelo, David Takai and Henry Chang.

There were several near fights as officers of the islands blocked the pursuit of the detectives.

Passengers aboard the liner cheered as the panting, excited policemen chased the young woman from pole to pole and from stateroom to stateroom.

Prevention Plans Disrupted

Mrs. Massie's flight from the process-servers disrupted plans of Prosecutor John Kelley to use her as his star witness at the re-trial of the four. He had set for May 20.

Mrs. Grace Rubbard Fortescue, her mother, and Lieut. Massie sailed without being pardoned for the clean-slaughter of Joseph Kahahawai, one of the alleged attackers of Mrs. Massie.

Shortly before the Makiolo's gangplank was pulled in, police were permitted to serve their subpoena on Mrs. Massie ignored it.

Mrs. Fortescue and Lieut. Massie, who had blocked the officers, shook hands with them.

Even Captain Worlman, commander of the Matsonia, shook hands with Dewey Mookini, Hawaiian with whom he had engaged in a struggle in a passage-way as Thalia boarded the liner.

Clarence Darrow, attorney for the Massies and Mrs. Fortescue, smiled happily as a band played "Aloha Oe" in farewell to the vessel.

Yesterday, three-quarters of an hour before the Makiolo sailed, a speedy naval cutter put out from Pearl Harbor. Aboard were Mrs. Massie, her husband and her mother.

Landslide Overwhelms Apartment Buildings in Lyons, France

Lyons, France, May 9—Twenty-seven persons were missing and believed dead yesterday after landslides of the hillside overwhelmed houses in the middle-class Calluire district on the outskirts of the city.

Twelve injured were removed from the debris and added to the hospitals in serious condition.

The landslide occurred about 9 a.m. before many of the residents had awakened. It hit the buildings in the rear and crushed the gas mains.

Explosions and fires followed. The Fire Department responded and succeeded twelve persons before a second and larger slide came down on the rescuers.

Both buildings collapsed under the strain. Fire Chief Rousignol suffered a broken leg, and was dragged to safety just in time.

Rousignol was driven off in a distance, from which they shot streams of water into the smoking ruins, in a desperate effort to stop the flames as rescuers could get into the debris.

The accident was blamed on heavy rains and melting snows, which had undermined the subsoil of the hilly districts.

Happy Days' Sidelights

An interesting study of human nature could be obtained near the window of the headquarters of Happy Day on Front Street throughout the day and evenings when the numbers of the winning coupons were announced. With some folk was a serious business, the establishing of their suits to see if they had won anything. Some of them would approach the window half fearfully with their numbers on a slip, and then peered many minutes consulting and matching their slip with the one in the window. If they found they had a number which corresponded with the one in the window, it would be at first hard to believe. Then they would go away for a few moments, come back again and count more coupons, check list, and finding that they were really right, they would dash off across the street to see Harold Newby. Others would spread out their coupons on the sidewalk and move slowly along, checking over the numbers at periods up to half an hour looking at the numbers. One interesting feature was that very few of the slips were thrown away. Every one seemed to hang on to their coupons until the last minute. Some of them had been carried around sidewalk as a lucky charm for days. Others, when expected, there were only a very few of them observed lying about.

Down town Saturday evening a sharply attired young lady was observed to struggle through a crowded door into the store inside. While she forced her way through the crowd a hand tapped her on the shoulder. She turned around and faced a young man asked it. "Are you Mrs. Happy Day?" the voice asked. "Why, no, what do you want to see Mrs. Happy Day?" the voice asked. "Why, no, what do you want to see Mrs. Happy Day for

THIEF SHOCKED

Radio set in a police car stolen in Toronto today gave the alarm to the thief that he was wanted and he jumped out and ran for his life. The car was found but the thief was not.

What a surprise the thief must have had as he listened to a strange voice out of the back seat as he was driving call out to all police to be on the lookout for the car.

The shock of the message unnerved him quite and gave him his chance to escape.

There is one of the many points of the radio. It got the car back and it warned the thief in time to escape. Perhaps I believe may even now be carrying radio equipment on their cars to intercept messages. But this thief was evidently new to radio reception in an automobile.

THE GLARE

Glaring headlights on motorcars are to be absent on the highways if the will of the department of highways is observed.

Motorists themselves are checking up on their lamps to see that they do not infringe on the regulation.

Many fatal accidents have been credited to the glare of headlights.

VILLAGE SIGN BOARDS

Why some villages put up traffic signs far out in the country telling of the bounds of the village has always been a puzzle to motorists, for they those who try to observe the rules of reduction of speed within the small settled areas.

Some of these villages take in between the boards in some cases a mile or more and naturally motorists are asked to run at slow speed for that distance though for considerable spaces after passing the boards there is not a vestige of a house or a collection of houses to be seen.

Villages should not be allowed to put out their boundary boards too far beyond their bounds, if they have any. They should be as fair to motorists as they ask motorists to be considerate of them.

VICTIM OF PUBLIC LIFE

Public life has claimed another man. "Uneasy rests the head that wears a crown" runs the phrase known to everyone but men do not require to wear crowns to find it their lot to be uneasy.

France learned this to her sorrow when Dr. Gorulov, a Russian, slew an inoffensive old man, President Doumer, who had given four sons to the Great War.

It is generally believed that Gorulov is insane, probably from brooding over the ills of the country which had first the oppression of the imperial regime, which was blasted out by the revolution, of which the foes (among them Gorulov) claim that the regime of the Bolsheviki is a disaster. Gorulov in his madness wanted to embroil France with the Soviet, he says, to wreak revenge on the enemies of the Russian party he upholds.

Only a madman could pick on Doumer. Humane considerations, one might think, might even have caused a fanatical nihilist to spare one who was no enemy of any man. Personal slaughter is a colossal error and gets nowhere.

In other ways of public life, especially in this time takes toll in the nervous physique of the leaders of the nations who are trying to right the upturned conditions of this day by peaceful means.

SOME BIRD

The blackbird which moved the hand of the town clock is already a mythical figure. Its fame and strength and weight have grown out of all proportion. The Ontario Intelligencer stated the whole truth that the bird had shoved the hand forward from three minutes after nine o'clock to fifteen minutes, under its weight, but a correspondent of a Toronto paper endowed this bird with unusual powers as he says it shoved the minute hand down to the half hour. What the bird was doing while the hand was approaching the number "6" on the dial he does not say but it must have been hanging on by its claws, the body at right angles to the hand and the wings fluttering for all they were worth to preserve his poise. Perhaps some one will now come along and say the bird took the hand in its bill and started to fly upward and westward and moved the time onward nearly an hour on the south dial.

Out of town papers have played with the story, one heading the article "Backward, Turn Backward, O Time," "Bird's Pies has Weight," while another declares "Time Flies, Bird Also."

As there are alleged to be monsters in the deeps, perhaps someone will mentally create in the air a bird monster which will darken the sun, out of the little blackbird which alighted on the hand of the Belleville city hall clock, on Friday morning. How tales grow!

NEVER FORGET!
By Aline Michaelis

Never forget that life can be
A joyous and lovely thing,
Free as the winds of heaven are free
And blithe as the birds in Spring.

Yours is the treasure and yours the trust
To make of it what you will.
Heart that is pure and mind that is just Give you lodging in Eden still.

Never forget that the past is gone
And the future is yet to be.
No light save that of this morning's dawn
Is shining for you and me.

Give of your best to the work you do,
Though lofty or low your task;
Steadfast your aim and your purpose true,
What more could the Maker ask?

Never forget that the brave heart spurns
A lie in a word or deed;
Never forget that the wise heart turns
To God with its every need.

NOW WOULDN'T YOU THINK that with all the music teachers and all the young people studying music at home and in school that there would be a flood of young people who could sit down anytime anywhere to the piano and play accompaniments or even take their turn at night. We are informed by a noted professional musician that there is a great dearth of piano players. Seldom in any gathering can one person be found of the many present to play the piano. We are also informed that of the thousands of professional musicians cluttering up Li'l Old New York few can be rated as real good musicians. Just at present from various causes including the "canned" music of the talkies which dispensed theatre orchestras there are thousands of musicians out of work in New York City.

DAILY MAIL OF NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS is large enough to prevent a deficit in the General Post Office department and contains all kinds of letters, from brief business accreds to samples of alleged poetry, and instruction upon how to run a newspaper. Sometimes cheerful letters come through and even letters of praise for the newspaper and things that the newspaper stands for. Here's two letters from a recent morning's mail which are interesting. The first is from a lady subscriber in Prescott, Ont., enclosing the money for a renewal of her subscription, with the following message:

I enjoy the paper very much and could not get along without it, as it keeps me in touch with all my old friends and familiar places of other days.

Another letter in the same mail reads as follows:

Dear Sir: Every day, from everywhere, we are hearing "It's an Awful World"—and is isn't the world, it's the people in it. There seems to be a lot of bad ones in the world today, but after attending the Rotary Minstrels last night, I came away with the feeling that there is a great deal of good, and a lot of good people in this world today. That show was a knock-out. There was not an idle minute to the whole thing, and I think everyone enjoyed it very much. Belleville should be more than proud of her local talent. I think it is a wonderful thing to see men get together for good like the Rotarians do. There were a great many of our business men taking part in the show, and I know the majority have worries, and come home dead tired the same as you and I, but no one would ever realize that last night. The little kiddies who danced, the children from the School for The Deaf, the boys who stepdanced, and how they could step, the soloists, all were A1, and all of them were doing their little bit for those children who are unfortunate. It's a grand and glorious feeling to know things like this, and I wish the Rotary Club all the success in the world.

A MASCULINE VIEW

If there is anything that has lowered the conception of womanhood in the eyes of mankind it is the pitiful habit of modern women in having recourse to beauty shops in their endeavours to maintain their youth. It is natural woman that appeal to man. He is a matter-of-fact creature and wants to see things as they are, not as they are artifically made.—Victoria Colonist.

SPEED IN VILLAGES

When we see cars speeding through the village at 40 miles ranging over 30 miles an hour, and many times faster, we often wonder if these drivers have any regard for the law. We understand that villages do not set the speed limit in their own municipalities but that the provincial law reads 30 miles in urban towns and villages and 35 miles at street intersections. About 95 out of every 100 motorists we visit take this law every time they pass down main street and we always think they were being allowed if they were summoned to appear in court. —Stirling News Argus.

FLOWERS AND BEAUTY

The season approaches when home-owners in Stirling and the surrounding district, Hastings county should be giving thought to the beautification of their premises and thus to the improvement in appearance of his community. While horticulture has been given a tremendous boom in this district in the last few years there remains plenty of room for further development. Every unimproved or unplanted home can be made more attractive by the judicious use of trees, shrubs, flowers and ornamental grass. The old saying that a home is not a home until it is beautified is well emphasizes the necessity and wisdom of planning for the future improvement and thrift of a community or a municipality are often reflected in the appearance of the best advertising that any community can do is to make it attractive to the visiting appearance to the world—an appearance of prosperity and contentment that we realize by our surroundings, physical and mental, is very sensitive in this regard. Surely a home in and around Stirling deserves a garden and is a better place to bring up children than a home where no attention whatever is paid to the wishes of the plant kingdom.—Stirling News Argus.

WOODEN TOKENS

The effect of the depression on many of the smaller places in the United States with their individual local banking systems is shown from the following item from the Seattle branch in the July issue of the Chamber Commerce printed in "The Caduceus," the staff magazine of the bank.

"When the general manager visited this branch in the halcyon days of 1926, his parting remark to some of our staff was that we should not be take in any wooden money, but Wash., failed recently the currency of the town, or one form of it at least, because this wooden tokens made from strawberry boxes. These token were issued in the sum of $1.00 by arrangement with the Chamber of Commerce and constituted claims on the first liquidating dividend of the defunct bank. Collectors all over the country have been buying up these tickets at a premium, so that Aberdeen's wooden money is above par."

Tenino has a population of about 2,000, it is the county seat and lies at the junction of three important railways.—Toronto Mail and, Empire.

A DIARY OF RAGES

Through one of those mysterious communications by which bits of curiosities in American colleges arrive in England without being heard of here, The London Times prints an account of a Missouri professor who devised a method for testing the angry passions of his students. His scheme has not only practical but mental research: it has improved the tempers of the young men and women.

Students carried a diary with attached pencil wherever they went. Every time they found a fit of rage coming on they made a note of the fact and the cause. By the time they had set down their emotion it had mostly evaporated, as if they had counted ten before striking or saying a naughty word.

Some of the professor's newly discovered facts are that women get angry six times to four for men, and that of every hundred instances of but fifteen were caused by disregard or insufficient respect for the subject of rage. If anger is bad for the health, it is strange that women with their record of fury should live longer than men. The English comment is that this proves their innate toughness. But it is just as likely that many of their little explosions would no be considered by men worthy of inclusion in "the mad book".—New York Times.

Canada has a per capita production of 130 pounds of fish annually, but the per capita consumption is only 20.7 pounds, while that of Great Britain is 40 pounds and that of Norway 70 pounds.

Phychologists of Cornell University find, in tests, that stimulating effects of caffeine in coffee and other beverages become less as the user grows accustomed to the drink.

STANDARDS OF MORALITY DIFFER MUCH

Three General Causes Determined; Moral Conduct

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.

Men and women do not have the same moral standards. Their attitudes towards a given moral problem may often be poles apart.

It has been argued that there is such a thing as a moral sense, and that we are born with it, the same as we are with any other instinct. Delinquents therefore have been described as defective in the moral sense, and even the term "moral imbecility" was once in current use among psychologists.

Moral conduct is probably determined by three general causes—habit, suggestion, environment and general bringing up. And third, sex. It is the sex difference between the masculine and feminine upon which I wish particularly to dwell.

From boyhood up man is taught that he must not let his natural impulses in check as much as possible. He is taught to learn that lying and stealing are wrong, that women are to be treated respectfully and chivalrously, that forever, as the boy grows into man's estate, he must live up to certain teachings and applies his logic and reasoning to the problems involved.

His instinctive nature tells him to do as he pleases and have a good time at any cost; but his training tells him that if he does not curb his primitive impulses he will see himself in trouble, will be unable to make his way in more ways than one, and may even be punished and disgraced and placed under lock and key. In short, he learns that he pleases.

Morality in a man, therefore, becomes a matter of conscious standard. He doesn't really want to be moral, but his reasoning powers tell him he'd better, if he knows what is good for himself.

In women, on the other hand, Morality develops through an entirely different mechanism, for woman's moral development comes into being not through reasoning, but through feeling.

Sentiments such as pity, love, sympathy, sorrow, and suffering are experienced by her, and in the passage of time are gradually synthesized by her into moral standards. Her moral conscience, in other words, is derived from an emotional source, man's from an intellectual.

It follows hat, since the morality of conduct of both sexes stems from his reasoning, no amount of reasoning will ever make a girl blind him to his own faults or specific acts of wrong-doing. He may see her reasoning as a spade a spade" where his personal morality is concerned, but he will never see it in herself here. He cannot do otherwise.

But woman, since her morality comes so largely from her feelings, may use her reasoning and logic deliberately to excuse herself, to hide her own faults and even sometimes even to justify her immorality, so to speak. Man cannot.

Woman, therefore, is often made immoral through the power of an overwhelming emotion as love. It is well-known to criminologists that a woman rarely commits a criminal career alone. She is always influenced to do so by man. And morally she responds willingly and does all man's bidding for sake of her love for him.

"The explains also why women so often regard men in order to reform them. It is feelings that overwhelms their better sense.

Woman, one might say, is moral because she feels that she wants to be so. Man is moral because he reasons that it is to his ultimate advantage to be so.

Moe Berg Singled in 14th Innings to Down White Sox

BY HERBERT W. BARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Burleigh Grimes, whose name is synonymous with baseball courage, is back in harness again and the Chicago Cubs, tough enough when out him, are going to be much more formidable.

An attack of influenza laid low the veteran right-hander just as the 1932 campaign opened but he came back yesterday in his first starting role by checking the Phillies attack by the Brooklyn Dodgers in the first inning and finally beat them 12 to 5.

Not by any stretch of the imagination could Grimes' effort be termed good pitching but it was characteristic of the man that under weather such a storm of bases hits as the Dodgers turned loose and then hold them in check the rest of the way.

Max Carey's hopefuls with Hack Wilson still out of the line-up responded first for the All-Star runs in the first two innings. After that they dodged the relief elbower for only six more safeties and could not score until the ninth, when the Cubs already held a 12-5 lead. Lon Warneke extremely effective against the Cubs, had one man out in the third inning when he issued a walk. walked three men in a row and was unceremonially yanked. Before the inning was over the Cubs had scored five times and taken a 7-4 lead.

This victory stretched Chicago's advantage in the National League to three full games as the Boston Braves lost their fourth straight in the Cincinnati Reds, 6-3.

The New York Giants and St. Louis Cardinals split a doubleheader, the Giants won the opener 4-1, as Carl Hubbell allowed only six hits and the Cards the nightcap, 6-5, as the eccentric Dizzy Dean went the route for the full nine innings. Dean was hit hard but was fairly effective in the pinches.

American League

The Washington Senators maintained their lead in the American League by eking out the Chicago White Sox, 6-5, in 14 innings. Moe Berg's single drove home the winning run much to the annoyance of Ted Lyons, who pitched the full route for the White Sox. Walter Johnson called on four pitchers, Marberry, Allen, Fischer and Ragland in that order.

Cleveland whipped the Philadelphia Athletics again 8-5, and the Boston Red Sox broke an eight-game losing streak at the St. Louis Browns' expense, 7-5.

Yesterday's Stars

PEDEN, FIELDING WIN BIKE GRIND

Comes From Behind in Final Hour to Snatch Victory

Toronto, May 9 (CP)—Toronto's sporting public were still talking today on the wild excitement at Arena Gardens Saturday night when William "Torchy" Peden, the Victoria cycling star, and Reggie Fielding of Toronto, rode to victory in the Queen's City's first six-day bikeathon. Grinding away for more than 143 hours the all-Canadian pair pedalled 2,460 miles during the week and annexed a total of 1,227 points.

It was the final hour of the race that the Peden-Fielding combination climbed for themselves the leadership after trailing the leaders throughout the greater part of the week. Their victory was by no means a walkover for tied in distance with the giant Victoria redhead and his mate were the French duo of Alfred Letourneur and Henri LePage of Montreal.

Trailing the leaders came the team of Harry Horan, Newark, N.J., and Alex Auby, 18 year old Montreal boy.

Near Cornwall, Leo Raubenaul, 14 was instantly killed and his 17-year-old brother, Ernest, seriously injured when they were knocked down by an automobile Saturday night. The car, driven by John W. Ford, of Montreal, struck the boys after rounding a curve, 4 miles from here.

ROYALS TURN IN 9TH WIN

Moved Up a Notch in Defeating Jersey City 6 to 5

With the race getting tighter almost with every game, a tied game was come along to complicate the International League situation.

The Baltimore Orioles and Rochester Red Wings are moving along smoothly in the seventh inning yesterday with the score tied at 5 all after a big Rochester rally in the sixth. When rain came down and brought their struggle to an end.

The Orioles had a 5-0 lead, aided by Heffner, who provided the daily homer, but after they had driven Parr from the mound Clarence Heise and Jim Winford stepped them and the Red Birds nicked Ken Holloway for six straight hits and Cleveland Paul and Florence was thrown out at the plate trying to score Winford.

Royal Tied for Second

The tie dropped Montreal into a tie for second place with the victorious Montreal Royals. They are three games behind the leader Newark, who were rained out at Buffalo yesterday.

Montreal turned in its ninth straight victory when Jersey City 6 to 5 to break a tie with Buffalo and move up a notch in the standings.

Jersey's Skeeters took the lead at the start, driving Johnson from the out in the second and leading 4-1 after the third. The Royals got loose against Perkins in the sixth for three runs that tied the score and put over the winning tally in the next inning. Pitcher Johnson and Manager Moore of the Skeeters getting four hits in five times up.

With one game rained out and Reading at Toronto also scheduled, the day's results left four teams within one game of one another. Buffalo remained half a game behind Baltimore and Rochester with Rochester a full game behind. The difference is found in the victory columns as all four teams have lost nine games each.

15,000,000 SPARKS TO GO 10,000 MILES

"One of the most important automotive discoveries in recent years was the fact that efficiency of gasoline engines can be raised by simple periodic attention," said R. A. Stranahan, Spark Plug Company, Champion Spark Plug Company.

"In a piece of machinery so complicated as the modern combustible engine many parts obviously must take more power and endure more wear than others. Experiments by our engineers have demonstrated that the spark plug is one of the parts most susceptible to such influence. During a season's driving, totalling on the average about 10,000 miles, we find that each spark plug fires an automobile fires at least 15,000,000 times. Consequently, when the car has four, six, eight or more cylinders. The effect of this terrific strain is necessarily severe.

"It is our conviction that the spark plug in Champion makes are the best in the world, but even with Champion plugs we have improved that it pays to install new sets in automobiles once a year. The new sets more than pay for themselves in their effective lifetime by the saving they effect in gasoline and oil, besides the large amount of power they restore they yield in improved performance.

"It was through this discovery that we instituted Champion National Check-up Week campaign, and now my millions of motorists make use of the opportunity by replacing the spark plugs in their cars quite thereby assuring themselves renewed car performance an no cost to themselves. Champion National Check-up Week this year comes May 9 to 16."

Thorough cleaning of spark plugs makes a distinct difference in bettering the engine's operation but complete renewal of the plugs will make it still greater difference.

Thousands of tests by engineers of the Champion Spark Plug Company have proved that the owner of a car who changes his spark plugs after 10,000 miles of driving actually saves more than their cost, in gasoline and oil consumption, besides increasing his driving enjoyment through his car's improved performance and saving repairs caused by deterioration of his engine.

By The Observer

We noticed, by the O.B.S.A. bulletin last week, that Jack Williams and Les Rice, two ex-members of the C.O.R.L., asked for their reinstatement into the amateur ranks. They were both turned down however. Rice, who caught for Kingston a number of years, was last heard of two seasons ago when he was "pull pen" catching for the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Jack and Williams has been home at Verona for the past three years. Last summer he turned up for the Napanee Ball Park on July 1st and "warmed up" for a short time with his old battery mate "Scoopy" Rice. The results of satisfaction which graced Williams' face that day was one long to be remembered by the National players who watched the leaping ace for the Maple Leafs. It was like old times for Jack to again throw to Scoopy.

We have received communication from one more club wishing to enter a proposed industrial or commercial softball league for men. As soon as there are enough applications before us they will be turned over to the responsibles for the organization of the proposed league and a general meeting will be called. It is the wish of the parties interested to have at least six teams in the loop.

Applications were conspicuous by their absence when a general meeting of the Ki-Y League was called for last Friday night at the "Y". If the team managers think that calling meetings for a league that is planning a league is any enjoyment to those who are trying to provide recreation for them, they are sadly mistaken and the officers of the Ki-Y loop are going to give the teams one more chance to enter their league late this week. If there are not enough applications present at the meeting then the Ki-Y league will disband for the year 1932.

President A. B. Collins has called a general meeting of all members of the executive on the Belleville Nationals at the "Y" tonight. The object of the recusm is the most logical place to stage the boom. After the experience which the baseball executive had in the City Hall it is quite doubtful whether that building is large enough to hold the patrons. The Armouries and the Arena Gardens have been suggested. Any one would be ideal spots in which to hold the fights but the expense entailed would run into a lot of money on behalf of the promoters. We believe, however, that the place to return bout are nearly completed and that the bouts will again be staged in the Drill Hall quarters of the Belleville Nationals.

The financial committee at a meeting Wednesday night, Tuesday night, when they were engaging three dance bands for their dance on Friday night, was approached by Promoter Harry Armstrong who he Seemain on the subject of re-staging last Monday night's bouts. Although nothing authentic was handed down we feel that the baseball moguls are going to give the fans another boxing card in Belleville in connection with their opening baseball game on May 24th. Let's hope so at any rate.

We understand most of the Belleville players are planning to play their matches with the Point Anne Tennis Club this summer. With courts the calibre of those at the Bay of Quinte Country Club it is hard to blame them. The golfers were hard at it over the week end at both the Country Club and at the Belleville Golf Club. It was just the died-in-the-wools who braved the cool breezes yesterday, we'll wager.

Now that the Eastern Ontario Ladies' Softball Association has elected its officers for 1932, the local ladies' loop will soon swing into action getting in under the "parent body's" rejuvenated wings. Lloyd and by-laws. Fred Deacon, who represented the local league at Brockville, reports that he was highly impressed with the fine manner in which the meeting was conducted at Brockville on Saturday last. We will submit his report to the local executive on Saturday night next.

MISS M. SEDDON IS RE-ELECTED

E. O. L. S. A. Meets in Brockville to Transact Business

Miss M. Seddon of Ottawa was re-elected president of the Eastern Ontario Ladies' Softball Association at their annual meeting held in the town hall chambers of Brockville on Saturday night. All of last year's officers were returned to their respective positions at the election of officers which was one of the many items of business transacted during the meeting. Delegates from Ottawa were present from Chalk River, Perth, Smiths Falls, Iroquois, Brockville, Kingston and Belleville. Mr. Fred Deacon, president of the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball Association represented the local organization at the meeting. That considerable business was done at Saturday's meeting goes without saying.

The main business of the evening was to draw up the present constitution and a number of new by-laws were added for the benefit of some of the newer leagues, which affiliated with the association this year.

The election of officers found two new executive residents added to the league. The honorary presidents of the E.O.L.S.A. for 1932 are Col. T. A. Kidd of Kingston, Miss Ethel McCoughlan of Kingston, and Mr. G. T. Fulford of Brockville; president, Miss M. Seddon; vice-president, Miss English; secretary-treasurer, Miss E. Kingsdale; and Miss Mabel Seddon was one of the most business-like ever held in the history of the association and more business pertaining to the league's welfare than was completed than ever heretofore. Mr. Deacon presented one new by-law whereby the league will have the association without having at least two clubs in their respective cities or towns they must play a series of games in order to qualify for the association championship play-downs.

After the regular routine of business Mr. G. T. Fulford of Brockville offered to donate a trophy to be competed for in the intermediate series of the Ontario Ladies' Softball Association; there being no cup for that series at present.

Delegates Tendered Banquet

Following the annual meeting the delegates were tendered a banquet in the New York Cafe in Brockville through the hospitality of the Brockville Ladies' Softball League. All delegates present assured the Brockville league executive that the 1932 annual meeting had been the most successful in the history of the E.O.L.S.A. Mr. Deacon will submit his report of the meeting at next Tuesday night's meeting of the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball Association.

Eyebrows and Eyelashes

One wonders if a modern poet could write a sonnet to his lady's eyebrows when such little care often looks like nothing more than a wisp of darning cotton. Eyebrows have been terribly neglected. They are still being murdered. The effect isn't as startling as the ambitious weeders fancy. But nobody can do anything about it. You'd think by this time, the fad would have died of old age. It's been trying to revive and teasing 'em at the time of the world war. It's old stuff.

To defend the beauties that have wandered away from the family circle is merely a matter of keeping the skin nice and tidy. But to yank out eyebrow hair except a few of the old settlers, let to look lonesome and forlorn, is a practice that is no credit to the members of the sisterhood who look themselves in the eyes brows and blinks otherwise smart, if not really divine.

The hair and most foolish notion is to pluck out the far ends of the eyebrows, take a crayon in hand and produce an upward oriental slant. What won't they think of next? The line of the eyebrow should, according to the laws of beauty, conform to the shape of the eye. Mrs. Nature seldom fails in picking out the right kind of eye lashbrushes. Her lifts and curves and lines aren't bad at all. Mother knows best.

The hairs of which brows are composed haven't much vitality. Repeated tweezing, and they submit. Pluck enough, my heartties, and you'll be bald on the forehead for ever more. It is heaven's truth.

The ideal eyebrow is dark of color, bears a lustre and gloss, arches slightly in the middle portion, tapers away to a delicate point at the far end. The straight line, the low one and the brow that approaches too close to the eyelashes produce a stern interrogation. The high arch, giving the eyebrow the contour of a half circle, creates an expression of surprise. It is corrected by thinning in the center, and brushing upward as either end.

Considering that the depleted eyebrow makes the face look insipid and characterless, we believe we are justified in pleading for kinder treatment. Women who are blessed with a sense of the beautiful don't rob themselves completely of eyebrows, but cultivate them, train them, brush them the way they should go, cherish them.

You can, if you desire, have brows and lashes dyed. Nearly all beauty shops do the work. Treatment is finished in thirty minutes and the charge is one month. Surrounding tissues are protected with an oily application. It's a wonderful setting of time that would otherwise be spent with the old manicure cake and the little black brush.

Vaseline is an effective eyelash grower. If no eye shadow is a part of the beauty equipment, a light film of vaseline imparts a glisten to the lids that is reflected in the eyes. Makes 'em nice and moist and dewy looking—sort of romantic. Never clip the lashes. Clipping does nothing except to remove the delicate little upturned end. After that, they grow your hair don't curl, you can buy an eyelash curler and use it daily. It's unbeated. It merely gives that little twist that makes all the difference in the world.

How to Train Your Child

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

Give Him a Part in the Home Life

An eight year old lad had spent two weeks with one aunt and two with another. Then his parents went away on a vacation. The first aunt had plenty of time and money for entertaining her other three children, no maid and very little to do in the recreation.

But upon being questioned as to where he had been most time, he had replied "At Aunt Dot's." Aunt Dot was the second aunt. And when asked why he enjoyed himself better there, he gave the best possible reason for a majority of children by answering, "She let me do things."

The first aunt had taken him to matinees and motion pictures and had a party for him. She had spent much of her time trying to amuse him in the recreation.

Things to Do

But at Aunt Dot's there were all ways things to do. Aunt Dot let him beat eggs, and help her make his own bed. Aunt Dot's furniture was used to being used.

BACK TO BLOCKS

(By Constance Cameron)

Anyone who has had the care of children, or intelligently observed them at play, could have told us all along that children, after experimenting with the other types of play materials, invariably return to blocks.

But since we've begun to distrust our own judgment, and have come to rely almost totally upon records made by psychologists and observers of child behavior, I note with a sense of relief that groups from three universities and a New York school have concluded that blocks are still preferred by children to mechanical devices concocted for their supposed amusement.

Many mothers eager to give a child just the right thing, in trying to follow scientific lines of training, lose their perspective and distrust many activities which come to us and to our parents as a matter of course until modern child psychology intervenes. If Go I, for one, am delighted that they've put their seal of approval on the old-fashioned box of blocks.

There are innumerable things to be done with blocks. Every child enjoys reviving his experiences, enjoys dramatizing his role downtown, the rush of fire engines to a neighbors' home, the family life concerned with eating, sleeping or putting children to bed. From simple blocks the child's imagination creates whatever his fancy dictates.

Blocks during the Spring and Summer months can be taken into the yard for a picnic, used in a sandbox.

Supply your child with blocks by all means—large ones for the little fellows and blocks of more varied design and size for the older ones. They needn't be expensive. Scraps and scrolls from a carpenter's bench or a wood-working or furniture factory give just as much joy and opportunity for growth to the child, and scraps as expensive blocks from the store.

Killin' Competition

By Charles Sloan Reid

"Pa," Bascom has set out to ruin your business, did you know that?"

Sylvia Rumple's face was troubled as she looked into her father's eyes. The old man was smoking his pipe meditatively. His grocery store stood on one side of the main street of Medville; Art Bascom recently had opened up in the mercantile line. Rumple had done business in Medville since the little mountain village was merely a cross-roads opening among the hills.

"I reckon not, Sylvy," the old man decided, after a few moments silence.

"I reckon you can read that sign he has out on the front, can't you?"

A large poster decorated a spot just under the living room door of Bascom's store. Sylvia and her father were standing near the front door of Rumple's store, from which place Bascom's whole front could be seen.

"Yeah." The old man puffed away at his pipe, "I reckon I can. Them's these 'ere fly-up-the-creek, Sylvy, as don't stay in one place long. I ogine."

"I know, but while he does stay he can tear up a lot of business with such prices as that."

"I reckon he kinder he can make a run on sugar, an' folks'll rush in for that kind o' bargain, an' then spend a lot o' money on other stuff else as he can git a big profit on."

The sign on Bascom's store announced in large letters:

"BEST GRANULATED SUGAR, FIVE CENTS A POUND."

"What does sugar cost, Pa?"

"Fifty cents hundred, delivered here by them trucks."

Medville was fifteen miles from a railroad; and all supplies for the stores were hauled in by motor trucks.

"Well, I saw Mason's truck delivering five barrels of sugar there yesterday; an Bascom's got a big supply to make his run; and we have only about a barrel."

"Yeah, I know. Bascom'll lose on all he sells kinder than he expects, an' stirings'll cost him thet other ten cents."

The old man turned about and went to the back part of the store, followed by Sylvia. Behind the counter he took a piece of cardboard. "Come here, Sylvy!" he called.

Sylvia went.

"Print us a sign as I tell yuh."

"You ain't going to meet Bascom's price?"

"No. I'm a going' to sell hit at cost."

"Then you'll lose more than Bascom?"

"Yeah; while hit lasts."

Sylvy got a crayon and prepared to follow instructions.

"Say on the sign, 'Best Granulated Sugar—Four-Ninety'."

Rumple's sign had hung on the store front less than half an hour when a crowd gathered at Bascom's. This one read:

"Best GRANULATED SUGAR—FIVE-CENTS-A-POUND."

Sylvia had been watching for some such move on the part of her father's competitor, and immediately regretted the announcement. "Now, what you going to do, Pa?"

"Oh another piece o' board," the old man continued, "I reckon hit'll be a little aroused over the allusion. Mon by that time allthough Bascom was no lone of exasperation in his voice. "Bring me a piece of board."

Best Granulated Sugar-Four-Sixty-Five—One Dollar's worth to a Customer.

Rumple's new sign created some excitement across the street. Then afterwards, Bascom's henchman, Ike Unger, slunk across and into Rumple's store.

"Hello, Ike," he greeted Sylvia Rumple. "I'll be a greeted Sylvia Rumple. "I'll be a customer. Look! petition in sugar is gittin' a leetle in intrustin', ain't it?"

Ike grinned a bit triumphantly, as he surveyed the crowd in front of the store, his gaze sweeping Rumple's stock as he went.

"Something else for you, Ike?" asked Sylvia, without heeding his question.

"No; jest thought I'd come over an' look at a leetle at sugar."

"Well, we are very busy today, Ike."

"Yeah; hit 'pears like it, the way thet line o' customers is a going' in to Bascom's."

Another sheepish grin overspread his face. Presently he turned and went out.

"Pa, you know what Ike came in here for? Sylvia asked her father. The old man, and there were little shafts of fire from her eyes.

"Wanted to see jest about how much sugar we had on hand, so's he could tell Bascom."

"Exactly the lazy good-for-nothing thing!"

It was not long after Ike Unger's return to Bascom's store when another sign appeared on the rival store front:

"BEST GRANULATED SUGAR FOUR CENTS A POUND."

News of a bargain in Medville soon spread to its remotest corners. It was only a matter of a very few days before the sugar stream of people were going in to and out of Bascom's store.

"Sylvy!" The old man's look was pretty stern as he called Sylvy into another sign, an' hand out that, as reads: "Sugar — Four-Fifty-Five — Fifty Cents Worth to a Customer." An' now I'm a going' over to Bert Wilson's for a leetle while."

The old man went out, while Sylvia got busy with the crayon. She spent sometime on this poster, embellishing the corners with some artistic designs. Soon she took down the old sign, and hung the new one in its place. A number of people were standing in Bascom's store. Some of them bore packages they had just purchased. A few of them waited to return them to the merchant, in order to avail themselves of the better bargain at Rumple's. BIGGEST STORE—TWO . . . N. Y.

In the meantime old man Rumple had returned to the store. Following his entrance sat the front. Bert Kelley rolled at the door. Then a chicken yard in the rear. Rumple joined Kelley a moment later.

"We'll last wait a bit, Mr. Kelley," the old man said. "I reckon Bascom'll be closin' up shop soon again."

Sylvia was watching the Bascom store from the front window. She had not long to wait. Bascom came forth with a large new sign which he hung below the window, with a triumphant flourish.

"SUGAR—FOUR-FIFTY.

AS MUCH AS YOU WANT."

Sylvia ran back to her father. "He's cut again, Pa," she cried.

The old man grinned. "I 'lowed he would."

Turning to Kelley he began counting out a roll of money from a large leather wallet. "Gel 'em lined up as quick as you can, Kelley," he said.

"What you going to do, Pa?" Sylvia watched the departure of Kelley from the back door, with much curiosity.

"Jest makin' a leetle deal wi' Kelley, Sylvy."

"Sylvy, I print any more signs, Pa?" the girl faltered.

"No, I reckon that'll all he wants to."

Sylvia went back to the front to watch the procession pouring into Bascom's store. In the next half hour the crowd increased in size. They were hauling away sugar by the bushel basket, bringing their own washed-out flour and sugar sacks to be refilled therefrom. The stream continued for more than an hour. Bascom and helps ran out of sugar. Then another big sugar they had no time to see what was happening. Finally Bascom's store had done about the latest cut in the history. With not a shelf upon his supplies, it was but a short time before Bascom found his stock of sugar also exhausted. The last sign which appeared upon Bascom's store read:

"SORRY, FOLKS. SUGAR ALL SOLD. ANOTHER LOT COMING WEEK."

The rush over, Bascom was standing in his front doorway, rubbing his hands and chuckling gleefully over the evident discomfiture of his competitor.

"Well Ike," chuckled the merchant, looking down upon his cringing henchman. "We've been pretty busy; eh?"

"Bin a say, Bascom! I never see'd sich a run in my born days. I reckon ol' Rumple had jes' as well close up his shebang arter this."

In the meantime a big two-horse wagon, driven by Bert Kelley, entered the lane at the side of Rumple's store and began to be loaded at the back door. Apparently they were transferring sugar from packages—large bags, small bags—packages of all sizes. Each package in appearance began to convey to Bascom somethings unusual.

"Ike," he commanded, "get along over yonder and see what Rumple's doing in."

Ike strolled over. He was not long in return. When he came back he had a sickly grin on his face.

"Rumple's got fifty barrels o' sugar," reported Ike, "as Rumple says Kelley has had some friends a buyin' up for him at leash cost to them."

Bascom suddenly slammed the shutters of his store, and went back to his desk where he began to look over an invoice for sugar at wholesale.

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman)

Dear Mrs. Beekman

1.—When a couple become engaged what is the proper procedure? Would it be out of order for the engaged girl to have a dinner party for her mother extending the invitations to include both immediate families?

I have been reading etiquette books on the subject and am somewhat confused. These books state that the intended groom's mother should extend the welcoming hand as far as social activities are concerned. But in the event that the intended groom's mother is not in a position financially, or hard feelings, but just on general principles, would the intended bride's mother be criticized for taking the first step?

2.—When extending invitations for the engagement party, should the invitations be written or printed form (sold in the stores) be all right? Would a telephone invitation be out of order?

3.—After a girl has received her engagement ring, when should the engagement party take place, as described above?

4—Should the date of the marriage (or months) be stated at the time of the engagement party, and by whom? Would it be good taste to include rice sacks announcing the engagement and stating thereon the probable date? I am not sure that such cards are available, but I mention that they are.

I recognize that they are, I figure that by using such cards a speech regarding the engagement would be eliminated. However, in this case, the month of the marriage is to be particularly stressed to avoid any future misunderstanding. But would it be much more satisfactory if we could say little or nothing about it and hear the ideas of the crowd?

5.—The selection of the bridal party: Would there be seven ushers and four men to accompany them (would there be any need of additional men for ushers? Or are these accompanying men all selected for the purpose of eliminating men to seat the guests?

6.—The girl accompanying the best man called the "maid of honor" is she the only member should receive "bridesmaids"? I think that these are the right titles, but would like them verified.

7—Would it be good taste when the bridal party is to be large to have both families present and the intended bride's mother, making an announcement at that time as to the number in the bridal party? It seems to me that this would do away with a lot of extra trouble. On the other hand, would it be good taste to inform the bridal group of their procedure duties about four months prior to the time of the marriage? What is the correct length of time which should intervene?

Bride-To-Be

1.—For the bride's mother to give the dinner party so announcing the engagement is in excellent form, but the bride's mother has to include the members of the two families.

The only rule about the "first social move" is that the mother and member of the immediate family of mother at least, shall make a visit—invitation to the home of bride as possible after their son has told them of his engagement. The form—all rule is that this important welcoming-call is to be made within twenty-four hours after they have been told of the engagement by their son. Usually this visit has been made by the fiance's parents, they may or may not be present at the first engaged couple. But it is not necessary for them to give any parties. So it is quite all right for your mother to give the party you suggest.

2.—The written note is the best form of invitation, the note written by your mother. The bought invitation—form is not good, and the telephone—invitation is not good.

3.—This depends entirely on conditions. But the girl should not wear her engagement ring in public until the family announcement of her engagement has been made.

4.—It is not the custom to state the date of the marriage, but even the month, but if you wish to, there is no rule against it. Perhaps you'd do it. I wouldn't do it, however, by cards. I would write a letter to those that may be given you and your fiance at the dinner. Perhaps you, your father or whoever makes the toast, might say "Here's to our Mary, and to her John ——, and to a sunshiny June day for their marriage".

5.—In the well-planned wedding nowadays the bridal attendants walk together, and the groom's attendants walk together, in both the processional and the recessional. They do not "accompany" each other. The ushers walk together, two by two, first, in the processional, and walk together, two by two, last, in the recessional. After the ushers, in the processional, walk the bridesmaids, two by two, and last in the recessional, they still walk together but in the reverse order, the bridesmaid after the bride and groom in the recessional, still walking in pairs. The best man does not take part in either the processional or the recessional.

6.—The chief attendant of the bride is called "the maid of honor" she is not married, and if she is she is referred to as the "matron of honor". The chief attendant is called the bridesmaids.

7.—This is just according to your wish and convenience.

(Mrs. Cornelius Beekman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers.)

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Of toilet articles neither a beverage or a lender be. Passing the lipstick or the old powder dispenser to dangerous bacteria and germs may lurk upon them. Adults know better but the members of the young fry one sees in public conveyances and in the dressing rooms of movie houses have a naive way of making a lipstick a community affair. "What" they ask, "a little germ or two between friends?" If they only knew it, they'd be much wiser ably they don't. In the household each member should have his or her own washcloths, combs and brushes. Very necessary.

The blonde doily with a delicate flare at the edge of a dressing gown appears to best advantage when her velvety complexion is framed with a matching powder of light consistency. A heavy cake-rouge will reveal the fine texture of the epidermis. Brunettes generally have a translucent skin and when a fairly heavy powder can be placed without detriment the effect of too generous a consignment.

They're still vanishing finger bowls and the fashionable finger nail the glittering metals of the earth. An exotic idea, suitable only for the sophisticated beauty who can get away with almost anything she may attempt in the way of cosmetic decoration. The average, sweet, old-time girl still polishes her nails in the natural shade.

Powder pads, combs, brushes, all toilet articles should be kept in dustproof containers. Unprotected, comb and brush may look grand and ornamental laid out on the dressing table but that is not the best way, at least not if they are to see daily service.

At the first sign of wrinkles, purchase a heavy massage cream, apply faithfully every night. Nearly always the wrinkles will vanish one by the time lines appear; it will lap up the oily cosmetic with eagerness. Friction necessary to the application of cream does its part too, starting blood stream to purring, forcing dead skin cells from the epidermis, keeping tissues and small fibres to function, carry on.

HESITANCY ON WALL STEET

Securities None Too Sure Because No Fresh Stimulus

New York, May 9 — Securities markets started the new week off on a hesitant mood today.

Week-end trade surveys failed to provide any fresh stimulus, and speculative attention was still riveted in Washington. Despite the cautious stirrings toward the market, they rendered an undertone of better adjustment, carried over from the uptrend of last Friday.

Prices of shares worked slightly lower in the first hour, eased off again late morning, and stiffened with action at mid-day, ruling slightly under Saturday's close by early afternoon. Bulls and bears made no interval of heaviness. Among issues selling off 1 to 3 points were New York Central, Allis Chalmers, Pacific, Peoples' Gas, North American, Public Service of N. J., and American Telephone, but there were some fractional recoveries by early afternoon. Eastman was a hot spot, off 3 at the lowest. U. S. Steel sold off a fraction, then recovered. General Motors was about off. Sears, Roebuck was in volume.

Banking and brokerage quarters continued to look for clues as to future trends in Washington developments. The unanimous approval by the U. S. Senate finance committee of the compromise tax measure in its meeting today was viewed favorably.

Lou Reichers Hops Off Tuesday For Trans-Atlantic Flight

Newark, N.J., May —What Lou Reichers hopes will be the fastest flight across the Atlantic is scheduled to start from the Newark Airport tomorrow night.

Reichers, long distance speed flier, hopes to cut in half the time of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's pioneering. He will take a wing monoplane by way of Harbor Grace, Nfld., and Ireland, making stops in both countries.

His course will be directed by Capt. Harry Connor from the City of Hamburg, a Baltimore mail liner, now at sea bound for Havre.

Connor is one of the foremost navigators in the world.

Before Reichers takes off from Newark, Connor will radio him a weather check and indicate the best course. At Harbor Grace Reichers will receive another report.

Reichers recently flew from Montreal to Havana to test his plane for the Transatlantic hop.

FIVE 50,000

(F) That the developing of Canadian art and artists, and the securing of outstanding programmes from Canada, be encouraged.

(G) That the commission make available to the people, when and where possible, the facilities of national and chain broadcasting.

(H) That the commission make special effort to give such programs as will be acceptable to provincial and local requirements.

(I) That before making changes in Canadian radio broadcasting, the commission make a complete survey of the present system, with particular reference to adequate coverage.

Canadian League Plan.

The scheme outlined to the committee by the Canadian Radio League was strongly reflected in the report. This called for a gradual assumption by a government commission of such broadcasting functions, in easy stages, the cost to be paid out of the proceeds derived from advertising.

It was estimated in evidence presented to the committee, that there were close to 800,000 receiving sets in use in Canada, although fees were collected on about 600,000. The rate was increased on April first last to $2.00 per set for the annual license, and it was conservatively estimated that, with rigorous enforcement of the law, the revenue would be in excess of at least $1,500,000 per year.

Shared Wave Lengths.

A feature of the report which had a bearing on many of the briefs presented by small station owners, was that stations of 100 watts power, or less, could continue to operate under provincial ownership. Because of the great distances in Canada it was stated by technical experts that by something over a hundred of these small stations could operate on the principle of shared wave-lengths, without conflicting.

REGT. DANCE DELIGHTFUL

Picton Armouries Scene of Annual Military Ball

PICTON, May 9—(Special)—Picton Armouries was the scene of a colorful event on Friday evening when the officers of C Company, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment held their fifth annual military ball.

The Armouries was transformed into a bower of beauty by the use of many flags. The lights were shaded with red, white and blue streamers and the orchestra was seated beneath a canopy of the same colors. Ab Adams and His Commodores of Belleville furnished delightful music for dancing.

The armouries lends itself admirably for an event of this kind and there were around two hundred couple present. Beautiful gowns of the ladies and the tunics of the officers and the sombre dress of the civilian combined to make a colorful scene. A spotlight added to the beauty of the scene.

At midnight, the Girl Guides served refreshments and realized a nice sum for their work. Many from out-of-town were in attendance.

The patrons and patronesses of this event were: Brig-Gen. B. R. Hepburn and Mrs. Hepburn; C.M.G.; Col. A. E. Bywater, V.D., and Mrs. Bywater; Lt.-Col. H. J. Boldt, V.D.; Major Colin Hepburn and Mrs. Hepburn; Major Gerald Allison and Mrs. Allison; John Wesse, M. P., and Mrs. Wesse; H. S. Colliver, M.P.P. and Mrs. Colliver. The honorary patron is Brigadier W .B. Anderson, C.M.G., D.S.O.

Officers of the Company who were responsible for the affair were Major E. A. Adams; Capt. G. Walmsley, Lieut. L. B. Calnan, Lieut. Jas. Imrie, Lieut. C. L. Colliver, Lieut. E. H. McLean.

Four Teachers Resign

When the new term starts at Picton Collegiate and Vocational Institute, there will be a new principal and three new teachers on the staff.

Mr. J. H. Fox of Windsor has been engaged as Principal, succeeding Mr. C. A. Shaver, who resigned. The Board has also accepted the resignations of Miss Jean Bartram, B.A., teacher of English and Modern; William Donaldson, B.A., teacher of Science; and W. C. Williams, teacher of Agriculture and Physical Culture.

New Golf Pro

Mr. J. Stuart Aiken has taken up his duties as pro at the local golf club. Mr. Aiken is a native of Kingston and has been a Badminton professional in that city. Last year he was pro at the Perth Golf Club and previous to that he was assistant to Mr. Richard Green who was pro here last year and for several years previous has returned to England.

Appeal Ballot

Mr. Herbert J. Ringer has been appointed Bailiff of Prince Edward County, succeeding the late Dougall Hoover. Announcement of this appointment was made yesterday. Mr. Ringer is now retired but for many years was a stonkeeper in town.

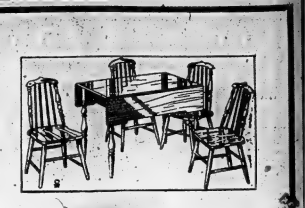
Mr. Sid Rykman of Flint, Mich., after a visit to Prince Edward County, was so pleased with its many attractions that he decided to erect a summer home here. He purchased a lot at South Bay and is now having a large collage built, and will occupy it this summer.

NEW SOCIAL ORDER, NEED

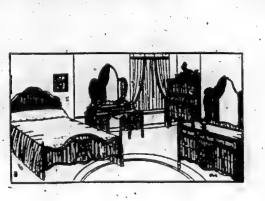
Rev. H. B. Neal Speaks on Conditions of The Day

Following their special Mother's Day Service, which was held on Sunday morning, Rev. H. B. Neal spoke to the members of Holloway Street Church on the rise and fall of the great Greek and Roman Empires. He chose for his text the 23rd verse of St. Paul's epistle to the Philippians:—"All the saints salute you, chiefly they that are of Ceasar's household."

Mr. Neal pointed out, that those two great empires had, previous to their falling into paganism, given the world more education in art, science and other mediums of learning than ever had been duplicated since. But due to the fact, that they did not have the proper teachings of "The Nazarete" of brotherly love they crashed in paganism. Mr. Neal pointed out, that people as well as nations could very well fall into these ways and stressed upon the congregation to follow the way set by the teachings of Christianity today. He pointed out the great martyrs of those early days and asked the congregation to take them as their examples today, when strife and tribulation was so prevalent in the world. Mr. Neal was of the opinion, that through a new christian social order only could the conditions of today be bettered.



During the evening the choir sang a beautiful anthem, while Mr. Sid Hector sang a solo. Following the regular evening service Alex. Gordon, organist of Holloway Street United Church, favoured the congregation with a short but greatly enjoyed organ recital.



Ontario produced nearly 46,000,000 pounds of high quality tobacco last year, the bright flue-cured of the new tobacco belt, centred in Norfolk county being the best tobacco yet produced in the province.

Jean Nicolet, a lieutenant of Samuel de Champlain, is credited with the discovery of Lake Michigan in the summer of 1634.

And educated man is one who can accomplish things. — Henry Ford.

LEADERS SHOW MORE STRENGTH

Turnover However, is Not Such as to Suggest Upturn

Toronto, May 9. — Leaders were fractionally stronger on the Toronto Stock Exchange this morning. Gains of from ¼ to ½ point were made by C.P.R., Bell Telephone, B. C. Power "A", Brazilian and Steelcrete. The turn-over in these shares was not such as to suggest more than normal buying.

Oils, which had upheld the market last week, were dormant, the leaders were unchanged to small fractions lower. Beverage issues were quiet and unchanged and there was very little trading among the foods.

Ford of Canada slipped ½ point to 35½. Steels, Farm Implement Stocks, International Nickel were all unchanged.

Five million million years ago the sun weighed approximately twice as much as it does now.

Delighted with Happy Days

Is Enthusiastic

Mr. Martin, manager of the People's Store, was also in an enthusiastic mood when approached. "Splendid!" declared Mr. Martin, "and happily report one of the biggest weeks we have had for some time. So far we haven't been definitely able to determine just how much we are ahead, but we do know that it will be a decided increase. I was in communication with the manager of the Oshawa store and he stated they had a very poor week for business, but such was not the case down here. It pepped things up."

Want Another

Mr. Chas. Hanna, of the Walker Hardware Company, hardly needs any introductory comment regarding the programme which he tried so hard to help along, but he did remark that if the weather had been more favorable, there would have been one of the greatest weeks in the history of the town. "Now it seems the people are all wanting for another one. I have had at least five people in the store this morning alone, not counting during the three days, and they all wanted the merchants to go ahead and put on another of these weeks. With the experience we have had I think that the next one will top everything this city has ever had in that line," declared Mr. Hanna. "But" emphatically stated Mr. Hanna, "if that excursion had been deferred to some other time, or the weather had been more favorable, then we would have had something to crow about. As it was it was good, but when a number of them left here on that excursion, and rain threatened also, it seriously hampered us."

Pleased at Customers

Mr. Russ Wotten? Mr. Wotten was jubilant. "There was nothing but a steady stream of customers through the door during the whole period. It was just like old times. I heard several shoppers commenting on the spirit which was shown by the merchants and press in putting this thing over. As far as I can see everyone is expecting another like period. I think that could be arranged," declared Mr. Wotten.

Suggestions from Buyers

Mr. Williams, manager of the Metropolitan Store, endeavored an interesting angle. Besides congratulating all who had helped to put the thing over, and reiterating again that this store had come through with flying colors, Mr. Williams stated that he was already ready for another like period. "What we want now," declared Mr. Williams, "is suggestions from the people who did the buying. We want some suggestions from them about the last campaign and some ideas about the conduct of the next one. Frankly I think that Happy Days should be a regular feature at regular intervals."

Canadian Department Stores

reported an excellent period. Business upturn, declared the officials, and everyone was excellent throughout the whole period, declared officials of the store.

Further Events

Mr. E. Shapiro, manager of McNabb's, stated that he was of the opinion that the campaign was of mutual benefit to both merchants and public alike. Mr. Shapiro told the Ontario Intelligencer that he was highly in favor of staging the Happy Days campaign in Belleville every spring and autumn thereby making it a semi-yearly event. He also was of the opinion that the people in general did not have the opportunity to realize the fundamentals of the campaign due to their lack of intimacy, but, if it were made a semi-annual or more frequent affair the people would derive the full benefit. Mr. Shapiro thought that the price reductions which were so in evidence during the campaign, were thoroughly appreciated by the buying public.

Depression Forgotten

Mr. Jack McIntosh, manager of the Metropolitan Departmental Store, told the Ontario Intelligencer that he was simply great and he was firmly convinced that the campaign was a decided success and looked for the merchants to make the idea a more frequent nature. "Old man depression was surely forgotten," said Mr. McIntosh, as he stated that the results of the campaign had been of mutual benefit to all concerned. He also pointed out that the campaign had helped to stimulate business and also to point out to the public that the so-called depression was in a good measure in their minds.

Greatest of Ideas

"The greatest idea yet. It was far ahead expectation," was the greeting which Mr. William Leslie, proprietor of the Leslie Shoe Store, gave the Ontario Intelligencer when asked as to his conception of the campaign. He related that his firm was pleased with the business that they had during the campaign. He was of the opinion that the reduction in prices had much to do with the success that they had anticipated. He was of the opinion, however, that it had it not been for Saturday's rain they would have done a better business. The public appreciated the campaign and backed it to the limit," said Mr. Leslie. He was of the opinion, however, that the Retail Merchants' Association would see more merchants lined up for the campaign than had co-operated in this first one. He also was in favor of staging Belleville Happy Days campaign, in the spring and semi-annually, in the autumn.

Mutual Benefit

Mr. Louis Kroch, manager of Kroch Bros., ladies' ready-to-wear store, thought that it was a way of mutual benefit to all, as both buyers and merchants alike had realized some profit through the annals of the campaign. Mr. Kroch was of the opinion that when the Belleville Happy Days were repeated the citizens would then realize the value that could be accomplished and more mutual benefit would be derived by both the public and the merchants alike. Mr. Kroch was of the opinion that the Belleville Happy Days campaign had been a decided success from every angle, and he was eagerly looking forward to its resumption next fall as he was of the opinion that the project should be of the semi-annual nature.

Delighted and Satisfied

Mr. John Cook said:—"I was delighted and entirely satisfied with the Three Happy Days—it was a good thing for the City, people soon took up the idea and entered into the spirit of the event enthusiastically. I would certainly go in for it again and I should like to see another such an event early in October."

Excellent Idea

Mr. T. M. Palmer, (Jeweller):—"The 'Three Happy Days' went off very satisfactorily with us. The idea was an excellent one in every way and I would enter heartily into the holding of a similar event at a suitable time in the fall of the year.

Should Be Repeated

Angus McFee (Jeweller): —"We were quite satisfied with the event. The idea was an excellent one and now that it has been started it should be repeated at a suitable time. It certainly created much more activity in the business section of the city".

People Enjoy It

Haines Shoe Store (Mr. F. E. McBride):—We are entirely satisfied—in fact quite delighted with the result of the 'Three Happy Days' in Belleville and we will be very glad to enter again in to the holding of a like event. The people seemed to enjoy themselves and they entered heartily into the spirit of the special occasion.. When the merchants of Belleville get together and co-operate they can accomplish much.

Much More Week

Mr. Edgar Stapley (Stapley's Parcel Express):—"The 'Happy Days' certainly made very much more work for us—there were many more parcels than usual to be delivered."

ples crept study, LOUISE ANDERSON was ...ously. The thick Brunsels bagpy, during the first years of widowhood. She had Lennox—she had him all to herself. She was so secure in her possession of him that she was able to endure his pathetic, almost angry tears at his father's passing, his recurrent outbursts of grief which left him weak and ill. He was a child, he would forget, she thought. Now her possession was undisputed, there was no longer that shadow of somebody else's claim, she had ignored, never admitted even to herself, but which had angered her for nine years.

At school the other children were undemonstratively sorry for him. They regarded him with a kind of troubled awe when he returned to them a few days after the funeral. It seemed too incredible to them that any boy's father could die. Fathers were fixed institutions. Solid, real always present when you needed them. The boys showed their sympathy in curious ways. Fred Van Alstyne gave him a treasure, Fred's own birthday pocket-knife. The Lambert twins took him into their secret club—The Desperate Desirers.

The girls were more open in their condolences. Sally Morgan slipped her hands into his, on that first, rather dreadful day, and squeezed it hard. She even said, quite openly, "I'm so sorry."

CHAPTER FOUR

Lennox liked Sally Morgan. She had a way of tossing her small head, of flirting back her long, golden curls, a way of looking at you from under dropped lashes. She shared apples and cookies with all persons. The first claim she was terribly heaten but persisted—was because of Sally. Some one called her "Lena girl". He hadn't minded the intimation, he's liked it, but the color in his face. The gentlest ladies had been filled with horror, Mrs. Sheldon was pained. Lennox had been done up in whitehazel after reaching home and had submitted to a lecture, lasting for over an hour. Gentlemen don't brawl. He was battered and bruised and quietly triumphant that his mother could be made to know the cause of the battle. The other boy hadn't told, either; that was part of the code, too. But the other boy was never asked to Lennox's parties again. Mrs. Sheldon saw to that.

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 19.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Shortly before sundown, a group of horsemen on the horizon were seen by a sentry. They came galloping over the now golden sands directly toward the French Legion's little camp. They made no attempt to conceal themselves, but Captain Jacot, suspecting treachery, gave his men a few sharp commands. The party of Arabs halted a hundred yards away; all but one, who rode straight into the camp and dismounted before Jacot.

I am Sheik Amor ben Khatour," he announced. Captain Jacot eyed the newcomer, a tall, sour-looking man, narrowly. Well?" he asked. The Arab came directly to the point. Achmet ben Houdin, your prisoner, is my sister's son. Deliver him to me and I will see that he behaves." Jacot shook his head. "That cannot be. He is charged with many murders. If he is innocent, he will be released!" "And if he is not?" questioned the Sheik. The Arab's left hand had been hidden beneath his burnoose. Now he withdrew it, disclosing a large goatskin purse bulging and heavy with gold coin. He opened it and let a handful trickle into his right palm, then replaced them. All the time he was silent. Jacot watched him closely. They were alone now. The Sheik held the purse toward Jacot stepped close and whispered meaningly: Achmet ben Houdin, my sister's son, MIGHT manage to escape this night)"

The French officer flushed deeply then he went very white and with fists clenched took a halfstep toward the Arab. Suddenly he thought better of whatever impulse was moving him. "Sergeant!" he called. The non-commissioned officer hurried fore his superior. "Take this black dog back to forward saluting, as his heels clicked together behis people," he ordered. "See that they leave at once and shoot the first who attempts to return."

ROBERT MONTGOMERY IN BRILLIANT NEW COMEDY

Dressmaker Tuesday Night

Comedy in the Continental manner will be seen at the Belle Theatre Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily, when Robert Montgomery's newest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture — "But the Flesh is Weak," begins its run at that playhouse.

The new film, based on Ivor Novello's stage success, "The Truth Game," which had long runs in both London and New York, has been directed by Jack Conway, whose most recent releases were "Paid" and "Arsene Lupin."

Conway, a past master at comedy, recognizes a laugh when he sees one. There were plenty to be recognized in "But the Flesh is Weak."

Story Kids Here

"This new Montgomery film," he says, "was grand material to work on. I like a story that kids the hero. It's part of life, and it's the big part of comedy." That's what makes for the success of so many Continental comedies; Molnar and Pirandello plays. They don't take their heroes too seriously. They let the audience laugh at, as well as with, characters. And yet man's ego never to be crushed.

Robert Montgomery, who appeared with similar success in "Private Lives," "Shipmates," "The Man in Possession" and other films was chosen to play the star role in "But the Flesh is Weak." His performance in similar type roles is well known, and it was thought by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives that the new screen play would be an excellent vehicle for his particular talents.

Heather Thatcher, an English actress whose chief claim to fame in America is the fact that she wears a monocle, but who is one of the leading stage players of London, has a supporting role in "—But the Flesh is Weak."

Nora Gregor, another name unfamiliar to American screen fans also appears on the program of the new screen play. Miss Gregor is one of Vienna's most famous actresses. Blonde, bl.-eyed and extremely beautiful, she is a universal favorite in that city and also has been starred by Max Reinhardt. Miss Gregor has the romantic lead opposite Montgomery.

Nils Asther Returns

C. Aubrey Smith, who played in "Tarzan The Ape Man," "Bachelor Father" and other Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer films, plays the hero's father; Nils Asther, after a long absence from the screen returns to play a Russian prince, and Edward Everett Horton, Frederick Kerr and other players of prominence appear in the new offering.

Highlights in the fast moving story are said to be numerous. Montgomery's hilarious adventure in a balcony scene reminiscent of Romeo's exploits is said to be especially laughable. The try which gives him a foothold slips and slips. His stealing of the girl at the Derby; the poignant moment in the gambling-casino, where his happiness goes crashing with the falling cards; his dramatic encounter with a Russian, a rival for his sweetheart's hand, all these enliven the quickly moving plot of the film.

Dressmaker Tuesday

Each lady attending the Belle Tuesday evening, will be presented with a useful and beautiful Rose Queen Dressmaker Gift with the compliments of the management.

Tarzan The Ape Man

All box office attendance records for the past six months at the Belle have been smashed by "Tarzan The Ape Man," unquestionably 1932's outstanding thrill and romance experience, which closes its engagement at the Belle Tonight.

Pictured above are James Cagney and Loretta Young, stars of the widely applauded "Taxi" now at the Capitol (Dinnerware Gift Night).

Robert Montgomery, Nils Asther and Nora Gregor in "But the Flesh is Weak," commencing at the Belle Tuesday (Dressware Night).

At The Capitol

"TAXI" NOW AT THE CAPITOL DINNERWARE GIFT TO-NIGHT

Tonight each patron of the Capitol Theatre will be presented with a beautiful piece of Wedgewood "Richelieu" Dinnerware.

A new kind of Cagney has come to town.

You will find no killer-gambler-hoodlum-crook-gangster in "Taxi" now at the Capitol starring James Cagney with lovely Loretta Young. Instead, we have a typical American boy earning a precarious living in the feverish business of taxicabbing. He is a moody, serious individual, with flecks of humor here and there that flash forth bits of the Cagney personality.

There is whizzing, rattling romance of the big cities, with a boy and a girl caught in the back-fire of taxicab war. Sabotage and strategy, even on the part of the trust's thugs claim the girl's father and the boy's brother, but the avenging of their deaths is left to the lawless innovation which takes "Taxi" out of the gangster class and leaves it a drama of fast action and stark excitement.

Cagney and Miss Young make a splendid combination for romance—he as the man of action, she as the lovely, girlish heroine whose affection for the boy transcends everything else. Cagney here reveals that he is an actor of great versatility, while Loretta never has given a better performance in her screen career.

There are a number of fine hearty laugh sequences in the story, with the humor falling into place naturally and logically. Cagney, in the lighter moments, is a revelation as a comedian, and there are two big musical episodes, one in a night club and the other in a dance hall, that lift the picture into the class of special productions. Cagney, in everything that he does, outlifts the stardom that Warner Bros. have placed on his strong shoulders.

He is not only an actor of great talent, but his comedy technique bears out the promise he gave in "The Millionaire" and "Smart Money" where his pantomime with Edward G. Robinson provided one of the laughs of the year.

Cagney and Young have been provided with a superb cast of supporting players, including George E. Stone, Dorothy Burgess, Lelia Bennett, George MacFarlane and David Landau, the unforgettable husband in "Street Scene."

The authors of the play, Kubec Glasmon and John Bright, who adapted it from the stage drama, "Blind Spot" by Kenyon Nicholson, have done a fine job of writing, and Roy Del Ruth, the director, is to be congratulated on an exceptionally intelligent handling of his subject.

Warner Bros. are to be commended for giving us one of the finest pictures of this season. For "Taxi" is swell entertainment and a gripping drama from start to finish.

MAN BITTEN BY MUSKRAT

Charles Clarke Has to Have Wounds Cauterized

Coming around the corner of a building at the North Station at midnight Friday last, Charles Clarke car inspector there, surprised a muskrat. The animal made a jump at him, biting him on the leg. Mr. Clarke had a pair of light gloves on his hands and after shaking the muskrat off it again jumped at him, biting his glove through the shoe. The wounds had to be cauterized and have proved to be very painful.

There are a number of these animals about the railway yards, quite frequently being found in the pit at the roundhouse.

PROSTRATE FORM UPON HIGHWAY

Driving Near Foxboro Motorist Has Fright as He Sees "Body"

The man who used to paint black stripes on some nearby farmer's white fences, removing night, pluck all but a few tall feathers out of the fowl, set to take his concert and put it together again straddling the ridgepole of the barn, has sons now to do the painting, but who don't wait for Hallowe'en.

Saturday evening a representative of an eastern silk and fabric company was returning to Belleville from a trip to some of the outlying towns where he had made the past few days showing samples and taking some orders from the merchants. He was on the way from Stirling. One foot was planted on the accelerator, both hands were on the wheel, eyes were on the road ahead and mind was either on the fact that business was picking up or the good dinner he was going to have when he got to town. It was dark, and the bright headlights of the car showed little into the blackness ahead.

He rounded around the curve on a down grade just west of Foxboro, when, without a warning, another dip at the accelerator, and settled back to the serious task of making time. Then he gasped. He stiffened. He jammed his feet on the clutch and brake with an instantaneous action that slithered the car to a screeching stop on the loose gravel underneath. Ahead of him lay crumpled on the road a horrible shape suggesting that death had come very suddenly and without warning. A dead man! Was it?

First impulse was to fly to the nearest telephone and advise the law. Better judgment triumphed. He got out of the car and gingerly approached the recumbent form with eyes distended. The figure lay face downwards. There were no shoes on it, but instead of shoes a few wisps of straw blew grimly hither and thither in the freshening breeze. More stuck out from under the black hat.

An exploring toe touched it. The figure rolled over and exposed a loosely buttoned coat from under which more of the straw protruded. The hat rolled off. There was no face with streaks of blood on it; the arms were merely coat sleeves also stuffed. It was a straw man!

Ha! Ha! Good joke! But hard on the nerves of one salesman. Anyhow the straw man was loaded into the car and brought to Belleville. It was dumped off at a down town garage, where it still is. If the owner will call for it and prove the property he may have same—and no questions asked.

BANDIT TOOK IT ON CHIN

TORONTO, May 9.—Jacob Gross, 16-year-old Toronto youth saved his day's receipts from his father's butcher store Saturday when he paid little attention to a gun in the hands of a would-be robber and counteracted action with his fist.

Young Gross in the habit of picking up the cash from the store every Saturday had just emerged from the store and was seating himself in the car when the bandit poked his head through the door and demanded the money. A hasty reality to the chin dazed the hold-up man who after pulling the trigger on a "Dud" cartridge took to his heels.

Gross pursued the man and with the aid of a pedestrian overpowered him.

The Gabblers Arrive

By Thornton W. Burgess

I wonder how they get that way
Who talk a lot yet nothing say.
—Paddy the Beaver.

Satisfied that there was no immediate danger and that Mrs. Paddy's warning had been merely to let him know that he should be on guard, Paddy at length went back to his job of cutting down a tree. Jerry Muskrat, however, was a bit too nervous to go quite so far back from the water. You see, he was not used to it.

"If you don't mind," said he, "I'll watch you from here near the water and will help you if you need help while you work. Two will be better than one. Don't you think so?"

Paddy grinned, but he trusted his head and that Jerry didn't see that grin. "Certainly," said he graciously. "It will be fine to have you on guard. I shall feel a lot easier in my mind as I work. I'll soon have that tree down. Hello, here comes Mrs. Paddy to join us. What was your hurry for, my dear?"

"Old man Coyote was prowling about the upper dam so I signaled to let you know that you should be on guard and then I thought that I knew he was about. He undoubtedly will right for he trotted off at once. He knows how lucky it is to try to catch one of us when we know he is about and never wastes any time that way," replied Mrs. Paddy. "Do you want me to help you cut that tree?" she added.

Paddy shook his head. "No thank you," he replied. "I have it more than half cut through already. But when it falls I will be glad to have you help cut it up. Just you see that our friend here keeps out of the way when I signal that the tree is about to fall."

"Oh, I'll keep out of the way. You may be sure of that, cried Jerry.

So Paddy went back to work and Jerry and Mrs. Paddy sat on the edge of the pond keeping watch. By and by Jerry heard a slight cracking sound. This was followed at once by a loud thump. Paddy had slapped the ground hard with his big flat tail.

"Does that mean danger?" asked Jerry anxiously, preparing to dive into the water.

"No and yes," replied Mrs. Paddy. "It doesn't mean that there is danger from an enemy, but it does mean that there is danger for any one who may be where that tree is about to fall. It is a warning to get out of the way. We are quite safe here because we have plenty of room for that tree. Here it comes!"

Jerry managed to see the top of that tree slowly bend forward and down. Then there were more cracking sounds and the top of that tree came down toward him faster and faster. Jerry sat still as long as he could, but when he was sure that the tree was going to crash down on him he made a hasty dive into the water just as the tree hit the ground with a crash. Mrs. Paddy hadn't moved and when Jerry popped his head out of water and looked back she was sitting just where she had been and that fallen tree was several feet beyond her. Jerry was chagrined as he swam back, Mrs. Paddy saw this.

"Don't let that trouble you," said she. "You must have felt that you were right under that falling tree. I know I would have had I not seen so many fall that I have learned to judge them. They always look as if they are going to fall a lot farther than they do. Now here comes Paddy and we'll take a swim before cutting up that tree. If Yowler the Bobcat or Old Man Coyote heard the crash of that tree they know just what it meant and may come over here to try to catch us at work cutting it. It isn't good sense to stay there after such a crash."

Hooker and his flock settled in the lower pond where his house was.

So all three entered the water and swam about for awhile and finally swam ashore on the other side of the pond. It was just as they left the water that they heard a sound that caused all three to listen. It was a faint, distant gabbling which grew louder as they listened.

"Honker the Goose and his flock!" exclaimed Paddy. "Did you ever hear such gabblers as they are? I wonder if they will stop here. I hope so."

Paddy's hope was fulfilled, for a little later Honker and his flock settled in the lower pond where his house was.

Chatham Youth Drowned in River

CHATHAM, Ont., May 9.—Gerald Cardinal, 19, was drowned and his chum, Leslie Fleming, 13, had a narrow escape from a similar fate late Saturday in a boat accident on the Thames River.

Reaching for a break-water as their fish-loaded boat drifted into the river and the boys were swept overboard by the strong current, Young Fleming was hauled from the water by his older brother Donald, who was nearby but before assistance could reach Cardinal he had disappeared.

FLOATING POWER

"NOBODY ELSE HAS IT!"

"That's why I urge you to take a Floating Power Ride," says Walter P. Chrysler.

MAKE no mistake about it. We've got something in Floating Power. Something new. Something sensational. Something that you must know about.

That's why I'm so anxious to have you take a Floating Power Ride this week.

Pick any one of these four cars you prefer—Plymouth, De Soto, Dodge or Chrysler. They all have Floating Power.

You won't find Floating Power in any other car, no matter what others may say or claim.

There's a world of difference in the smoothness, the driving ease, the riding qualities of a Floating Power car and the ordinary automobile.

Why, the miles just float away! They're the smoothest, the swiftest, the roomiest miles you've ever traveled.

Floating Power makes any car that hasn't got it out-of-date. Just take a Floating Power Ride this week and see.

Don't confuse Floating Power with Free Wheeling or any other transmission feature. Our four Floating Power cars have Free Wheeling, too, along with Easy-Shift, Silent-Second Transmission and Automatic Clutch.

Floating Power is the BIG thing in automobile development today. And it's exclusive to Plymouth, De Soto, Dodge and Chrysler cars.

In no other car will you find the engine mounted as in these four cars. Mounted at only two points so that the engine absorbs its own vibration. Mounted in such a way that not the slightest power tremor can reach the frame or body.

I urge you to learn what Floating Power is. To find out what it does. I can't tell you in words. But I can invite you to take a Floating Power Ride. And I do.

Tune in on CHRYSLER MOTORS RADIO PROGRAM "Ziegfeld Radio Show" personally conducted by Flo Ziegfeld — Columbia Network every Sunday evening.

"MR. CHRYSLER is right when he says that any car without Floating Power is out-of-date. You'll say so yourself after you've taken a Floating Power Ride. With all our dealers, I invite you to do so this week."

Albert LeBrun Elected President of French Republic by Large Majority

LeBrun Succeeds Paul Doumer as President Given Large Majority

Paul Faure Receives But One Hundred and Fourteen Votes

LE BRUN'S CAREER

Much Uneasiness in French Capitol During Day

Versailles, May 10 (AP)—Albert LeBrun, the favorite son of the Department of Meurthe and Moselle was elected fourteenth president of France today by an overwhelming majority to succeed the assassinated Paul Doumer.

M. LeBrun received 633 votes out of a total of 767 cast.

Paul Faure, prominent Socialist leader, got 114 votes; 13 ballots were cast for former Premier Paul Painleve and 3 went to Marcel Cachin, Socialist. 36 of the legislators who attended the joint senate and chamber session at which the President was elected expressed no choice.

Applause Greets Le Brun.

Great applause greeted the announcement of the result read by Gerlot, a Communist, added to the uproar by shouting, "Down with war!"

All the members of the cabinet went immediately to one of the great halls in the historic palace of Louis XIV, where they awaited the new President.

Premier Andre Tardieu congratulated him and turned over the executive powers which he had been discharged to hear head of state since the assassination of M. Doumer.

After that ceremony was over M. Tardieu said that he would receive the press this evening — apparently for the purpose of announcing that he had presented his government's resignation to the new President.

In the interest of harmony there was virtually no opposition to the veteran statesman whose election as President of the Senate had put him in line for the presidency of the nation.

At Bier of Slain.

After the brief ceremony of investiture, M. LeBrun's first act was to start for Elysee Palace to pay his respects at the bier of his slain predecessor.

Then he was to go to the tomb of the unknown soldiers and later in the day to the Luxembourg Palace to receive the diplomatic corps and the officials of the nation when they make their calls of congratulation.

Although there was a great spirit of harmony when the senate and chamber of deputies of deputies assembled here to elect M. Doumer's successor, there also was considerable nervousness.

Much Uneasiness.

This was manifested in wholly baseless reports to the effect that Senator Joseph Paul-Boncour and Jean Chiappe, prefect of the Paris police, were dead — M. Paul Boncour through assassination and the police prefect through suicide.

Police officials promptly issued a denial of the reports about M. Chiappe and Senator Paul-Boncour established the fact that he was unharmed by appearing on the tribune at the joint meeting of the senate and chamber.

It was exactly 4.38 p.m. (10.38 a.m. E. S. T.) when the official declaration of the presidential voting was announced.

WHIPPET DOG WANTS OWNER

It was found on Station Street Monday afternoon by Pound Keeper Norris and it was without collar or tag to show to whom it belonged and was placed in the "keep." The owner must claim the dog before 12 noon or will be destroyed or placed in a home, if one can be found.

Career of New French President

(By Canadian and Associated Press)

Albert Francois Le Brun comes from the Department of Meurthe and Moselle, which often has had a favorite son in the running for the office of President of the Republic.

If M. Le Brun were from the south of France, like former President Gaston Doumergue, he would probably have had much less chance of occupying the President's seat in the Elysee Palace. But his election brought him into the forefront of presidential candidates.

M. Le Brun is an old friend of Premier Herriot, former Premier President and former Premier, statesman and financial expert and probably the greatest public figure remaining in France. During Le Brun's thirty years in politics, Herriot and Le Brun have been Poincare's choice, and he was Poincare's choice for the Presidency.

Elected in 1906.

Since 1906, when he was first elected to the Chamber of Deputies, M. Le Brun has had an active political career. His greatest achievement has been his leadership of the sinking fund commission. Poincare called Le Brun at the head of the commission, and that institution for reducing the national debt was Poincare's favorite child.

Inflation is probably chiefly responsible for the fact that M. Le Brun never was President of the general council of Meurthe-Moselle.

But Le Brun Is Not Merely a Shadow

But Le Brun is not merely a shadow of the great Poincare. He was three times minister of colonies, a post in the French ministry long regarded as a graveyard for political careers. He was minister of colonies in 1911, 1912 and 1913. Later, in 1913 he was minister of war, but gave way to Alexandre Millerand. Le Brun was appointed minister of blockade in 1927 and in 1929 became minister for the liberated regions.

In 1921 Le Brun was elected to the senate and for the past decade has been an active member of the French chamber of foreign affairs. Recently known as the Group Union Republicaine. In particular he was ward dog of the sinking fund, he has earned a reputation for carefulness and probity which have himself could hardly have surpassed.

LAND CONTACT BEING MADE

Negotiators For Baby Has Abandoned Sea Going Trips

Norfolk, Va., May 10—The latest phase in the search for aviator Hughes Cutlis, principal Norfolk negotiator in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, today was another angle of mystery in the secret negotiations which have interested critics here to bring about the return of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, jr.

The Norfolk boat builder presumably left the naval base with his friend Gaston Means, convicted swindler, to crack naval pilot, on another contact flight, but Mrs. Means said the trip have been kept in absolute secrecy. The continued presence of Mr. Curtis and Lieut. Richard following the abandonment of cruises to see aboard the yacht Nanrico led to the belief that the negotiator left for the Bahamas Monday for a go-between for the kidnappers.

Although Unconfirmed has been given out concerning the search made repeatedly during the last two weeks, it was considered that some further difficulty in the negotiations had forced Mr. Curtis to seek another "land contact."

AUDITOR UPON STAND BEFORE HYDRO PROBE

STUDY VOUCHERS

Question of Payment of Money to Motorcar Company

TORONTO, May 10.—By the Canadian Press—Efforts to trace the $120,000 in Dominion of Canada bonds which John Aird, jr., received from the Beauharnois Power Corporation ostensibly for the Conservative Party in Ontario, occupied the attention of the Royal Commission into Hydro power this afternoon.

A. B. Shepperd, an accountant employed by the Commission to audit Mr. Aird's books was on the witness stand for the greater part of the time the parliamentary commission investigated Beauharnois affairs. It was disclosed Mr. Aird has used $12,000 of the bonds.

A long list of cheques for business and other purposes had been compiled by Shepperd, one of which was for $3,000 and was payable to a motor car company. This was on Dec. 19, 1930, the day Aird received the money from the Beauharnois Power Corporation.

Bought a Car is Comment

"Bought a car two days he got the money," commented Mr. Justice J. P. Orde, royal commissioner amid laughter.

A. G Slaght, K.C., independent counsel, devoted considerable time to the coupons attached to the bonds seeking to discover by whom they had been cashed. To the witness, he pointed out the bonds, but "to whom the owner" would have paid $8,800 in interest. The interest was due June 1 and December 1.

No Deposit Slips

Shepperd declared there were no deposit slips showing these coupons on any of the bonds, and he could not definitely say who had cashed the coupons. Only inquiries had been made at the insistence of the counsel at Ottawa to find whether Aird or someone else had cashed the coupons, he said.

E. E. Millard, former partner with Aird during the negotiations for the Beauharnois power deal was the next witness and was still on the stand when the enquiry adjourned for lunch.

Mr. Millard had a repetition of that given on the first day of the enquiry and covered efforts to secure co-operation with the proposition" to the Hydro Electric Power Commission. The offer was one of $50,000 to Aird by the Hydro Chief, Shepperd told the Chief Justice of the investigation.

In a statement of his own personal opinion regarding the transaction, he declared "garbled" reports had got to the public "especially in the public mind "I make no charge of anything," he said, but further the project. He believed in it, and everything was fair and above board," he said.

STUDY BIRTH CONTROL FROM ALL ANGLES

After Resolution Presented Many Physicians Open Discussion

CLOSED FOR WHILE

May Appoint Commission to Investigate All Phases

New Orleans, May 10—A proposal to consider making birth control a recognized, legal medical practice was taken up by the American Medical Association.

The proposal was presented to the opening session of the House of Delegates, official legislative body of the organization.

Immediately so many physicians jumped up to discuss the subject that all action was postponed until Tuesday afternoon. Further arguments and voting will be held in an executive session, open only to physicians.

The birth control resolution was presented by J. P. Brook, M.D., of Grandville, Mich. Its text was not made public but a gist was given to the press.

He proposed appointment of a committee to spend one year studying all phases of birth control and to recommend at the next annual meeting of the association whether the practice ought to be incorporated in recognized medicine.

It was suggested that the committee study the effects of birth control practices upon maternal health, economic prosperity of families, and upon the happiness of married couples.

EARLY CROPS ARE RETARDED

Inclement Weather Has Delayed Seeding Considerable.

Toronto, May 10 — Inclement weather during the past week has materially retarded spring seeding and the growth of early crops, according to the weekly crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture. Scarcity of feed and seed grain has been reported in various localities, notably from Glengarry and Stormont.

It is estimated 90 per cent of seeding has been completed in Bruce County, where in wheat crops expected to be above average. Prospects in Lister and in Frontenac county are reported much improved, and seeding almost set is very active.

Frozen conditions of sub-soil has not permitted much spring work in Prescott and Russell, while particularly slow growth and retarded temperature is noted in Prince Edward County. On the contrary many farmers have completed seeding in Kent, and are in a enthusiastic over fall wheat prospects.

INJURY FATAL TO ROBERT GREEN

He sustained a fractured skull, when he was thrown from his machine to the pavement. The young man was deservedly popular with all classes and well liked by his employers, the Canadian Department Stores, where he has been employed for some time.

He was also interested in church work being an active member of Holloway Street United Church. He was born in Springbrook nineteen years ago, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. Amos H. HEPBURN IS ASSAILED BY EX-ORGANIZER

J. G. Hothersall Addresses Meeting at City Hall

NEW ORGANIZATION

Rev. B. C. Eckhart Wants Churches to Lead Way

Some sixty people attended a meeting in the City Hall last night when addresses and advertisements appearing in a few of the store windows about town. The Rev. B. C. Eckhart, of the Church of Christ Disciples of London, and J. G. Hothersall, of the Canadian Legion of the British Service Association, were the speakers, and it was at the instigation of Mr. Hothersall that the meeting was held. Harold Spafford of this city, acted as chairman.

Has Church Spineless

The Rev. Mr. Eckhart was the first speaker. He declared that unemployment were linked with the indifferent attitude, he alleged, the churches of today were taking to-day's problems seriously as they used to. They were not carrying out the teachings of Christ, he declared. "The spirit of Jesus Christ," the speaker said, "had been lost by the churches. They must be a readjustment there, not by revolution, what was needed was restoration. No red flag was needed, but he heard-proof, men should get together on a common service basis and back to the Man on the Cross. Jesus Christ had been the great brains of the world and intellectual masters had been summoned to conferences to solve the ills and difficulties of the whole world today, but their efforts had been fruitless. The Jesus-bound world was turning to the churches for guidance, but those institutions were powerless of little avail, but requiring succor and help. There was in them nothing to fellowship, no love, no brotherhood. Before Christ Richard Hothersall, an inspirational address, in threes and fours, parts of the audience started leaving the hall.

Aim of New Organization

J. G. Hothersall, the one time high in the ranks of the Ku Klux Klan, briefly explained the aims of the new organization with the Klan. "Our aim and object is to unite the British and Protestant forces of the world and perhaps the methods of the organization had been wrong. Today he wanted men and women of all creeds, nationalities, and race to join with the new association, which had for its object true brotherhood, the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man.

Few such representatives today were worth anything in parliament or legislatures. There was nothing "red" in the proposed association to-day but the fight of the British constitutional methods, was the aim of the new body. Communism and Bolshevism were not wanted in Canada. He had not met Russians in Russia where they saw birth. In this time of depression let all unite, he declared, and Canada should not do away with religious and racial differences.

For Country's Best

There was room for Roman Catholics and Protestants joining the organization. It was time to sweep away religious and racial hatred in the political and public life of today. Men like Premier Hepburn, Premier Dunning, Agnes MacPhail, Premier Bracken, Premier Brownlee, Premier Bennett, people who were unsentainingly striving to give their best for the country, were to be admired.

Hepburn Assailed

Turning to Premier Liberal leader, Mitchell F. Hepburn, whom he described as a Tammany Hall Liberal party, he berated him as the biggest double-crosser in the province. Mr. Hothersall's attempt to ward "Mitch" Hepburn arose he said, when he was told that he had be declared, the Ku Klux Klan for political purposes and then had forsaken them when he had attained his ends. He had received the thanks of the Klan on the floor of the House at Ottawa. Hepburn had been elected by the votes of the Kleagle of the white-robed brethren of Orange Lodge, Sask. "If Hepburn is now ashamed of the support he had from the Klan, let him say so." "Let him repudiate the Klan and cut himself off from us. But let him not attempt to make a secret of his relations with the Klan-sponsored leader." "Let him not attempt to eliminate the facts by attacking a leader of the organization."

Butcher Knife Temporarily Saves Patient but Heart Fails

Cleveland, O., May 10—Although a surgeon's emergency operation with a butcher knife temporarily saved the life of Walter W. Precker, 28, the patient died last night from a heart attack induced by shock.

Dr. L. W. Pott found Precker unconscious when he arrived at the latter's home. Seeing that Precker's throat had been cut from three the combined effects of a child-hood throat operation and the attack of tonsilitis, the doctor acted quickly.

His surgical instruments were not available, so the doctor resorted to the family's butcher knife, using it to open the patient's trachea, just below the voice box, so air could reach his lungs.

The department rescue squad aided by administering oxygen with an improvised mask devised in Precker's throat, and the man had a considerable improvement when his heart stopped from the shock.

McGibbon Says No Check Upon C.N.R. Expenditure Inquiry Resumed Today

Information Brought By McGibbon Who Asks For More Authority

EULER AMENDMENT

Committee Calls For Expense Account of C. N. R. Directors in 1930

Ottawa, May 10 (By The Canadian Press).— In a somewhat milder temper, but with sporadic flashes that indicated the smoldering fires beneath the apparently tranquil surface, the House of Commons Committee on Railways and Shipping resumed its enquiry today into the expense accounts of the officials of the Canadian National Railways.

Investigation At Montreal.

No check of any kind restrained these representatives of the C.N.R. when they visited Montreal, it was brought out in the testimony of Mr. Peter McGibbon (Cons., Muskoka). The situation was similar to that which said, urging that "honesty and open dealing" would weigh more with the taxpayers than any other method of dealing.

Mr. McGibbon and F. R. Macmillan (Cons., Saskatoon), had been included in a sub-committee which had gone to Montreal to investigate the officials' expense accounts, but no other member was Hon. W. D. Euler (Lib., Waterloo North), who had been named in his absence from the committee. Pursuant to their enquiries, Dr. McGibbon returned with considerable information which had been compiled in a memorandum presented to the committee. He had also demanded the committee's approval of a motion authorizing him to secure further data.

Euler Amendment Loses.

Protesting that such procedure was contrary to public interest and that much of what the committee had done was tending to destroy confidence in the officials of the railways, Mr. Euler moved an amendment that the information secured by Mr. McGibbon be referred to the C.N.R. directors for necessary action. This amendment was defeated on a vote by 8-5 and Dr. McGibbon's motion was carried by the same vote. Before the matter was put to the investigation, the committee called for the expense account of the C.P.R. for the year 1930.

"Mr. Euler can take any stand he wishes, but I am not going to dictate the stand I am to take in the matter. I am responsible to the country," said Dr. McGibbon. He added that inspection of the C.P.R. expense accounts had taken place since that matter had been ventilated before the committee last year.

"We went down to Montreal and there was practically no check on the higher officials," Dr. McGibbon said.

1930 Account.

R. B. Hanson recalled that 1930 accounts contained items of $2,000,- 000 approximately for the travelling expenses of directors and officials. In 1931 this gross had been reduced $500,000, with the payment of a further reduction of $750,- 000 this year. Effect reductions and economies in the whole system of the railway.

In view of that, Mr. Hanson suggested that the matter be left to the executive committee of the board of directors so that the whole item of expenditures may be placed on a proper footing.

"I say without hesitation there were some startling things disclosed," the former remarked in the enquiry in Montreal. He had the right to know what was being done and he refused to surrender that right.

RIOTS BREAK OUT AGAIN IN NEW ZEALAND

Wellington, New Zealand, May 10 (C. P. Cable)—A recurrence of disorders this evening resulted in the smashing of 150 plate-glass windows in Wellington by a mob of 50 hoodlums who detached themselves from a big parade of workers employed more outside the parliament buildings.

The police arrested many of the rioters and quickly had the situation under control.

To Get Information.

"You will go down there to get the information," he said. "Do you want it? This committee is not going to be smothering it. The people want a frank, free statement of the affairs of this railway. They were never as much roused over it as they are now in these matters. We got this information for the committee and the committee can decide what they want to do with it. If this thing had been wound up and closed down years ago this country would have been saved a lot of money. The railways at the top have been allowed to run wild," declared Dr. McGibbon. "The system in the past has been simply awful."

Honesty and open dealing with the facts would go further with the public than anything else. If the committee did not want the information then it would have to stand the consequence of the taxpayers of the country.

Scheduled Fight Now Postponed

Cleveland, O., May 10—The scheduled fight tonight between Mickey Walker, who hopes to become the heavyweight champion and Johnny Risko was indefinitely postponed today.

Walker said a bevy of boils would make it impossible for him to fight at present, but that he would be glad to meet Risko later.

STRESS FOREIGN TRADE.

London, May 10 (CP)—The necessity of developing Empire trade was stressed by Sir Halford Mackinder at the Imperial Economic Conference, which would increase Empire trade, stressing that Britain's trade with foreign nations remains at vital importance and must be urged, this time by the Manchester Chamber of Commerce.

A large number of interested participants took advantage of the evening's entertainment and an enjoyable evening was voted by all present. The committee in charge were highly indebted to those donating the special prizes.

JUNIOR FARMERS GET THREE COLLIES

The police dog and puppie which have been at the city 'dog keep' for some days were destroyed as they were not claimed by the owner nor could a home be found for them.

Three collie dogs were taken from the 'keep' last week by farmers.

WORK ON CITADEL IS COMMENCED

Work on the re-construction of the new front of the Salvation Army barracks was commenced early this morning. Barricades were erected to obstruct pedestrians from walking under the scaffold, where the work is going on. Light is of a soldier was misrepresentation. While two or three might have been inconvenienced by the articles, the printed statement on the back was ingenious drawn, no thought to deceive the public. This was. The sale of the article is described as "Citadel of modern appearance and structure. Considerable time and expense is to be levied in the work.

SMASHING OF FOUR WEEKS' RECORD

The floor of the Capitol Theatre took no part in the distribution of Dinnerware until last night when half way through the first performance the quietness was broken by the falling of a saucer. The saucer was broken but, not refusing to be lacked, persuaded another saucer to follow suit very soon afterwards.

Before the evening was through no less than four broken dishes were left for the "sweeper-up."

INSPECTOR MAKES ROUND OF GARAGES

A city check-up was this week being undertaken by a Provincial inspector of garages to make sure that all repair garages and others were observing the letter of the law as applied to licenses. So far there has been no complaints and all garage owners have accepted the tax without question. They realize that it is for their own protection and that the tax will help to eliminate the smaller unlicensed garages which carry on illegitimate business.

NEW SURFACE ON ALBION STREET

Department of Public Works' employees were busy covering despite the rain. A number of men were employed on West Dundas street, this morning levelling off the road and back-filling the location of the spare water main trench. A few more were busy cleaning out the sediment from numerous catchbasins all over the city and a small number were employed at the city garage.

The most work however, was being done on Albion street, where the road is completely being made over and rebuilt. The slant roller was busy scarifying the road and the men were following up pulling the initial crown on the grade. This will be filled in with crushed stone and rolled by the roller when in place.

WEATHER CLOUDY AND DISAGREEABLE

Due to the slight rain, which fell early this morning, the temperatures did not rise to the usual heights attained on May 10. Yesterday's registrations were 64 high and 44 low. Today, however, the mercury has dropped to 48 during the night and had soared but 56 at 8.30 this morning. Registration of ice daily rain'all had been registered all noon.

"TO AID SOLDIERS" TWO ARE CONVICTED

CHATHAM, May 10. — Francis Decaire, 24, and Joseph Wesley, 20, of Trenton, were convicted by Magistrate Cook on the police court charge of false representation in connection with the sale of an article "for the benefit of war veterans and returned soldiers." Remanding the prisoners to jail for a week for sentence, Magistrate Arnold declared that for the first time in a charge with a figure of a soldier was misrepresentation. While two or three might have been inconvenienced by the articles, the printed statement on the back was ingenious drawn, no thought to deceive the public. This was. The sale of the article is described as "Citadel of modern appearance and structure. Considerable time and expense is to be levied in the work.

FLAG HALF MAST FOR PAUL DOUMER

Many residents of the city were today and yesterday wondering why the flag is being half staff on the Armouries. Sunday Lt.-Col. E. O. Keagle received a telegram from the Department of National Defence ordering the National emblem to be flown thus, but no communication gave no reason. Presumably this is out of respect to the late president of France, who died Saturday afternoon last, the result of assassin's bullets.

FLOODED STATE WITHIN DUGOUT

Once more this season an emergency call was sent in to the department of public works for aid in relieving flood conditions in the basement of the dug-out. This morning an overflow from the storm drain which in dry times drains the cellar, had backed up the water, inundating it to the depth of a depth of several inches. Department of public works employees after some difficulty, with the aid of a hose line run from a nearby hydrant, had drained the water off it off. The trouble has been caused by the shallow grade at which the drain was originally put in. With recurrent rains water collects in the drain and finds it way into the cellar which is almost level with the depth of the drain.

STOLEN GOODS ARE RECOVERED

BROCKVILLE, May 10.—At Kingston and Belleville on Saturday Chief Constable John Brown and Allan A. Birks succeeded in recovering most of the goods which were stolen from the Birks' dry-cleaning plant in Abbott street during the night of April 15 and May 2. The Kingston police arrested L. Sexsmith, Belleville; Stanley Martin and Donald Smith of Kingston, who were brought here charted with the robberies along with E. Hawkins, who is in remand in connection with the cases. Smith and Hawkins are believed implicated in the first robbery while the other two men are held as responsible for the second offence. On Saturday night they were remanded to the counties jail to await their preliminary hearing.

Shortly after he was taken with a severe heart attack and although his family physician was immediately in attendance Mr. Clapp never rallied and about 7 p.m. passed down the great divide.

BEEKEEPERS ENCOURAGED

Improved Outlook Says Mr. B. Lott, Elected Director

Mr. B. O. Lott, the veteran beekeeper of Hastings County, has just returned from Toronto where he attended a director of the Ontario Honey Producers' Co-operative Company Ltd. for is very enthusiastic over the outlook for the sale of honey in the Old Country since the British Government gave Canada a preference of ten per cent. this along with the adverse exchange with the United States gives Canada a great advantage in the English market. The Co-operative have just received an order for one thousand, sixty pound cases for Glasgow, Scotland, at forty-six shilling and six pence per 112 pounds. Formerly the best offer was forty shillings per cwt. "This certainly is more encouraging for the honey producers."

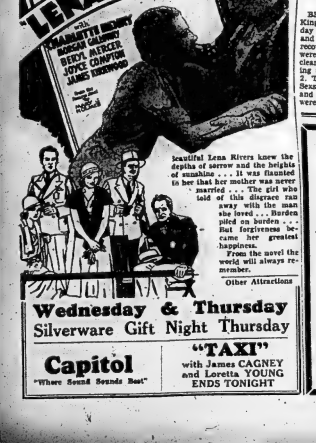
GALA OPENING FOR GOLF CLUB

Country Club Making Preparations to Swat Depression

The directors of the Country Club met last night and made arrangements for the official opening of the golfing season on May 24th. In spite of "Depression" the treasurer, Mr. Hubert Jones, reported that a larger amount of fees had been paid than at this time last year. A number of concessions have been made to the club this year, one of is now possible to enjoy all the privileges of the club, tennis, sailing, swimming and social entertainments (except golf) for a fee of $15.00, for either ladies or gentlemen. Concessions have also been made to officers of the force, bank clerks, Y's Club, Sea Scouts Club, and a great many applications have been received for membership from these sources.

The tennis section will shortly be organized under proper leadership and the courts refreshed, which will again make them equal to anything in the province. The sailing section will have members of the Sea Scouts' on hand to rig up the boats and man them if necessary Wednesdays and Saturdays, and a busy season is anticipated, especially amongst the younger set.

Non golfing members will be allowed to try their hand at golf six during the season, in order to encourage new players into action. Dr. Sholie, chairman of greens, announced that the greens and fairways, are now in excellent condition, no temporary greens being necessary. The club steward and Mrs. Pennington are now in residence and ready to serve meals to all comers. Mr. William Little, one of the best known golf professionals and teachers in Ontario, is now ready to give lessons, which were so much appreciated last year. He is arranging for a big day of golf on the 24th and all members and prospective members should get in touch with him before that date. Dinner will be served on the 24th to the golfers and any others at 7.30 p.m. and at 9 p.m. the orchestra will be in attendance for a dance, for the golfers, tennis and yachting enthusiasts and the young people. Further details of this will be advertised in the local press, but the dance will be for the benefit of their friends.



There will be more social activities this year including weekly dances and weekly bridge tournaments, besides the usual Wednesday teas. The intention of the directors is to do everything possible towards promoting the pleasure and comfort of the membership at the minimum of cost.

Delegates Appointed

The regular meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held last evening in the league room of the Separate School, Mrs. Frank Fitzpatrick, presiding. Reports for the month were presented and showed that the league members had been very busy during the month. The principal event of the tea at Queen Quinte proved the affair unusually successful financially as well as socially.

At this meeting of the league delegates were appointed to the annual convention meeting of the association which is being held in Toronto in June. The president, Mrs. Fitzpatrick, and Miss H. Lynch were selected to represent the local sub-division with Mrs. F. S. Anderson and Miss Anna Hurley as alternates. During the evening Miss Anna Lafferty delighted the members with readings.

MARK 40TH YEAR OF ORGANIZATION

Ivanhoe W. I. Members at Home to Neighboring Branches

Madoc, May 10 By Mail—Tuesday, May 3rd, was a gala day for Ivanhoe when Bendall Women's Missionary Society of Ivanhoe invited all the neighboring societies to a birthday party to celebrate their 40th anniversary of the organization. Soon after two o'clock arrivals were greeted, and visiting members were coming from North, South, East and West. Promptly at half past, two, when most of the visitors had arrived and been greeted by President and friends, a pleasing was opened by "O God of Bethel by Whose Hand," Scripture reading of the Psalm of Praise and Prayer offered by Rev. Mr. Cornelius, the Pastor. Mrs. Mills, the Secretary for many years, then gave a brief, but comprehensive history of the W.M.S. of Bendall church. Upon the platform were gathered with the President of Bendall, Mrs. Jno. Clements, Mrs. (Rev.) Lovelace, Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Dafoe, President of Madoc District, and Mrs. Mills. Decorating the pulpit and platform were beautiful flowers of each, one of which instantly caught the eye, a showy Hydrangea, full of bloom and in a decorative pedestal, whose purpose we were to learn later.

Mrs. Mills then gave a resume of the W.M.S. and something of what it has done and at times to keep the society growing and flourishing. The President, Mrs. Mike Harvey, and following on through the years, Mrs. (Rev.) D. Harris, Mrs. (Rev.) Weatherill, Mrs. Timmerman, Mrs. (Rev.) Wilkinson, Mrs. Grier, Mrs. (Rev.) Jno. Wood, Mrs. Jno. Fleming, Mrs. (Rev.) Jas. Frederick, Mrs. Jno. Wood, Miss Tillie Wood, Mrs. Baldwin Reid, Mrs. Arthur Wood, and the present President, Mrs. Jno. Clements. Of these five have passed Good-night here, and Good morning up yonder; Miss Harvey, Mrs. Timmerman, Mrs. Jno. Wood, Mrs. Jno. Fleming, and Miss Tillie Wood.

Chairs officers of last year, so ably were Mrs. (Rev.) Lobb, Miss Harvey, Mrs. Frederick Alderman, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. Sine, Miss Carscallen, Mrs. Robt. Harvey and Mrs. Timmerman.

Bringing the history down to the present, Mrs. Mills told of the endeavor of the society to keep going, though small in numbers and a little of the present work.

When Mrs. Mills sat down, Mrs. Wood rose and gracefully presented her with the beautiful bouquet of which was now placed on the table before her, as a token of the appreciation of the members for her faithful and loyal work for the good of the society. Mrs. Mills endeavored to reply through tears and there was another cry in the room.

A general programme was now introduced, and Mrs. Sweet, President of St. Thomas' Anglican Church gave a paper of real inspiration and help on "Courage." Stating the work of all the women's societies to consist of praying, learning, working and giving, she showed how these must be interwoven by the red thread of courage, as well as the work done on distant mission fields, and closed with an earnest call to do all "For His Sake."

Fuller Presbyterian Church, gave a pathetic and appealing recitation "Tommy's Prayer." A beautiful solo was supplied by West Huntingdon United Church, "God's Hand Is Everywhere," From Fuller United Church came the thrilling little story of "Nellie's Gift, or Two Mites, (three).

Mrs. (Rev.) Dafoe of Madoc, representing the Madoc District, reviewed, that through illness of two members, the quartette of Trinity W.M.S. were unable to give their number, but would give it first night after sixth of Belleville Memorial. A most interesting solo was listened to, dealing as it did with foundations, resolutions, press notices, Kingdom of God movement, and the President's address, closing Mrs. Dafoe urged her hearers to be stepping stones for others, not stumbling blocks, but stepping stones to more fruitful lives on "Happiness," dwelling tenderly on the closing lines.

"Take what God Gives, O friends of mine,
And build your happiness today."

After all joining in singing "Jesus Saves," St. Adrew's Presbyterian Church gave a reading "A Cent a Day," telling how the giving of one cent to each of 63 objectives by a poor working woman resulted in an offering of one thousand and sixty-three dollars and sixty-three cents.

Belinda Ladies' Aid gave a duet "Pilot Me, O Gracious Saviour," after which Moira W.M.S. gave "A Reading from Church," quite dramatically. Several of the "Old Girls" were present and Mrs. Reardon of Belleville, spoke for them voicing the heartfelt gladness of each at being "Home" once more, and Mrs. Lovelace replied in the address of appreciation wished they could be home to stay. Mr. Lovelace ventured to say that one number had been not good, better, but best all in the superlative degree, "best," and all most inspiring.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the Beulah ladies by Mrs. (Rev.) O. W. Rivers of Madoc, for this most enjoyable birthdayparty, and was seconded by Mrs. P. Gerald of Belleville all joining heartily in rendering their appreciation of the splendid program and warm welcome given.

A dainty lunch was served by the ladies and a birthday cake with 40 lighted candles graced the table and all was treated to a piece of cake after the candles were extinguished.

All joied in wishg the society "Many happy returns of the day," as the good-byes were said.

I Hope this, in the future we shall be ready to spend on the enterprises of peace what the financial maxims of the past would only allow us to spend on the devastations of war.—J. M. Keynes.

Curling Club and Fair Board Ask Council to Take Over the Property

Request That Building Be Moved to Fair Grounds Near Bowling Greens

BUILDING NEEDED

Warden Asks That Suburban Area Commission Take Over Street

Two delegations, one from the Belleville Curling Club and the Belleville Fair Board, also Warden R. M. Mitchell, appeared before the council, last night, with matters for their consideration. In each case, Mayor Tice appointed a committee to investigate the subjects and to report to the next meeting of the council for their consideration. The Curling Club requested that the city take over its property on George street and move it to the fair grounds for the use of the Fair Board, the Curling club to use the use of the building during the winter months for a rental. Warden Mitchell requested that the city consider the placing of College St. from Sidney Street to the Cannifton Road and a piece of road from the Swift Canadian plant, to the north and yard entrance as a county road the same to be later turned over to the Suburban Area Road Commission, he advancing the argument, that he felt that the Suburban Area Council would not agree to spend any money on the building of this road this year due to the depression but which road will have to have some repairing, due to the fact that using a certain part of that road.

Committee Named

At the concusion of the presentation of these two matters, Mayor Tice appointed a committee composed of Alderman Donahue, Alderman Bowerman and Deputy Imlah to meet the Curlers in their matter and a committee composed of Alderman Bell, Donahue and Sprackett to meet the Fair Board, Suburban Commissioner and both committees to report back to the council. J. B. Lewis, president of the Curling Club spoke first on the subject stating that last year the Bowling Club was moved to the Fair Ground, and that the city had a valuable piece of property. "The matter has been discussed with the fair board," said Mr. Dewar and "they appointed Charles J. Symons and Ex-Alderman Ketcheson to act in conjunction with the Curlers to present the case. The fair board is anxious to get the building on the fair grounds for an auto exhibit building as every year, tents had to be rented with a considerable outlay." The speaker told the council that the Curling Club was behind $1222.00 with their taxes at the curlers had not had any new blood in the club for some years and the older curlers were fast giving up the game and it could not be run on a profit basis. He stated that they had a splendid building 175 feet by 82 feet and with the club rooms the size on eff a building 156 feet by 62 feet. The dining room upstairs over the club rooms was now 30 feet 8 inches by 18 feet 6 inches, but this could be enlarged with a small alteration. The club rooms would be fitted for the general offices of the fair board, while the dining room could be used to advantage. He explained to the council the lot was 80 feet by 200 feet, and the sale would more than take care of the taxes. "There is also a mortgage of $1,800, while the cost of moving is figured at $4,000. A sum of $400 could be realized from the auto exhibitors each year, the dining room could be rented for $150.00 a season, while the Curling Club could pay $150.00 a year rent. This would more than take care of the carrying charges and would give back to the city each year, net the fair realized," said the speaker.

C. J. Symons representing the fair board stated the building was needed as the board was in need of a dining room as a feature. "The Parks Board have arranged a site for the building," said the speaker, and "the estimate of rentals to be derived from it as a conservative figure and the acquisition of the building on the grounds would be a distinct benefit not only to the board but to the citizens". Ex-Mayor George A. Reid stated all were lovers of good sport and if the building was moved three of the major sports of the city would be centred at the fair grounds. He explained the matter was to be moved down and a certain membership could be had and he appreciated the trying times but it would be an advantage to have the building moved. "If the building is sold under the hammer it will not realize one half of the indebtedness and the city would be out money", said Mr. Reid. Deputy Reeve Ellis Reid replied. Ex-Mayor Reid explained, that the city would save in direct taxation something like $9,000.00, which was an excellent showing to present to Kingston, whose share for relief this year will be $116,00.00. He asked the council to consider the request carefully before arriving at a conclusion.

Although Warden R. M. Mitchell was present in another interest, he being president of the Belleville Agricultural Society, spoke in favor of the request. Mayor Tice explained that some members were conversant with the matter, as it has been discussed in previous councils but it was a new subject to many of the members. He told the committees the council would consider the proposition after a report had been received from a committee he would name.

First a County Road

In explaining about the Suburban Area Road, Warden Mitchell explained to the members if the council would consider the matter of taking over college street the protection of road would first have to be taken over as a county road and then passed on to the Suburban Commission. The Government pays fifty per cent. of the cost of all Suburban roads, while the township and the city each contribute 25 per cent. Warden Mitchell held the opinion he did not believe the government would allow the road to go into the Suburban Commission's hands unless a little more road was taken in with College street and he suggested the piece from the Swift Canadian plant to the east end yard crossing a distance of nearly a mile. The Warden explained, if College street should be oiled this year that he believed his township council would strenuously object to any expenditure. The committee appointed by the Mayor will meet Alderman Donahue sooner and then bring in a report to the council.

The matter was appeared before the council asking why he had been taken off the road, after holding his position and the Mayor stated he would investigate the matter at once but in the meantime ordered the young man to go to his position on the roads until further notification. Alderman William Donahue speaking to a delegation stated, respecting the oiling of streets to which petitioners would be considered against, stated that he thought the residents should be allowed to the council and talk the matter over. "If streets are allowed to go down, they lose the value and this comes as direct taxation, while oiled streets would still keep the road in good repair and add to the life," said the Alderman. The council considered the suggestion a good one. There being no further business the council adjourned.

LONDON POLICE NOT SATISFIED

Too Many Military and Civil Servants Appointed to High Places

London, May 10 (AP)—The Daily Express gave prominence today to an account of alleged discontent and unrest in all ranks of London's Metropolitan Police Force, growing out of the methods introduced by Lord Trenchard, the new high commissioner who succeeded Lord Byng, former Governor General of Canada, last fall.

The policemen, The Express said, "lost heart and became disconcerted" over Lord Trenchard's changes in the organization. Among these that too many military and civil servants were appointed to high places instead of experienced police officers.

Captain Lancaster Indicted For Murder

Miami, Fla., May 10—Captain W. N. Lancaster, former British army aviator, has been indicted for first degree murder in the strange shooting of Haden Clarke, fiance of his former fiancee, Mrs. Jessie Keith-Miller, Australian aviatrix.

The true bill against Lancaster was returned by the Dade County Grand Jury yesterday, a week after his arrest on a murder warrant and Judge H. P. Atkinson ordered the prisoner held without bail for trial at Circuit Court opening today.

Lancaster and Mrs. Keith-Miller both deigned Clarke suicided.

Curtain Lecture

Lyons, France, May 10. — The 1,600 inhabitants of the Town of St. Genisur-Guires and near-by villages were fleeing down the mountainside last night from several huge landslides.

Loosened by heavy rains, about 7,500,000 cubic feet of saturated earth threatened to cover the town which is thirty miles east of Lyons and twenty miles west of Chambery in Savoie Province.

Three houses and 1,000 trees were destroyed by landslides in and near the town today, and seven more houses were in immediate danger of destruction.

Reports at Chambery said the farmers were taking their families down into the Guiers Valley, leaving all their household goods and their cattle behind them.

Meanwhile, twenty-four persons of the fifty-one tenants of two buildings which were wrecked by landslides on the outskirts of Lyons yesterday were still missing and presumably buried in the debris.

Volunteers, police, soldiers and firemen trekked artillery on the hill behind the two houses, and fired more than 200 shots into the rain-soaked soil. They were trying to jar loose further possible slides to remove the danger to rescuers beneath.

Little hope was held for survival of the twenty-four persons still buried.

So far as was immediately ascertained, none of the residents of St. Genis-sur-Guiers were killed by yesterday's slides.

FLOATING POWER

"Others Make Claims

—but only Plymouth, De Soto, Dodge and Chrysler cars have Floating Power. So I invite you to ride and see for yourself," says Walter P. Chrysler.

RIGHT HERE and now, I challenge the maker of any car to equal the smoothness and riding ease of Floating Power.

I don't care what competition may say or claim, what I demand is proof. The sort of convincing proof that we are giving thousands in Canada this week in these Floating Power Rides.

If you haven't taken a Floating Power Ride I urge you to do so.

You'll come back from that Floating Power Ride a Floating Power enthusiast just as I am.

You won't find Floating Power or get Floating Power results in any other car. For Floating Power is exclusive to four cars—Plymouth, De Soto, Dodge and Chrysler.

Of course, if you went to France you'd find Floating Power there. Because just the other day, we licensed the largest and most progressive automobile manufacturer in Europe to use Floating Power. That's Andre Citroen.

Floating Power must be a revolutionary and desirable achievement or Andre Citroen wouldn't have adopted it. Wouldn't have paid for the right to use it.

It's something he wanted in the automobiles he builds. It's something you'll want in the car you drive after your Floating Power Ride.

Every Plymouth, DeSoto, Dodge and Chrysler dealer in Canada is ready to prove that there's no performance to equal Floating Power performance. That any car without Floating Power is out-of-date.

Make him prove it. See for yourself. Accept my invitation, and his, to a Floating Power Ride.

"From all over Canada come reports of thousands who have taken their Floating Power Ride this week. If you haven't shared their delightful experience, I urge you to do so, today. It will be a revelation to you."

You'll Never Forget Your Floating Power Ride! Take It This Week!

To ar up-to-date in motoring matters, you must know about Floating Power. Every body is talking about it. You will, too, after enjoying a Floating Power Ride.

For a surprise and a thrill, call on any Plymouth, DeSoto, Dodge or Chrysler dealer and tell him you want a Floating Power Ride. Or, if you prefer, ride with a friend who owns a Floating Power car. Let the car speak for itself.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street.

W. H. MORTON, Publisher.

NATIONALIZATION OF RADIO

The establishment of a nationally-owned radio broadcasting system which will serve the entire Dominion with a program calculated to serve the best interests of Canada in entertainment, in education, and in the fostering of national ideals and restrict the advertising to five per cent of the time is the recommendation of the special radio committee of three parties of the Federal Parliament. The report advocates public ownership over the private ownership system which while it has done good pioneer work yet does not fully satisfy the needs of Canada.

Should the House adopt the proposal as is expected, Canada will have a self-contained radio system over which she will have control such as she has not had. It will provide a National Radio Hall of Fame in the British Broadcasting System which has served Britain well. The nationalization will go farther than mere nationalization because it will make possible in a large measure an Empire chain of broadcasting which cannot but make for very great contribution to the life of the Empire and help to extend British influence throughout the world.

Good work has been done by the individual companies operating the private stations but much more effective work must be accomplished by the broadcasting chain which is advocated for Canada.

Negotiations have been under way to increase the number of channels allotted to Canada and it has been announced that the number has been increased by an accord reached with Washington. More channels may yet be allowed to Canada.

The influence of the decision of Canada will extend across the line and may ultimately lead to national control in the United States to a reduction of the number of channels required to satisfy that country. This would clear the ether of confusion of so many stations broadcasting.

The report of the committee probably represents the wishes of the people of Canada. It cannot but be pleased to find that advertising which has been encroaching and creeping in upon the entertainment will be limited by one twentieth of the time of each program.

AID THE RED CROSS

Red Cross is deserving of the support of every citizen and the local campaign to secure funds to carry on the work of the order is off to a good start.

In this age the Red Cross is alert to every need. It has housed and cared for 550 men at night in the Red Cross Hostel at the exhibition grounds, Toronto. This is its newest venture in the realm of service—a service which everyone is conversant with and which every one must endorse.

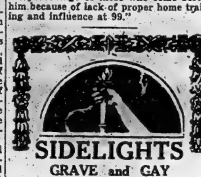
Many good deeds the order has done. It conducts home nursing demonstrations, it carries on outpost hospitals, it sends out visiting housekeepers to the homes of the sick, it works among settlers, it supplies milk and cod-liver oil to under-nourished children of pre-school age, provides beds for unemployed, it carries on a hospital for disabled veterans. Through its junior branches it is creating among children an 'ideal of service' which will make them better citizens, while they are alleviating the suffering of others from destitution through their aid. It sends help to disaster victims, works among crippled children, carries on soldiers' work, and extends cheer and health.

Here are examples—12,422 sick soldiers in the hospitals of Ontario were visited last year a total of 213,423 visits. It has linked twelve million children in forty-eight countries of the world in a service organization of whom a quarter of a million are in Canada.

IN THE PENITENTIARIES

Report of the Superintendent of Penitentiaries just issued for the year 1930-1931 shows interesting facts. On 1st of the 3714 within the penal institutions of the Dominion are 872 persons who call themselves abstainers, while 2238 designate themselves as temperate and 504 are known as intemperate.

Youth and young manhood naturally fill the cells of the cells in the penitentiaries. Under twenty years are 484, from twenty to thirty come about half of the total number, 1,600, from thirty to forty 845, and from forty to fifty 437, from fifty to sixty 173 and over sixty 68.



Nearly two third are unmarried, 2328 being single, 1240 married, 139 widowed and 7 divorced.

The net expenditure of the seven penitentiaries in Canada, including the preferred class at Portsmouth is $3,084,-458.34. The preferred class pen at Kingston cost $273,963.13 as against $496,-158.20 for Portsmouth.

It cost $1.49 per day per prisoner. '

The total population of the penitentiaries showed an increase of 527 in a year.

General Hughes in his report says, "Many of the young men coming to the various penitentiaries are Canadian born. Their downfall is directly traceable to the lack of proper home training and influence. The percentage to whom this will apply is estimated at about 85. The judge of the juvenile court of Calgary, Alta., stated that 95 per cent of those who came before him did so because of lack of home influence and training. The judge of the juvenile court of the city of Detroit places the percentage of those who come before him because of lack of proper home training and influence at 99."

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERROR

As you say, "She may be empty, but I'll tell the world she's clean!"
But when the sheet is printed and is out upon the mail,
On its way to the subscribers, I have never a doubt
In the centre of the front page, in a most conspicuous place,
Some typographical error fairly kicks you in the face.
For the typographical error is a slippery thing and sly,
You can search till you are dizzy, but it somehow will get by;
Till the forms are off the presses it is strange how still it keeps,
It shrinks down into the corner and—it never stirs or peeps.
That typographical error is too smaH for human eyes,
Till the ink is on the paper, when it grows to mountain size.
And you see that blasted error, far as you could throw a dog,
Looming up in all its splendor, like a light-house in a fog!
That glaring blunder juts out like an ul-
cerated tooth,
Where it dodged the eagle vision of the
Gamaliel committee with truth.
It is sure too late to mind it, but it fills your soul with rage,
As you see it swelling loudly in the middle of the page.
The boss he stares with horror, then he grabs his hair-and-beard,
The copy reader drops his head upon his hands and moans—
The remainder of the issue may be clean as clean can be,
But that typographical error is the only thing they see.
It was down among the six-point till the copy was all read,
When it shifted into blackface or a two-inch banner-head—
Then when the sheet was printed it jumped up and hollered "Boo!"
You never saw me, did you? This is sure a horse on you!"

Gentlemen—I would like you to send me four dresses as per your adv. in Ontario Intelligencer, etc. (then followed a description of the dresses and prices.)

BERNARD SHAW'S BLIND DATE

That's a grand Shaw story. The one relating to his recent trip to Russia. Strolling along the banks of the Volga, he encountered a bashful girl playing in the sand.

He stopped to chat with the child, who immediately took a liking to the bearded sage. They walked along the river for a while, hand in hand, Shaw enjoying the trivialities of which they talked. Finally the little one informed the Shavian body that it was time for her to go home.

"Good-by, my dear," he said, "and when mother asks you where you have been, tell her you have been walking along the Volga with George Bernard Shaw."

The great name was absolutely unknown to the child, but she recognized the courtesy in the words of her strange friend and was not to be outdone. Her pleasant smile and bow acquired a quaint gravity as imitated by the child. She replied:

"And when you go home and they ask you where you have been tell them that you were walking along the Volga with Katerina Ivanovna Fyodorovitch."—New York Morning Telegraph.

HEARD ON THE STREET

(By Jay. De.)

Ask a certain merchant uptown how he liked the idea of the recent balloon ascension which has been taking place in this town of ours and you'll either get a stare as a sewer or an invitation to fight. Ask four or five of them, for that matter, and you'll get about the same answer. For the boys who stand around and blow their money on all these little jokes they like to play on each other, are unanimous on the balloon ascensions to play an odd trick or two on their fellow workers. If a man is new there one after all for the little lads who get the best of him are the ones that they had been tricked, and the notes issued don't even pass—for you can perhaps excuse it on the grounds that the tricksters didn't stop to think about the angle of the matter. It looked like a good joke and they played it.

For the benefit of those who perhaps haven't seen the balloon which times around here, Belleville's Happy Days campaign included the use of hundreds of balloons which originally tossed to the four winds at certain hours each day. Inside these balloons were dollar bills. In others there were coupons which entitled him who secured one or two of the balloons to take part in certain shops and get either cash or articles galore. Hundreds of balloons were used throughout the last three days.

Everything seemed to be going well. The balloons were loaded with dollar bills and vouchers, they were let loose from upstairs windows and the little lads and lassies down below were snapping them up like hot cakes. Then they'd parade into the store which was named on the coupon inside the balloon and get either the dollar bill or whatever the merchant promised. This kept on for some time.

Along the third day, one merchant who conducts a fur store had a little innovation of his own. Tucked in writing, was the statement that if the finder would go right into the store a fur neck piece would be given away. He no sooner showed this to the crowd than explanation like such was not she case, than another balloon came down and then another. It was a busy and tryying time for the fur merchant's merchant. But he was not the only one who was doing explaining on the streets. There were others. There was, for instance, an uptown tobacconist who had a balloon descend in the throng that he was not giving away than even if the note did say so. And there was the barber who was trying to head off applicants for free hair cuts, who promised on the note. These tricksters had made a good job of it. The final straw came when an uptown furniture dealer had a balloon descend in him which claimed to promise a free chesterfield to the holder of the note which was inside the balloon. Naturally there was a scramble. Unfortunately for the people who had secured the balloons and thought that the notes were bona fide, and a number of them were already looking for the smart aleck who did such a thoughtless job, but the boys along the street were wise to the joke. It seems that any opportunity which is presented will be taken advantage of.

Don't use the stove for a hiding place until the weather warms up a little more than has been experienced so far. One man did Saturday night and still mourns the loss. He has been in the habit of getting a little refreshment for himself over the week end finding different hiding places for it around the house. Mr. Micawber, stove, by dint of some days, offered a good one over the week end. After were smoothed over the top of them and he felt secure. It turned cloder, friend wife, and family came home and found he was out, lit a fire in the stove late that night to warm the house up—and then things happened! Store lids popped off and yelled against the ceiling, showers of sparks landed after them; stove doors flew open with a bang and blazing fire-brands snapped onto the floor where they smoked and hissed like dragons; miniature geysers spouted and foamed high into the air, and cage rattled off like a thanksgiving gun. Pans fell off the wall, plates danced on the shelves, the cat took refuge on top of the cabinet and the dog fled to the yard. Responding to an SOS a neighbor rushed in, seized lighter, grabbed a pail of water and went to work. Bodies still spouted at frequent intervals and small patches of fire still blazed, but after the third pail of water he had made a start. A few more minutes work and the worst of it was over. The neighbor came however when hubby came home from down town. Then the fire works did start.

Headlines in a recent paper started: "Office Girls Fired for Drinking." That's what we call a real business, remarks the office wit, wouldn't it be possible to fire them "canned peaches," now that they're fired?

And H. C. comes across with the sad refrain that now, since slack times are upon us, it is quite impossible to get a seat on any of the vehicles that ply for hire. He says as some of them would hurry up and get back to work and he'd be able to sit there and enjoy a good quiet smoke.

LEADERSHIP IN WASHINGTON

A Democratic Senator, Mr. Harrison, calls upon the President to step outside of doors and see what is not balanced. Tax plans have been accumulating over there was a year," he says, "when Mr. Hoover "sought to speak out to his leaders in Congress it is now." But the President has been speaking out to his leaders and appealing to the conservatives, vigorously and consistently since Congress convened five months ago. On the question of the Federal retrenchment and the necessity of balancing the budget he has spoken in no less than twenty-one messages, statements and addresses; four in December, two in January, three in February, four in March and eight last month. Responsibility for the chaos which now exists in Washington rests upon those members of Congress who have blocked the President at every turn and bolted their own party leadership.—New York Times.

DANCING WITH 240 LBS.

Huge Man Lively as a Cricket

WILL HE KEEP HIS WEIGHT?

Ladies, how would you like to dance with a man weighing 240 lbs.? Men, could you dance all night if you carried that load? Well, here's a man who does. And he dances with a sprightliness that everyone marvels at.

But the point that most interests us is: Can he keep such activity and keep his weight too? We will warrant he can. We will forecast that in a few months' time he will be very much lighter, and all fat people will say the same. What they will want to know is where our fat friend found such amazing energy. His letter tells us:—"I am compelled to mail you these few lines to tell you how wonderful Kruschen Salts is—I must term it a real magic medicine. I was suffering from indigestion for years. I could not even take a drop of spirits, and had to forsake the best of meals. Now I can eat and drink anything without that disagreeable heavy burn. Then, it makes me feel so lively. I am weighing 15st. 8lbs., and you should see how light I move in a dance hall. It is a wonderful thing for everyone who sees a man of my size performing all the new steps in such a manner, and never get tired. And next morning I can tackle my work quite fit, thanks to the help of Kruschen."—F. G. M.

This is what Kruschen Salts does: It cleans out the impurities in your blood by keeping the bowels, kidneys and liver in splendid working shape, and fills you with vigor and energy. As a result, instead of planting yourself in an easy chair every free moment you have been feeling miserable, you feel an urge for activity that keeps you moving around doing the things you've always wanted to do and have to do to keep you in good condition. Then, before very long, the fat you don't want, and don't need, starts to go.

Kruschen Salts is obtainable at all Drug Stores at 45c. and 75c. per bottle.

« « « Those who insure their lives help indirectly to bring comfort and happiness to thousands of people, apart from the beneficiaries immediately concerned.

They provide largely the funds for public and private enterprise—railroads, farms, utilities, factories—all those collective activities which mean work and pay rolls.

Life insurance tolerates no idle dollars.

Its very existence depends on the prompt re-investment of every dollar received in premiums, for the benefit of the policyholders. These dollars, like water passing through a power house, turn the mighty turbines of trade—and then, released, flow on to bring happiness to distant valleys.

While in trust with the insurance company, they turn the wheels of industry, and return at last to the policyholder or his beneficiaries, bringing to the aged or bereaved welcome freedom from financial hardship. REYNOLDS IS EARNING KEEP FOR SENATORS

Single Handed Hurler Defeats The Indians 3 to 0

HITTING .420

St. Louis Cards Come Through in 9th With 3 Runs to Win

BY GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

It hasn't taken Carl Reynolds long to convince his new employers, the Washington Senators, that they drove a very brisk bargain when they obtained him from the Chicago White Sox in one of the winter's most discussed deals.

The speedy outfielder, who joined the Senators in a trade involving the two veterans, Sammy Sam Jones and Irving Hadley, is no small item in the estimation of the fact that Walter Johnson's outfit is leading its closest American League rivals by three full games today.

He is hitting at a .430 clip, the highest average in either league. Is second in total hits, notwithstanding a late start, and is as brilliant as ever afield. If he looks like the present pace, he might easily make the difference between the pennant the Senators want and the third place they won last year.

Reynolds' virtually was the whole show offensively as Washington won yesterday's game with Cleveland 3 to 0. He scored the first run of the game in the fifth, when, with two singled, eased his way around to third and went home on an infield out. His home run in the next frame was the only other scoring settled any doubt of the issue.

Lloyd Brown continued his pitch sparkling for the leaders, allowing only four hits and walking three. The victory was Washington's ninth in ten starts.

Three other American league contests gave way to rain and cold, but the Chi-Sox tamers slipped into second place as a result of Cleveland's loss.

National League

The St. Louis Cardinals put on the daylight act in the National League when they scored three times in the last of the ninth to hand the Brooklyn Dodgers their fourth straight defeat, 7 to 6. With one away, the champions jumped on old Jack Quinn, Brooklyn relief hurler, for four hits to turn the tide. Jimmy Collins' single, his third hit, scored Sparky Adams with the deciding counter.

Something else was seen at Cincinnati, where the Reds pushed across a run in the ninth to down the Phillies, 4 to 3, and break up a pitchers' duel between Owen Carroll and Ed. Holley. Wally Gilbert's sharp single brought in his old Brooklyn teammate, Babe Herman, who had doubled. Another ex-Brooklynite, Frank Gumbert, also starred at bat for the Reds with a home run and a triple.

Fritz Knothe's single in the 12th knocked two runs across and the Boston Braves staggered out with a 6 to 5 victory over Pittsburgh, their first in five starts in the series. At that, it took three pitchers to put down a Pirate rally in the last of the 12th. The bases were full of Pirates when Cantwell finally retired the side.

The Giants were rained out at Chicago.

Yesterday's Stars

Jimmy Collins, Cardinals — His third single in the ninth drove in winning run against Dodgers.

Ernie Lombardi, Reds—Clouted a triple and home run against the Phillies.

Fritz Knothe, Braves—His long single in 12th gave in two runs and beat Pirates.

Lloyd Brown, Senators—Held Indians to four hits and blanked them 3-0.

Manager Gerow has called the initial practice of the season for Wednesday evening at the Fair Ground. Only prospective pitchers are asked to attend these first few practices as time is the best thing the season is getting late and it is the intentions of Manager Gerow to limber up his twirlers first and then give the "Pirate" plenty of batting practise over the week-end.

On a personal check-up we find that the locals will have access to at least five hurlers this season. Tommy Rolston will lead the troupe with Alex. Webb, Herbie Merrik, Bake or the Toronto Hillcrests, Archie Campbell and Casey, last year Sulphide intermediates. This selection gives Manager Gerow three southpaws and two right handers. Merrik, Campbell and Polster are the left handed artists while Webb and Casey toss them over with the old right mitt.

Captain "Freeney" Mills will again be Manager - Gerow's right hand man and we know of no better baseball lieutenant in the business. Beaford is also named we have a surprise for the fans when we tell them that Chas. "Chuck" Allan, who pitched for the Beaford team for Lindsay a few years ago, is in this neighborhood. "Chuck" was signed by the Beaford for the Lindsay club when Jack Ouellette was in charge but Allan was a hitter of no mean ability. Ouellette never gave him his one of Al Heckman's pitchers, Bill Hall, Jack Stevenson Park, Peterboro, one warm afternoon. The late Hershey followed that and apple fair into the centre of the three before he gave up the chase. When Allan hit 'em they stayed hit.

The Kingston Frontenacs and the Peterborough team have been practising for some few days now and are interested in the lead, of the Nationals, in the Ontario Hockey League, playoff, many new faces will be seen in the Frontenac line-up. What's the summer, we believe.

Have you seen the Belleville baseball "Chatty" window display? It is in the old Intelligencer building for your approval.

Belleville is at present assured of at least three softball leagues. Three in the Belleville and District Ladies' League, the City League, lately formed, and the proposed Senior Men's League now in the making. That there is to be a proposed baseball league again and again we hear of it but never get further than that of a boxing bout every once in a while.

After looking over these various organizations we wonder why they could not play their respective games in the Belleville Arena. With such a fine outfit at the disposal of the players, and an assurity of a gate receipt, they should at once combine on the project and approach the Arena directors as to the possibilities of holding games in the Arena. By playing games in the Arena it would be of mutual benefit to all concerned.

The Arena is an ideal location for her increase and by laying out the softball diamond properly they would have a much larger playing space than they now enjoy on the Armouries lawn. The project is well worth considering and therefore we pass along this idea which was conveyed to us.

Three teams have practically been assured for the formation of a senior softball league for the ever popular fair season. It is hoped that some of the less fanatical fans may see their way clear to sponsor teams in the proposed league.

The Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League schedule is in the making and will be ready for release later in the week. The schedule calls for 24 games in the playing season with the play-off games to follow. Although no definite plans have been brought to light in the matter of a playing site we understand that the league executive are trying to arrange to have their games played on the Armouries lawn again.

One of the high lights of last night's meeting of the league was the lowering of the price of tickets for the baseball games this summer. The fair sex will be admitted for the small sum of two-bits at all C.O.B.L. games in Belleville this season.

Campbellford—With the opening of the fishing season many local anglers have commenced their daily jaunts to the nearby rivers and creeks, and report general good luck, although catches have not included extra large fish. Chas. Nadon reports a good catch of speckled trout, many of which ranged from 10 to 13 inches while the largest catch of F. C. Bonnycastle was a 1¼ pound speckled trout.

He's a MAN in the making!

LADIES GET REAL BREAK

Admission to Ball Games Will Be Cheaper For Fair Sex

Final arrangements were made at last night's baseball executive meeting, for the opening game of the C.O.B.L. on May 24th, when the champion Kingston Frontes open the current baseball season against the Belleville Nationals.

The first piece of business was the reduction in the price of ladies' tickets for 1932. Ladies will be admitted to all league games at half the regular price this season. Season tickets will also be placed before the fans this week and all season ticket holders are to be assured of a reserve seat for all league games. The idea of the introduction of season tickets for 1932 was to get away from the annual subscription list, which has been so in evidence in past years. This year the followers of baseball will be given something in return for their money in the matter of a season's ticket. It was also deemed advisable to exempt all members of the Y's Men's Knot-Hole Gang free of charge. This organization includes all boys under the age of sixteen years. Rain checks are also to be a feature this season and will be furnished by an interested fan grabs.

Games Start at 2.30 p.m.

On account of some of the local industries closing early it was finally decided to commence all C. O. B. L. games in Belleville at 2.30 p.m. instead of 3.15 p.m. as heretofore. Dr. R. A. Flynn was appointed club physician for the year and he later assured the executive that he would be glad to accept the position. Another interested fan has offered to donate the team with printed schedules for the season. Each schedule will be numbered and two tickets will be given, each game, to the holder of the lucky number drawn during the game. These tickets will be good for next league game. The schedules will be given to the citizens in general free of charge, and the winning ticket will be drawn during the process of each game.

Opening Ceremonies Brief.

The opening games ceremonies will be quite short this year when honorary president R. A. Elliott of the O.B.A.A.; president R. E. Colling, of the C.O.B.L., Mayor Tice and president A. B. Collins of the Belleville Nationals will share these honors. The usual flag and pennant raising features will also be added. Mr. Fred Rawson reported that there would be display banners placed on his buses for the coming baseball dance. These banners were supplied by Mr. Fred Smythe, grain. Manager Gerow reported to the meeting that although the diamond was not in the very best of playing condition he was calling a field day's work-out on the season for the club's pitchers, on Wednesday evening at the local grounds.

The various chairmen of the dance committee reported that everything was quite in order for their baseball dance and that only thirty valuable prizes had been donated by the merchants and interested fans. President A. B. Collins donated a $5.00 gold piece to be given at the dance as the special door prize.

Later in the week the entire National roster will be out to practise.

Kingston—It was learned that owing to the present conditions masons and carpenters in Kingston have been asked to take a reduction. The bosses will meet the masons at a conference to be held at the Chamber of Commerce and a conference will be held with the carpenters on Monday evening next.

ROYALS HOLD SECOND PLACE BY LONESOME

Put on Longest Winning Streak of Year Which Has Run 10 Games

GOOD PITCHING

Buffalo Defeats League Leaders By Two Home Runs

(By the Associated Press)
The longest winning streak of the young International League season had carried the Montreal Royals into undisputed possession of second place today.

With their pitching staff operating like clockwork, the Royals bowled over Jersey City yesterday for their tenth victory in succession.

With second place definitely gained, the Royals can now start in pursuit of the league leading Newark Bears, who are only two games distant.

Hard, timely hitting and excellent pitching from the entire mound staff have been the chief contributing factors in the Royals' ascent to the top. In their last ten games, they have hit for 68 runs, while holding the opposition to 22. In seven instances Montreal's starting pitcher also has been around at the finish. Gowell Claset, with three victories, Walter Brown and John Pomorski with two each, have been the big winners over the 10-game spell-ar winning streak.

Brown Went Route

Brown was on the mound yesterday and travelled the route, although he was tottering around a bit in the seventh, when Clancy clouted a homer with two on and one out. Skeeters within one run of a tie. In the last half of the same inning Shiver drove the ball out of the ice to give the Royals five runs in the lead and a ninth inning Jersey City rally for one run fell just short. The Royals have gone up to the bat box in less than three innings. Irvin retreated in the midst of a four run splurge in the third. Fallenstein, his relief, was very effective the rest of the way.

Home runs by Petree and Crouse furnished Buffalo with its winning margin over Newark, 2-1, Slim Brewer gave the home nine what was accorded sensational support. Buffalo collected eleven hits off Holaday and Milner. The victory sent Buffalo into a tie with Baltimore for third place.

The other two games were postponed on account of adverse weather conditions.

CHAMP BOWLER IS VERN WEIR

Pin Topplers of Y's Men Enjoy Evening on Alleys

Vern Weir was acclaimed champion bowler of the Y's Men's Club at their annual bowling contest held at the Y.M.C.A. bowling alleys last evening.

Following their regular weekly luncheon the members of the local Y's Men's Club adjourned to the bowling alleys to determine the annual bowling champion. Before leaving the banquet table, however, President Mel Blanchard reminded the members of next week's meeting, which is to be a "Hard times meeting." All the members were reminded to wear their oldest clothes possible with a heavy fine being the penalty to those violating this rule. A special "hard times" program is in the making under the direction of Newt Thompson and he assured the meeting, that he had a real treat and surprise in store for them.

On the alleys Vern Weir was recorded club champion bowler for 1932 while other individual scores turned in by Bill McEwan, Alex. Weir, Harry Poste, Johnnie O'Connor, Mel Blanchard and Cec Obertriere very creditable scores and champion Vern had to roll 280 to beat his nearest rival. The occasion was voted a success from every stand and may be duplicated in the near future as all present enjoyed themselves to the utmost.

F. DOMENICO IS PRESIDENT

Softball Loop is Off to Good Start and Fine Season Promised

Frank Domenico was unanimously elected president of the Belleville City Men's Softball League at their annual meeting held last week in the Y.M.C.A.

The city league was organized last season and consists of the K. of C., Kinsmen and Collegiate. Delegates from the four teams were represented at the annual meeting and the election of officers resulted in the following officers being elected for 1932: President, Frank Domenico, Honorary President, Ed. Hagan and Secretary-Treasurer, Gerald Vance. Last season the K. of C. were returned winners of the league after a very successful season of softball had been completed. Although no definite location for the playing of all league games this year has not been decided upon as yet it was definitely decided to adopt the Ontario Softball rules for 1932, however.

Each club will be allowed to sign 15 players, which in turn must be accepted by the league executive. It was decided, finally, that all players must be bonifide members of the club for which they play with the exception of the firemen and all of their players must be employed by the fire department.

The meeting was well attended and the teams were represented. It was moved and passed, that the next meeting for the purpose of passing on players certificates and the adoption of a league schedule be held on the 19th of May and for the evening of May 17th.

Nothing definite was decided upon as to question of umpires but it was the thought of the meeting, that each team should submit the name of at least two competent umpires and they would be called upon to officiate at all games.

Departing Family Is Remembered by Choir

Mr. and Mrs. J. Edgar Redner, and daughter, Winnifred, who left yesterday, for Kingston, where Mr. Redner will be employed with the C.N.R., were remembered by the choir of Bethany Street United Church on Sunday night after the regular service. Mr. and Mrs. Redner since moving to Belleville have taken an active interest in the work of the church especially the choir, while Mrs. Redner was very active in the work of the youngers people of the congregation. Mrs. S. P. Hagerman read a short address to the departing couple and Elwood Mellows, on behalf of the choir, presented the three with luminaries. The address was given by Mrs. Hagerman as follows:

To Mr. and Mrs. J. Edgar Redner and daughter Winnifred:

Having learned you are about to leave our midst we, your choir friends gathered here tonight to offer our appreciation in a small way, your unfaithfulness to service since we have come to know you not forget us and that you may often return to spend a few happy hours with us again. In the choir you have been always ready and willing to lend a hand, when opportunity presented itself and you will be greatly missed by all. We ask you to accept these gifts as a slight indication of our esteem for you all and wish you ever happiness in your new home and all the blessings that Heaven can bestow.

Here's Economy For You!

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

A lady writes me a wonderful letter, in which she tells how to keep the pot boiling well and appetizingly on $20 a week. I wish she would tell a little more into detail, as her methods would help a great many comfort to many a perplexed housewife at the present time.

Her letter reads:

"Dear Miss Fairfax: May I comment on an answer you gave the other day to a boy of 19 who wanted to marry on $25 per week? I think it would take a financial wizard to turn the trick for two on that amount. Well, my husband and I, each 25, have been living on that amount all winter. We were married a year ago. He was working full time then, but nearly all winter he has been working only four days a week.

"Here is the way we manage: We pay $6 a week rent for a 3-room flat, furnishing part of the coal for the furnace. We scoured the city for good second hand furniture which is cheap price attached. It is all paid for.

"I learned how to buy groceries, good wholesome food, and we have plenty of it. Our grocery bill seldom exceeds $3.00 a week, and is usually below that amount. Our monthly bills are the gas, light, insurance and milk. There is also my husband's carfare to work.

"Of course we have to live a quiet life—a show about once a week, attend church, and have some social life through that means, we are happy, and as long as we can get $30 a week, we can manage somehow, especially with the present conditions of labor.

"I just mentioned if there should be children. We have friends, a young couple, with a boy three years two years old, who are also managing on the same amount. They too pay cheap rent. That baby is always clothed neatly and cleanly and is the picture of healthy, beautiful boy.

"Of course, I wouldn't want to live this way always, but it's better than things, and will have them when working conditions improve. But now we are happy, owing no one. And we don't feel like financial wizards, either. Mary B."

My correspondent doesn't say how they manage about clothes, doctor's bills, dentist, what the amount of insurance is, or if there is a sum put by for possible emergencies.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Outdoor Life Stimulates the Spirits

Mister Al Fresco invites you. He yodels out a joyous "come on" to the golf links, to the tennis court, to the long, straight smooth roads where motor cars chase along in endless streams. Al knows what is good for you. Sunlight to put sip and snap in the system. Fresh air to wash out the lungs and make them laugh. If you've never seen an outdoor girl, start now. You've been missing something.

On the troubled spirit, the mind that has a habit of dwelling on worries, outdoor life acts as a soothing ointment. It brings on a luxurious healthy, yawny fatigue which is productive of restful sleep, which is a beautifier. Muscles are gratified for exercise, they need it if they are to retain youthful elasticity, keep resilient and firm. Women who lack tummy flat. No meal bag shape for them, they are immune.

Women who fare forth to bring home the bacon, who spend seven or eight hours a day in shop or office, must provide for themselves certain amount of outdoor life. They can't afford to slip back in appearance. How they look has something to do with this business of holding down a job. They can't carry the hod up and down the ladder every day without feeling the boredom of routine. On Saturday afternoons and on Sundays it's up to them to see to it that they get feeling young again, chucking the cares of work.

From a physiologic standpoint woman needs exercise just as much as man does. She may think she gets it by hustling a vacuum cleaner around and brushing fumers out from under the bed, but she doesn't. Those exercises provide muscle effort, but they are in the nature of drudgery. Exercise must include the spirit of play, if it is to produce an exhilarating effect.

In games there is the zest of competition, and that's why golf and tennis are good for the dear. And who are seeking the radiance of health and calm spirits. Horseback riding is a marvelous exercise, one that slimmers down hip lines, acts favorably upon the lungs and complexion, but its expensive fun. It's possible for the gal who must watch the balance in the check-book and count the dollars in the purse.

Archery is the queen of sports—note how graceful the Dianas appear as they draw their bow strings—and the interest in it is growing. Swimming is ideal, and soon that will be on beauty's schedule of pastimes.

Rowing is fine for slicing down thick thighs and slenderizing arms that have gone off on a fat jag and taken on bulges.

All exercises tend to create good posture, better carriage self-command, steadier nerves, clearer mentalities. If a woman can't do anything more enlivening, she can go out and toss a rubber ball against a wall. Or take a three mile walk in every day.

Don't fail to heed Al Fresco's call. He wants you to come on out and play with him.

HOW TO TRAIN YOUR CHILD

BY Constance Cameron

PARENTS AS INTERPRETERS

One of the most important jobs a parent is forced to assume at one of the least considered by many parents is that of interpreter.

The child wants to know if Betty is a nice girl, why people die, what is a good student, what is the best, whether it is as important as teacher says, to keep fine off of food, etc. And in our answers we often erect pumble-like pedifices, when instead we should be earnestly endeavoring to help the child make his own interpretations.

Yet we go ahead and interpret our own view of the morals of Betty, our own preconceived notions about death, our own opinions as to what constitutes a good student, our personal likes as to desirables and our pet ideas as to the importance of sanitation, giving the child no opportunity to share in reaching any conclusion.

Parents are interpreters to the child of meanings of situations, and so to life's values, and every interpreter falls the grave responsibility of translating into the listener's life his own views. And as we are nearly correctly as he is able, remembering all the while that the purpose of his interpretations is to lead the child to the point where he can understand and construe the proper meanings for himself.

"The truly conscientious parent who has a real and sincere love for his child will at every opportunity allow the child to interpret situations for himself. Only in this way the whole relationship is that it is flattering for us to be asked by anyone young or old, to express our opinion, and to know that the recipient of our views will make them his own.

But you wouldn't expect Sonny ever to master Latin if you translated his lesson for him each night. No more can he master life until he learns to translate his experiences in the light of logic and justice. Don't interpret life for him, if there is the slightest chance of his being able to do it for himself.

SHADE TREES AND BLOOMS

Spring Transformation Under Day as Buds Appear

NEW YORK—The brilliant flowers of the red maple, the modest green and brown of the elm bloom, the abundant catkins of poplars and willows and the beautiful green leaves or scalloped trimming of the slender yellow twigs are advance announcements of a resumption of business for the year by the shade trees. These activities are regulated, as heretofore, by the well-known quartet, temperature, sunshine moisture and nutriment, limited by insects and fungi, it is pointed out in a recent bulletin from Dr. E. Porter Felt, director of the Bartlett Tree Research Laboratories, Stamford, Conn.

The next few weeks will witness a wonderful transformation. The bare limbs of winter will become thickly loaded with beautiful green leaves. For example, a beech tree with a trunk diameter of some eighteen inches will develop some 119,000 leaves. These have free surfaces, upper and lower, of some 340 square yards. These have free surfaces, upper faces of the foliage of such a tree possibly 21,000,000 breathing pores or stomata. These are tiny openings which permit the movement of air and water vapor to and from the numerous microscopic cells composing the leaf itself. These have been compared to factories and are engaged in the elaboration of materials necessary to the make-up of a tree. This large number of leaves with their breathing pores and cell factories run on a twenty-four-hour schedule. They are more active when temperatures are high and illumination intense and so are the least cool of the evening and darkness of night settles over the land.

These leaves are doing more than meeting the growing needs of the tree. The greatly increased evaporation from this large leaf surface produces a very agreeable lowering of the mid-day temperature during mid-summer. The green of the leaves tempers the glare of the mid-day sun acceptably. Compare the light conditions of the early spring with those after the leaves have developed, or the merciless glare of the desert with the gratefully soft illumination of the shaded street or the forested hillside. Trees add greatly to the comfort and pleasure of man. It is easy to see that our millions of trees may and do exercise a profound influence on climate. A conference is headed toward the barren conditions of the desert. Let us conserve trees while we may.

CHATTERTON W.M.S.

The W.M.S. of Chatterton held their May meeting at Mrs. B. Mills with fourteen members and one visitor present.

The programme opened with the hymn "Sweet Hour of Prayer," after which Mrs. Mills led in prayer. Minutes and business followed. Hymn, "Prayer is the Soul's Desire" was sung. Mrs. F. Campbell gave a reading, Mrs. Carle then offered a lovely prayer.

Mrs. Rogers gave a very interesting paper on the life and work of David Livingston, the great missionary which was very much appreciated by all.

The Watch Tower heralds were given by Mrs. Frederick (India) Mrs. Campbell (China) and Mrs. Searles (Temperance). Mrs. J. Frederick then played a beautiful piano solo. The president, Mrs. B. Mills who was the delegate to the Presbyterial gave a splendid report.

All were very pleased to have Mrs. Harry Patterson from Clayton, N.Y., present, and she very, kindly sang a lovely solo.

The last hymn, "Breathe on Me Breath of God," and the Mizpah Benediction closed the meeting.

MINE BOARD MUCH FIRMER

Although Volume Light Listings Were on Firmer Basis

Toronto, May 10—Standard Stock and Mining Exchange listings pursued a firm trend today, although volume was light.

Noranda made a good showing, rising as much as $11.50 a 50-cent gain. Hollinger moved lower, was easier at $6.25. Kirkland Lake gained a cent, but miscellaneous other stocks sold unchanged.

Higher-priced golds were strong. Some and McIntyre gained 50c each, while Teck Hughes added a nickel. Wright Hargreaves moved against the trend prevalent in the group losing about 4 cents. Cheaper golds sold unchanged. Oils were quiet, and unchanged.

LIGHT VOLUME NARROWRANGE

Price Changes Seldom Amounted to More Than ½ Point

Toronto, May 10—In light volume, Toronto Stock Exchange issues drifted within a narrow compass this morning. Price changes seldom amounted to more than 1-2 point, while the majority of issues did not change from their previous finish and held at the close level. What changes did occur were mostly on the downward side, some of the pivotal issues losing part of their recent gains.

Nickel, for instance, was back to 41 again. Ford dipped nearly 1-2 to 1 1-2. Walkers preferred continued to receive support at 98 ½ but the common dipped below 3 after having been steady at the higher figure Monday.

Dominion Stores was some highlier in slow trading. Brazilian and Smelters sold at last night's close. Goodyear Tire preferred at 78 and Canada Wire and Cable "A" at 40 were each off 1 point.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 10—Cattle 460; left overs totalled 350 head. Cattle trade fairly active with prices steady on all grades. Medium to good butchers steld 4.50-5.00, with choice at 5.25.

Calves 1000; good grades were steady up 25 cents. Hogs 710; no hog price was established up to 11 o'clock. Last sales of bidings 4.00 f.o.b. for bacon with salesmen holding for 10 to 15 cents high.

Sheep 150—spring lambs sold at 4.00 to 7.00, with bulk 5.00-10.50 ewe. for choice. Sheep sold from 1.00-3.50 ewt.

N. Y. MARKET QUIET TODAY

U. S. Steel Tonnage Lowest Since Record is Kept

New York, May 10. — The stock market took on a slightly brighter hue today, although it failed to manifest anything in the way of impressive strength as trading remained extremely sluggish.

The list managed to push ahead a point or two after early hesitancy. An upturn in U. S. Government Bonds, less pressure against the dollar in the foreign exchange markets, and a less gloomy report of weekly freight car loadings than anticipated in coal and quarries, more than counterbalanced U. S. Steel's unfavorable tonnage figure. Oils remained a conspicuously firm group. Food shares were somewhat heavy for a time.

Among issues advancing one to two points were Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard Oil of California, Sears, Woolworth, Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Westinghouse and others. General Motors advanced a major fraction to a fairly active trading, and other issues making fractional gains were Standard of N. J., and Southern Pacific. Royal Dutch, unchanged. Many Real and Co. weakened on the dividend omission.

Hepburn is Assailed

"I thought we had found a real Moses in Mitch Hepburn and now Mr. Bennett wants one to lead us to the promised land," I said, 'but I'll be damned if that man is Hepburn." "Come on get on the bandwagon with everybody else I'll lead you somewhere." Hepburn only has to say the word and he'll start hurling challenges that he does not remember.

"If he thinks he can destroy an organization—that I built up and double under one of its leaders he has a think coming to him and then another one to follow. Why, there's a story about him which I do not intend repeating, that he failed in he wants to get down in the muck, I'll get down there with him and I'll make him wish he had tried to destroy me."

"Hepburn would never have been elected but for me and my friends. I didn't tell about the day he sat in my office and begged for a speaker, "and planned his election. Twice during the Conference in the Roman Catholics would not vote for him because he had not the Klux Klan. This man, Hepburn, was writing letters to Ottawa and Nelson Parliament in St. Thomas discussing the very thing he later attempted to destroy. Then he came back at me I'll tell him a few things I think he doesn't think I know."

Hope in Conference

In speaking of the coming Imperial Conference at Ottawa in July, Jaffy next, he said he thought it would mark the turning point in the trade of Canada. He said Canadians would benefit more than any of the other Dominion or colonies. In spite of depression it was trust, ed that the people of this country would put on a smiling face at that time, but the smiles, like the what had occurred recently in Newfoundland and Jamaica, would not take place in Canada and that the representatives returning to their home countries would carry the news that Canada was facing gallantly her trials and difficulties.

At the conclusion of Mr. Hotherall's address the singing of the National Anthem terminated the meeting.

Illustrated Lecture Thoroughly Enjoyed

"Palestine and its People Today," was the subject of an illustrated lecture delivered by Mr. Grafton of the Belleville Collegiate staff to the members of the Holloway Street Church Young People's Society last evening.

Mr. Grafton related very thoroughly the conditions of the Holy Land today in comparison with Bible days. The lecture was highly appreciated by all who had the privilege of hearing it and its interesting and educational message was enjoyed upon by all.

A large representation of the young people were present when Mr. Howard Purchase opened the meeting with devotions during which was followed by the opening greetings led by Miss Katie Anderson, president of the organization. The Holloway Street Church Orchestra was present and their very fine efforts were much appreciated by the members.

Following the illustrated lecture games of recreation were enjoyed under the direction of Miss Anderson. A dainty lunch was later served by the young lady members of the club and the evening's entertainment closed with the singing of "Blest be the Tie that Binds."

$200,000 Bond Purchase Used Outside Province Former Power Head Says

Statement That Ex-Premier "Stuck Him" For $325,000 Invented

AIRD NOT CALLED

Got "Impression" Recipient of $125,000 Was Acting For Party

Toronto, May 10—Any statement by any person that Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, former Ontario Premier, "held up" the Beauharnois Power Corporation for $325,000 was "falsehood", malicious and intentional falsehood," Robert Oliver Sweezey, former president of Beauharnois, sadly declared yesterday.

Although he had purchased approximately $200,000 worth of Victory bonds in Montreal, from the Dominion Securities Company, similar to the $125,000 received by John Aird Jr., there was no relation between the two purchases, Sweezey stated. Both purchases were for "political purposes." The $300,000, however, he had "no benefit for the Conservative party in Ontario."

Because he had understood that Aird was a "properly qualified person" to receive funds for the Ontario Conservative party, the $125,000 in bonds had been given him, Sweezey told Hon. Mr. Justice Orde at the resumption of the Hydro probe. After giving the bonds to Aird, he had no knowledge of what became of them, Aird had not rendered any technical or other service to Beauharnois.

When A. G. Slaight, K.C., counsel for Hydro critics, suggested that Beauharnois had purchased $200,000 worth of bonds from Dominion Securities Corporation, whose head office is in Toronto and that Sweezey had told two persons that former Premier Ferguson had "stuck him for $325,000"—the total of the two bond purchases by Beauharnois—Sweezey flatly denied it, and denied also that more than the $125,000 had been paid to Aird under the belief that it was for the Conservative party.

He flatly denied that he had ever told any person named George Kurdyck or George Hyde that he had been forced to pay Ferguson $325,000. He knew both the men named by Mr. Slaight and had had dealings with them. But such statements, he declared were "purely imaginary conversations." He added that he knew "why" these conversations with him had been "invented."

Sweezey and Hugh R. Griffith, former secretary and treasurer of Beauharnois, and Loring Christie, present secretary, were the only witnesses to appear during the first day of the resumption of the probe. Sweezey and Griffith had underlined John Aird, Jr., to be a representative of the Conservative party in Ontario when he approached Sweezey and sought $250,000 which he later "allé dowh" to $125,000.

At the time of Aird's approach knowledge of the Hydro-Beauharnois deal transaction, Sweezey had accepted Aird as the "right" man, for days after the contract had been signed in Toronto, Aird was handed the $125,000 worth of bonds by the Beauharnois office in Montreal. Nothing had been said as to who would eventually receive them.

Throughout the transaction, however, any knowledge of Aird had been based upon "impression" rather than statements.

Aird had never named the political party which he represented, although it had been understood that it was the "party in power." No one else had approached Sweezey for the party. He had met Premier Ferguson twice, once for five minutes in the premiers office and once at Montreal with Premier L. A. Taschereau. On neither occasion had the Hydro contract been discussed. Ferguson during each had made it plain the first time that it "was Hydro business."

Following the noonday adjournment, Mr. Sweezey took the witness stand for examination by Arthur Slaight. Mr. Slaight opened fire with a lengthy and somewhat involved query.

"In connection with the discussions you had with Mr. Aird and subsequently with your associates, including Mr. Griffith," he inquired, "and your reflection as to why might be the fortunate beneficiary through part, of the bonds bought for the Conservative party in Ontario, did you have any conversation bearing on the distribution of bonds?"
